Mr. Hutton: A Special Grant Report (No. 44) giving details of the allocation for 1999–2000 was approved by Parliament on 20 April 1999. Copies are available in the Library. The allocations to individual local authorities of the funding of £50 million for 2000–01 and £70 million for 2001–02 will be determined according to a formula, using the most recent data available at the time the grants are calculated. It is therefore not possible to confirm detailed final allocations for future years at this stage. Allocations for subsequent years will also be subject to Parliamentary approval at the relevant time.

Medicines Control Agency

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will establish an independent panel to inform the deliberations of the Medicines Control Agency under the procedures set out in the consultation document MLX 249; and if he will make a statement. [82046]

Ms Jowell: How the review panel is constituted, and its terms of reference, form an important part of the proposals. We will consider carefully all responses on this and other issues before deciding whether and what legislation should be brought before Parliament.

Oesophageal Cancer

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will report the current progress of the clinical trials regarding the treatment of oesophageal cancer relating to chemotherapy (OEO2). [81750]

Mr. Battle: I have been asked to reply.

The clinical trial on pre-operative chemotherapy for oesophageal cancer conducted by the Medical Research Council closed to new patients in June 1998. The trial recruited 800 patients across a large number of centres.

The data from the trial are currently being analysed and validated. It is anticipated that the research results will be published next year.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Visas (China)

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many visa applications from Chinese nationals for one-year study courses were made in each year since 1989; and what were the numbers (a) approved, (b) rejected and (c) subject to appeal in each year. [80784]

Mr. Fatchett: The figures requested are not collected by my Department and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Libya (Trade Mission)

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he intends to open a trade mission in Libya; and if he will make a statement. [80808]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 16 April 1999]: We offer limited trade services to UK companies. But the resumption of more normal relations with Libya, including the expansion of our presence in Tripoli, depends in the first instance on satisfactory co-operation from Libya over the WPC Fletcher case.

Professional Statisticians

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff by grade are employed as professional statisticians in his Department; how many of these staff have been accepted as fast stream by the Civil Service Selection Board; and how many have been granted chartered statistician status by the Royal Statistical Society. [81203]

Mr. Fatchett: There is one Home Civil Service Grade 7 statistician in the FCO. The person concerned joined the Civil Service as a fast stream entrant. Although not having chartered statistician status, the statistician is a Fellow of the Royal Statistical Society and has an MSc in Statistics.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff who have worked as professional statisticians in his Department have left on early retirement in each of the past 10 years. [81183]

Mr. Fatchett: One statistician left the FCO in 1997 on early retirement.

Police Training

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the countries (a) from which police officers have visited the UK and (b) have been visited by UK military or police personnel to receive training under the assistance for in-service training scheme since 1 April 1998. [81376]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The countries from which police officers have visited the United Kingdom to receive training under the Assistance to Support Stability with In-Service Training (ASSIST) scheme since 1 April 1998 are: Argentine, Bahamas, Bangladesh, Belize, Bermuda, Chile, Cyprus, Fiji, Ghana, Gibraltar, Hong Kong, India, Indonesia, Jamaica, Lebanon, Lesotho, Malawi, Mauritius, Mozambique, Pakistan, Papua New Guinea, St. Lucia, Singapore, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Swaziland, Tanzania, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Turks and Caicos Islands, Uganda, Vanuatu, Zambia and Zimbabwe.

The countries whose police officers have been visited by UK military or police personnel to receive training under ASSIST since 1 April 1998 are: Brazil, China, El Salvador, Fiji, Kenya, Philippines, Turkey and Zimbabwe.

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the countries from which police officers (a) have visited the United Kingdom and (b) have been visited by United Kingdom military or police personnel to receive training under the United Kingdom military training assistance scheme in the financial year 1997–98. [81377]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The countries from which police officers have visited the United Kingdom to receive training under the United Kingdom Military Training Assistance Scheme (UKMTAS) in the financial year 1997–98 are: Anguilla, Antigua, Bahamas, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Botswana, Bulgaria, Chile, China, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cyprus, Estonia, Fiji, Gibraltar, Grenada, Hungary, India, Jamaica, Kenya, Lebanon, Lesotho, Malaysia, Malta, Mauritius, Montserrat, Mozambique, Namibia, Pakistan, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, St. Christopher and Nevis, St. Vincent, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Tanzania, Trinidad and Tobago, Turks and Caicos Islands, Uganda, Vanuatu, Virgin Islands, Zambia and Zimbabwe.

The countries from which police officers have been visited by United Kingdom police or military personnel to receive training under UKMTAS in financial year 1997–98 are: Bosnia, Czech Republic, Fiji and Mongolia.

East Timor

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will meet his counterpart in the Government of the Commonwealth of Australia to discuss the situation in East Timor. [81709]

Mr. Fatchett: We are in regular contact with the Australian government about East Timor. I will be doing so again following my visit to Indonesia and East Timor this week.

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement concerning reports of a massacre of Timorese people by armed civilians on 16 and 17 April. [81710]

Mr. Fatchett: We are appalled at the recent killings in East Timor. We have called on the Indonesian government to rein in the militias. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister sent a strong message to President Habibie on 19 April. The violence must not be allowed to derail the UN process at this crucial time.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has made to the Indonesian Government following the recent killing of people in East Timor by soldiers of the Indonesian Government. [81896]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 23 April 1999]: We are appalled at the recent killings in East Timor. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister sent a strong message to President Habibie on 19 April.

Kosovo

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the (a) nature, (b) length, (c) location, (d) means and (e) time of his communication with Hashim Thaqi of the Kosovo Liberation Army urging restraint. [81653]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: In a letter addressed to Mr. Thaqi, jointly signed by the French Foreign Minister and my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary on the adjournment of the talks on Kosovo at the Kleber Centre in Paris on 19 March, they emphasised the importance of the Kosovo Albanian side avoiding provocations and respecting the commitment they had made to a peaceful solution. The letter was delivered to the Kosovo Albanian delegation in Paris on 19 March. We believe that Mr. Thaqi has indeed shown commendable restraint, despite the worsening situation in Kosovo.

French Fishing Vessel (Guernsey)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the state of relations with the French Government over the Guernsey court case involving the French vessel La Confiance 2; what representations he has received; and what is his policy on the jurisdiction over the waters concerned. [81652]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Master of La Confiance 2 was arrested on 26 August last year on suspicion of fishing illegally within Guernsey's fishing limits. He was convicted on 7 April by a Guernsey court. Our Ambassador in Paris discussed the case with the French authorities on 19 April. Sir M. Jay made clear that we considered the arrest had been made in accordance with UK and international law.

Visitor Visas

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list, for each British post abroad which operates a pre-sift system for people applying for visit visas, how many people (a) were advised to withdraw their applications and (b) followed that advice, in (i) 1998 and (ii) 1999 to the latest convenient date. [81688]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: During 1998, a total of 44,031 applicants withdrew their application at the Preliminary Assessment Stage. 52 posts operated a pre-sift system in 1998. They were as follows:

Post	Applications withdrawn
Abuja	1,862
Accra	1,038
Abu Dhabi	28
Addis Ababa	1,179
Amman	1,507
Amsterdam	790
Ankara	4
Bahrain	7
Baku	13
Bangkok	66

Sarajevo	8
Stockholm	47
Tashkent	2
Tehran	1,639
Tunis	245
Washington	111
Wellington	140

The number of applicants who choose not to withdraw their application is not separately recorded.

Figures for 1999 will not be available until posts complete their 1999 Annual Statistical Return early in the year 2000. These figures are not collected monthly.

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what factors underlie the decisions on which posts abroad operate a pre-sift system in dealing with applications for visit visas. [81689]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The decision to introduce a "sift" at any post can be taken only with the agreement of Migration and Visa Division. The factors taken into account will include overall numbers of applicants and the time each has to wait. Where a post experiences a large number of inadequately documented applications or visit visa applicants who have no connection with the UK or who are unclear about what they intend to do there, a "sift" may be introduced. The benefits of the "sift" procedure are that it prevents unnecessary work for the Entry Clearance Officer (ECO) and saves time, money and the disappointment of a refusal for the applicant. In addition, it shortens the waiting time for the well-prepared and well-supported applicant.

Any decision not to proceed is the applicant's. If he/she wishes to pursue the application it will be accepted on payment of the appropriate fee.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Governments of Uruguay and Brazil about their decision to withdraw diversion rights for RAF Tristars flying to the Falkland Islands; and if he will make a statement. [81869]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: There has been no withdrawal of diversion rights by the Governments of Uruguay or Brazil for RAF Tristars flying to the Falkland Islands.

Pakistan

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Pakistan concerning reports of infringement of the rights of workers and trade unionists. [81857]

Mr. Fatchett: We have noted the concerns expressed by the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions about the position of trade unions in Pakistan. In association with international labour organisations, we will continue to monitor carefully the rights of workers and trade unionists in Pakistan.

Missile Tests (India and Pakistan)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Governments of India and Pakistan following the missile tests on 11 and 14 April; what progress he has made in persuading both Governments to sign up to the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty; and if he will make a statement. [81855]

Mr. Fatchett: We have expressed regret that India and Pakistan have chosen to conduct missile tests and continue to believe that restraint in developing nuclear weapons and delivery systems is in both countries' long-term interests. We welcome positive indications by both India and Pakistan that they will sign the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty in time to allow entry into force by September this year.

International War Crimes Tribunal

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his policy on the public release of intelligence reports on atrocities committed by foreign Governments; and if information provided to the International War Crimes Tribunal in the Hague will be released to Parliament. [81942]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: It is not the Government's practice to publish intelligence material. Given the exceptional circumstances in Kosovo, the decision was made to release classified information to the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia, in order to assist the investigation. It would not be appropriate to make this classified information more widely available.

Iraq

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on political and diplomatic developments in relation to Iraq since 24 March. [82029]

Mr. Fatchett: Three panels established by the Security Council issued their reports on 30 March. We have now tabled a draft Security Council resolution, with the Netherlands as co-sponsors, which attempts to translate the work of the panels into action.

On disarmament, it would establish a new body, the UN Commission on Investigation, Inspection and Monitoring, to continue UNSCOM's efforts to answer outstanding disarmament questions, primarily through a reinforced monitoring and verification system as recommended by the panel. On the humanitarian side, our resolution draws together a range of measures which should make significant improvements to the humanitarian situation in Iraq, while remaining faithful to the Council's obligation to uphold its resolutions. Finally, the draft picks up the panel's recommendations on dealing with Iraq's continued failure to meet its obligations over Kuwaitis and others missing since 1991. Discussion of our draft continues in New York.

Gibraltar

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy that opt-in proposals by Her Majesty's Government into parts of the Schengen Agreement will only be made on the basis that Gibraltar will also have the same opportunity. [82036]

Ms Quin: At this stage, details of which aspects of the Schengen Agreement Gibraltar would wish to participate in are still under discussion with the Government of Gibraltar.

Chagos Islands

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reasons the White Paper on Overseas Territories did not propose the granting of full British passports to those Chagossiens who had British citizenship before being resettled. [82035]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: British citizenship did not come into being until 1 January 1983. The Ilois (who were at that time citizens of the United Kingdom and Colonies) left the Territory 30 years ago. We have to deal with the situation now; the vast majority of the Ilois are citizens of other sovereign states, (either Mauritius or the Seychelles), in addition to holding British Dependent Territory citizenship, and have been for a generation. This is in contrast to other British Dependent Territories citizens who are solely British.

Serbia

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice he has received about the basis in international law for the military action by the United Kingdom and its NATO allies against Serbia. [82068]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The action being taken is an exceptional measure to halt an overwhelming humanitarian catastrophe.

Every means short of force was tried to avert this situation. In these circumstances, and as an exceptional measure on grounds of overwhelming humanitarian necessity, military intervention is legally justifiable under international law.

China and Tibet

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he discussed with the Secretary of State of the United States of America United Kingdom support for the USA's draft resolution on China and Tibet at the 55 United Nations Commission on Human Rights. [82182]

Mr. Fatchett: We remain in close contact with our main partners, including the United States, in furthering the common objective of achieving concrete improvements in the human rights situation in China. Along with our European Union partners, we voted against a Chinese no-action motion at the UNCHR on 23 April which sought to prevent a vote on the US-tabled resolution.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what grounds the United Kingdom decided at the General Affairs Council of the European Union not to co-sponsor a joint resolution with its partners on Chinese suppression of human rights in Tibet for the 55 United Nations Commission on Human Rights. [82181]

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) for what reasons he did not table or co-sponsor during the recent General Affairs Council of the European Union a resolution on human rights in China for the 55 UN Commission for Human Rights; and if he will make a statement; [82147]

(2) if he intends to support the draft resolution on China and Tibet tabled by the United States at the 55 UNCHR; [82146]

Mr. Fatchett: We believe, as do our European Union partners, that continued dialogue and co-operation with China on human rights is more likely to bring about concrete improvement than repeated UN resolutions, all of which have failed to be adopted in the past. This dialogue-based approach has made limited progress in some areas and we will be pressing China for further concrete steps. The General Affairs Council therefore decided on 22 March not to table or co-sponsor a resolution on China at this year's Commission on Human Rights.

Royal Turks and Caicos Islands Police

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the (a) date of advertisement, (b) closing date of applications, (c) the names of (i) short-listed and (ii) all other candidates, (d) the interview date of candidates and (e) the date of appointment for the post of the Deputy Commissioner of the Royal Turks and Caicos Islands Police. [81852]

Mr. Foulkes: I have been asked to reply.

The post was advertised in the Police Review on Friday 6 November 1998. The closing date for applications was Friday 4 December 1998. As regards the names of candidates, all applications to the Department for International Development (DFID) are treated in confidence and therefore we should not disclose these details. Of the 17 people who responded to the advertisement, only 4 formally applied for the appointment. Three of these 4 applicants were short-listed for interview. Candidates for this and another police post in the Turks and Caicos Islands were interviewed on Monday 18 and Tuesday 19 January. Robert Turnbull was interviewed on Tuesday 19 January. Mr. Turnbull was informed that he had been selected for the position on 3 February 1999, and his contract with DFID commenced on 20 March 1999.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many times Ministers in her Department have held meetings with members and officials in the US Administration since 1 June 1998, indicating the dates and locations of each meeting, the Ministers involved at each meeting and the US Department involved in each meeting. [80868]

Marjorie Mowlam: NIO Ministers meet members of the US Administration, up to and including President Clinton, both in the United States and in the United Kingdom on a regular basis to discuss a wide range of issues.

Since 1 June 1998, my Ministerial colleagues and I have had the following formal meetings:

Hospitals (Long-stay Patients)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is for each Trust in Northern Ireland the number of beds in each of their hospitals dedicated as long-stay for elderly people; and how many this represents per 100,000 population in (a) each Trust area and (b) the area served by each hospital. [80873]

Mr. McFall: Beds are not designated specifically as long stay in Northern Ireland. However, Table 1 shows the number of long-stay patients in the geriatric medicine speciality who were resident in acute hospitals in Northern Ireland on 31 March 1998. Table 2 shows the number of long-stay patients aged 65 or over resident in mental illness and learning disability hospitals in Northern Ireland on 17 February 1998. Long-stay patients are classified as those with a length of stay in hospital of at least one year.

Northern Ireland Housing Executive

Mr. Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what role she plans for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive following the transfer of responsibility for social housing to the Northern Ireland Assembly; and if she will make a statement. [81212]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Following the transfer of responsibility for social housing to the Northern Ireland Assembly, it will be for the Assembly to decide on future housing policies and legislation, and on the structures and roles required to deliver them.

Peace and Reconciliation Funding

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been paid in grants from peace and reconciliation funding by district partnerships to (a) victims groups, by district council area and (b) prisoners groups, by district council area. [81256]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 19 April 1999]: The information requested has been placed in the Library of the House.

HIV

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the anonymised programme of HIV surveillance in Northern Ireland, setting out for each survey currently in operation or planned (a) the location, (b) the targeted populations, (c) the clinical reasons for initial collection of specimens, (d) the number of specimen collection venues, (e) the annual specimen numbers, (f) the most recent prevalence data, (g) whether the consent of those tested was sought for entry into the survey and (h) whether those tested were informed that they were to be entered into the survey. [81615]

Mr. McFall:

(a) and (d) The anonymised programme of HIV surveillance in Northern Ireland is carried out exclusively at the Genito-urinary Medicine Clinic, Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast.

(b) The targeted population is all new attendees at the clinic.

(c) Genito-urinary clinic attendees have a syphilis serology test or presenting with a new sexually transmitted disease for the first time in a calender quarter are eligible for entry into the survey.

(c) and (f) The data requested are set out in the table.

(g) and (h) The programme of unlinked anonymous testing for HIV as introduced in the UK in accordance with World Health Organisation guidelines for its global programme on AIDS on the basis that specific informed consent is not required. However, attendees are given an explanatory leaflet which makes it clear that all identification will be removed from the sample and they can elect not to have their sample tested. Posters explaining the position are also displayed in the clinic.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Genetically Modified Foods

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much has been spent by the Government on researching genetically modified foods in each of the last 10 years; and if he will list the projects undertaken. [81923]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 23 April 1999]: The Government have spent the amounts listed in the table in each of the last 10 years on research to underpin the safety assessment of genetically modified foods.

1996–97	569
1997–98	709
1998–99	814

The project titles are as follows.

Tagging genetically engineered organisms.

Development of new methods for safety evaluation of transgenic crops.

Honey from genetically modified plants: integrity of pollen DNA, and expression of promoters in floral organs.

Genetically modified organisms in food-evaluation of in vitro and in vivo models for assessing DNA transfer in gut.

Detection of genetically modified organisms in foods.

A model system for the quantitative analysis of horizontal spread of DNA from genetically engineered microorganisms GIT.

Potential for gene transfer between manipulated bacteria and the resident microflora of the human gut.

Regulation and targeting of transgene expression in fruit crops.

Causes of instability in transgenic plants.

Safety of recombinant DNA technology: gene location, marker elimination and secondary effect.

A database of novel foods and food products cleared in countries other than the UK.

Genes that have been introduced by genetic modification into crop plants intended for food use.

The effect of agriculturally-relevant environmental factors on the expression and stability of genes affecting wheat lip.

Survival of DNA in the gut and the potential for genetic transformation of resident bacteria.

Evaluating the risks associated with using GMOs in human foods.

Impact of transformation methods, construct and gene cassette architecture on the stability and expression of transgenes.

Assessment of the risks of transferring antibiotic resistance—determinants from transgenic plants to micro-organisms.

Dissemination of GM DNA and antibiotic resistance genes via rumen microorganisms.

Risk of gene transfer from genetically modified crop plants to gut bacteria.

Causes and consequences of pathogen induced transgene instability.

Analytical methods for the detection of genetically modified foods—current and future developments.

Implications of secondary metabolites produced in response to biotic and abiotic stress by GM potatoes.

Survey of analytical techniques available and under development for long term monitoring of FS of GMOs and their products.

Gene expression in anthers and nectaries of transgenic plants.

The stability of expression and inheritance of transgenes in brassica.

Development of methods to predict the allergenic potential of genetically modified foods.

Development an in vitro screening method for allergens in novel foods.

Adverse reactions to food.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department has made of the safety of imported genetically modified ingredients reportedly used in the production of (a) pot noodles and (b) other food products on sale in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [72001]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 22 February 1999]: The safety of all GM food ingredients permitted for use in foods on sale in the UK has been thoroughly assessed by the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes and judged to be as safe as those from their non GM equivalents.

Novel Foods

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he takes to ensure that novel foods for which patents are granted cannot then be classified as substantially equivalent, and vice versa. [72569]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 22 February 1999]: Substantial equivalence is a concept related to the safety assessment of novel foods and has no link to the patenting of such foods.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he received the first draft of the Novel Foods Directive from the Commission of the European Community; what response he made and what interests he consulted; when signed explanatory memoranda were placed in the Vote Office; and what plans he has to make representations to the Commission of the European Union concerning the terms of the Directive. [72205]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 22 February 1999]: I assume my hon. Friend is referring to the EC Novel Foods and Novel Food Ingredients Regulation 258/97 adopted on 27 January 1997. The proposed regulation was received, negotiated and adopted by the previous Administration and I have no access to the related papers. The regulation is due for review in 2002.

Milk Purchasers

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the 1998–99 figures for milk purchasers notified by the Intervention Board. [81965]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 23 April 1999]: The Intervention Board published provisional milk purchase figures for 1998–99 in its Notice to Traders No. MQ 12/98 dated 9 April 1999. Provisional cumulative butterfat-adjusted purchases totalled 13,951.6 million litres. This figure is subject to verification and subsequent confirmation.

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received about overstated milk purchasers notified to the Intervention Board for 1998–99. [81966]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 23 April 1999]: The Intervention Board has received a number of representations from producers and their representatives about milk production statistics and is in discussion with the industry through the Milk Quotas Experts Group. The Intervention Board relies on over 100 milk purchasers to supply production figures. As has been explained to the industry, these figures are provisional and subject to confirmation. They are not a proxy for the calculation of the 1998–99 milk levy which will be based on annual returns to be submitted by purchasers.

Pig Farmers

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress is being made with efforts to support British pig farmers; and if he will make a statement. [82205]

Mr. Rooker: The present situation remains serious for pig farmers, with prices still unstable and below the costs of production. Nevertheless, the average all-pigs price has shown a 26 per cent. improvement since its low point in January. European Commission figures indicate that current UK pig prices are 20 per cent. higher than the EU average, and higher than in any member state except Luxembourg. Whether the present gap between UK and EU prices will be sustainable is difficult to judge, but the fact that it exists at all is due, at least in part, to the emphasis on high animal welfare and other standards.

In recent months, the Government have done an enormous amount of work to assist the British pig industry. This includes lobbying the Commission in Brussels to use the existing mechanisms of export refunds and private storage aid to their best effect, encouraging retailers, caterers and public procurement bodies to take account of quality and welfare factors when making their purchases, writing to all MPs and UK MEPs encouraging them to support the pig industry in its endeavours to meet consumer demands, and continuing to invest considerable sums of public money in pig related R&D.

Lindane

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to ban the insecticide Lindane following the EU Advisory Committee on Pesticides meeting on 15 April. [81743]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 23 April 1999]: With my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, for Health, for Scotland and for Wales, I am considering the advice of our Advisory Committee on Pesticides regarding the use of the insecticide Lindane. The Committee considered a draft evaluation, prepared by the Austrian authorities, of the data submitted by the notifying companies in the course of the EU review for the Commission.

Correspondence

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the hon. Member for West Derbyshire can expect a reply to his letter of 12 February, acknowledged on 4 March (ref. 124890), concerning the non-payment of the 1998 sheep farm annual premium scheme and the hill livestock compensatory allowances to Mr. S. Allen of Beech Farm, Taddington, Derbyshire. [81904]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 23 April 1999]: We recently completed our deliberations on the case referred to by the hon. Member and a reply was sent to him on 22 April 1999 by my noble Friend the Parliamentary Secretary.

Rabies

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the countries which are outside the European Union and which are not islands which are currently considered to be free from rabies by the World Health Organisation. [81927]

Mr. Rooker: The World Health Organisation does not publish a list of countries which are considered to be free from rabies. However, the World Survey of Rabies No. 32 for the year 1996 (the latest available), which is published by the World Health Organisation, lists the following countries and territories where no rabies was reported in 1996.

Quarantine Kennels

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps his Department takes to ensure that quarantine kennels meet acceptable standards of animal welfare. [81930]

Mr. Rooker: There are arrangements for MAFF Veterinary Officers to inspect quarantine premises four times a year. The inspections are carried out to check on compliance with the standards set with regard to the physical and disease security of the premises and also to check on compliance with the Voluntary Code of Practice for the Welfare of Dogs and Cats in Quarantine Premises in respect of those premises that have agreed to comply with the Code. Premises which do not comply with this Code can be removed from the published list of premises which do comply. The Animal Health (Amendment) Act 1998 gives Ministers powers to set welfare conditions in quarantine kennels on a statutory basis.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many quarantine kennels have indicated that they will be unable or unwilling to comply with the Animal Health (Amendment) Act 1998; and if he will list them. [81931]

Mr. Rooker: The Animal Health (Amendment) Act 1998 gives Ministers the power to make secondary legislation setting welfare conditions for animals kept in quarantine premises. The Government will hold a full public consultation involving all parties with an interest in the welfare of animals in quarantine, including quarantine kennels. It is at that stage that the position of individual kennels—who will have to comply with the legislation—will become clearer.

Hygiene Inspections

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which is the competent authority to implement Articles 3 and 4 of Council Directive 64/433/EEC. [81720]

Mr. Rooker: In Great Britain, Articles 3 and 4 of Directive 64/433/EEC (as amended) have been implemented by means of the Fresh Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) Regulations 1995 (S.I.1995/539, as amended). At present, these Regulations are enforced in England by the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and in Scotland and Wales by the appropriate Secretary of State. In practical terms, enforcement of the Regulations in GB is carried out by the Meat Hygiene Service (an Executive Agency of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food).

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make a statement on (a) the frequency of veterinary inspections and (b) the exemptions for abattoirs and cutting plants which apply under Article 4(e) of Directive 64/433/EEC with regard to Chapter VIII of Annexe 1; [81719]

(2) what derogations apply to the exemption of small abattoirs and cutting plants from the requirements of Chapter VIII of Annexe 1 of Directive 64/433/EEC; and if he will make a statement. [81721]

Mr. Rooker: Directive 64/433/EEC (as amended) requires all fresh meat intended for sale for human consumption to be produced in licensed premises under the supervision of an Official Veterinary Surgeon. The level and frequency of veterinary supervision is set out in Article 9 of the Directive.

Article 4 of the Directive provides a derogation from certain provisions in the case of certain small (low throughput) abattoirs and cutting plants. However, my Department's lawyers have confirmed that this derogation is in respect only of the structural requirements of the premises concerned and does not extend to the conditions applying to the hygienic operation of the premises or to the level and frequency of veterinary supervision required. Nevertheless, following representations from the industry, we have now asked the European Commission to give a view on the applicability of the specific veterinary supervision requirements to low-throughout premises.

There are no derogations from the requirements of Chapter VIII of Annexe 1 of Directive 64/433/EEC (as amended) in the case of low-throughout abattoirs. The Directive requires all fresh meat intended for sale for human consumption to undergo post-mortem inspection in accordance with Annexe 1, Chapter VIII.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has implemented Annexe 4 Chapter 1 (paragraph 6c) of Directive 96/43. [81722]

Mr. Rooker: Yes. This administrative provision, which provides for a composite invoice to be issued to an individual premises carrying out a number of functions (i.e. slaughtering, cutting or storing), is applied by the Meat Hygiene Service when invoicing plant operators for the costs of hygiene inspections.

Beef Exports

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of progress towards the lifting of the ban on the export of British beef; and if he will make a statement. [82223]

Mr. Rooker: The European Commission inspected our procedures for operating the Date-based Export Scheme from 12 to 16 April. The Commission are now writing a report of their inspection for presentation to the Standing Veterinary Committee (SVC). After the SVC have seen the inspection report, the Commission should set a date from which exports of UK beef produced under the DBES can start.

Farmers (Administration Costs)

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the costs in real terms of administration for farmers in each of the last four years. [82180]

Mr. Rooker: Costs vary, depending upon the number of schemes participated in. The 1996 efficiency scrutiny on simplifying paperwork estimated that a livestock farmer involved with cattle and sheep and participating in a voluntary conservation scheme, possibly therefore with a heavier paperwork requirement than an average farmer, would spend £2,700 of his time dealing with paperwork. Implementation of scrutiny recommendations, where possible, should now be saving the equivalent of £6.5 million of farmers' time each year. Our aim is to keep the paperwork burden to a minimum, consistent with safeguarding public health, funds and the environment.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Pre-schools

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many four year-olds are currently attending (a) maintained nursery schools, (b) nursery classes in maintained primary schools, (c) reception classes, (d) voluntary sector pre-school provision and (e) private sector pre-school provision. [82017]

Ms Hodge: The available information is shown in the following table.

Number of four-year-olds in early years provision in maintained nursery schools, nursery and infant classes in maintained primary schools and the private, voluntary and independent sectors in England, January 1998:

	January 1998
Number of four-year-olds in maintained nursery schools	17,991
Number of four-year-olds in nursery classes in maintained primary schools	129,497
Number of four-year-olds in infant classes[1] in maintained primary schools	350,959
Number of four-year-olds in private and voluntary providers and independent schools	82,599

[1] Includes reception and other classes (i.e. non nursery classes)

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if he will estimate how many pre-schools have closed since May 1997; and if he will set out the basis of the Government's calculation; [82016]

(2) what assessment he has made of the basis for the difference in figures produced by his Department and by the Pre-School Learning Alliance on the number of pre-schools that have closed since May 1997. [82019]

Ms Hodge: The Department's annual survey of day-care facilities in England, using data submitted by local authorities, shows a small fall in the number of registered playgroups at March 1998 compared with a year earlier. Officials have arranged to discuss with the Pre-School Learning Alliance differences between their figures and the latest survey data.

Education (Expenditure)

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much central Government money was spent per capita in 1998 in England on helping schools meet special educational needs. [82211]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Most funding for school education is allocated to local authorities by way of unhypothecated grant. Information on total actual spending by local education authorities and schools in meeting special educational needs is not collected centrally. The 1997 Green Paper "Excellence for all children: meeting special educational needs" estimated that some £2.5 billion per year is spent meeting special educational needs, representing on average some £1,600 per child identified as having such needs.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much central Government money was spent per capita in 1998 in England on grants to (a) voluntary aided schools and (b) voluntary controlled schools. [82208]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Capital grants totalling £138,184,240 were allocated to voluntary-aided schools in the financial year 1998–99. This equates to £132 per pupil in this sector.

Capital grants totalling £18,513,446 were allocated to voluntary-controlled schools in the financial year 1998–99. This equates to £34 per pupil in this sector.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much central Government money was spent per capita in 1998 in England on (i) primary schools, (ii) secondary schools, (iii) further education colleges and (iv) universities. [82210]

Mr. Mudie: Unit costs for primary and secondary pupils and for full-time equivalent students in FE colleges and HE institutions are set out in the DfEE Departmental Report, Cm 4202, published on 24 March 1999, a copy of which was placed in the Library.

The unit costs for primary and secondary pupils in 1997–98 include a provisional central government element of £127 and £35 respectively. Neither the total unit costs nor the central government element include capital spending.

The unit costs for FE and HE students include both recurrent spending and support for capital expenditure. The HE unit costs exclude central Government spending on grants and loans.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much central Government money was spent per capita in 1998 in England on books and stationery in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools. [82209]

Ms Estelle Morris: In the 1998 calendar year, primary schools received three grants for reading books, averaging £1,000 per grant. During the same period, secondary schools received two £1,000 grants for reading books. Schools with less than 100 pupils received £10 per capita for each grant allocation. These grants represent substantial new funding and are in addition to funding made available to schools through the Local Management of Schools (LMS) arrangements.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to ensure that pupils at former grant maintained schools secure the same increases in funding per individual as those in other state schools in (a) Cumbria and (b) England. [82183]

Ms Estelle Morris: Grant-maintained schools have previously enjoyed preferential funding, whereas the Government are committed to fair funding for all schools, continuing the process of phasing out unfair funding which the previous Government began in 1995–96. For 1999–2000, we have guaranteed that grant-maintained schools will be funded at the same level per pupil in cash terms as they were in 1998–99. Many will be funded at a higher level than that, where LEAs pass on the extra resources we have obtained for education directly to their schools, as my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has urged them to do.

Correspondence

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will reply to the letter sent to him by Mr. T. A. Schofield, Bursar to Kirkbie Kendal school, Kendal, Cumbria on 16 April. [82185]

Ms Estelle Morris: The letter from the Bursar of Kirkbie Kendal School has been acknowledged by the Department, which is taking up the points made in the letter with Cumbria Local Education Authority. A full reply will be sent to Mr. Schofield as soon as possible.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools in England and Wales, broken down by local education authority, there are where special educational needs children exceeded (a) 10 per cent., (b) 20 per cent., (c) 30 per cent., (d) 40 per cent., (e) 50 per cent. and (f) 60 per cent. of the total school population in the last year for which figures are available. [81608]

Ms Estelle Morris: The information requested for England is shown in the table.

For information for Wales, I refer my hon. Friend to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

New Deal (Young People)

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of all participants finding subsidised or unsubsidised work through the New Deal for Young People have found employment with (a) public sector employers and (b) private sector employers; and if he will make a statement on the relationship between these figures and Government targets. [79824]

Mr. Andrew Smith: To the end of January 1999, 14,000 clients had entered Subsidised Employment. The split of the jobs was 12 private sector jobs for each public sector job.

A comparable split cannot be provided for the 62,300 unsubsidised job starts as categorisation is available only by standard industrial classification, and then only for ES placings.

We have not set targets for the numbers of young people placed in the public or private sector, but have indicated that we would not expect the proportion moving into public sector jobs to exceed the share of public sector jobs available for the work force as a whole.

School Inspectors

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action he has taken to (a) increase the accountability of Ofsted school inspectors and (b) reduce unnecessary apprehension by teachers about inspections since 1 May 1997. [81651]

Ms Estelle Morris: We have agreed a number of changes with HM Chief Inspector of Schools since 1 May 1997 to improve the quality, consistency and value for money of the school inspection system. Those changes are contributing to increased accountability of school inspectors and should enable teachers to approach inspections with greater confidence. The changes include a reduction in the notice given for inspections from two terms to 6–10 weeks and short inspections for the most effective schools. The changes were widely welcomed in consultation. I have asked the Chief Inspector, Chris Woodhead, to write to my hon. Friend with further details of the changes and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

TREASURY

Company Cars (Mileage)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many company cars travelled (a) more and (b) less than 18,500 miles in the last year for which figures are available. [81266]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 19 April 1999]: Annual mileage data are collected only for drivers whose company cars are available for private use. According to the latest National Travel Survey, there were an estimated 925,000 company car drivers whose total mileage was at least 18,500 miles per annum. This compares to 675,000 company car drivers whose total annual mileage was less than 18,500 miles per annum.

Disabled Persons Tax Credit

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the proposed arrangements for transferring people from disability working allowance to the disabled persons tax credit. [79767]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 19 April 1999]: Recipients of Disability Working Allowance whose awards run out after the introduction of the Disabled Persons Tax Credit will be sent claim packs for the new tax credit in the same way that they would formerly have been sent a claim pack for renewal of their benefit.

Defence Budget

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from the Secretary of State for Defence in respect of an increase in the defence budget. [81659]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 22 April 1999]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence and I are keeping the additional costs of the Kosovo operation under close scrutiny.

Drugs Investigations

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes there have been to numbers of HM Customs and Excise staff at Heathrow Airport since 1 May 1997 involved in investigations relating to drugs or other illegal items. [80986]

Dawn Primarolo: In May 1997, the number of HM Customs and Excise investigators based at Heathrow was 65. Since then, including a number of transfers of staff resulting from the closure of an office in Reading, the number has risen to 99. These staff deal with investigations relating to drugs, other prohibited goods and other customs and VAT frauds.

Fuel Duty (Northern Ireland)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many litres of (i) petrol and (ii) diesel oil duty was paid in each quarter in each of the last three years and the current year up to 31 March, in respect of such fuels sold in Northern Ireland by (a) retailers and (b) wholesalers. [82196]

Ms Hewitt: Figures are shown in the table for total deliveries of petrol and diesel into Northern Ireland. There are no separate figures available for retailers and wholesalers. Figures for the first quarter of 1999 will not be available until towards the end of May.

VAT Registration Threshold

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the real terms percentage increase in the VAT registration threshold since 1 May 1997. [81702]

Dawn Primarolo: The percentage increase in the VAT registration threshold in real terms since 1 May 1997 is 2 per cent.

Public Sector Cash Requirement

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the public sector net cash requirement for (a) 1998–99, (b) 1999–2000, (c) 2000–01, (d) 2001–02, (e) 2002–03 and (f) 2003–04. [81703]

Mr. Milburn: Figures published by the Office for National Statistics on 20 April showed a public sector net cash repayment of £7.4 billion in 1998–99. Forecasts of the public sector net cash requirement were published in table B26 of the Financial Statement and Budget Report.

EU Tobacco Taxes

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list in euros the value of the tax and duty imposed on (a) 100 grammes of rolling tobacco and (b) 200 cigarettes in each EU member state. [81723]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is shown in the table.

It is not possible to provide a single figure for the duty and tax on hand-rolling tobacco because comparable data on the retail selling price, from which the VAT and ad valorem excise duty is calculated, are not available.

Income Tax

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in what circumstances families with children and earnings of less than £235 a week will pay net income tax. [81724]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor announced in his Budget Statement that the minimum income guarantee under the WFTC to every family with children and with full-time earnings would increase to £200 a week. He also said that no such family earning less than £235 a week would pay any net income tax from October 1999.

Family Incomes

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the weekly family disposable income, after tax, national insurance, child benefit and maintenance payments are taken into account of (i) a lone parent with two children under 11 in receipt of maintenance payments of £40 a week, (ii) a lone parent with two children under 11 not in receipt of maintenance payments, (iii) a single-earner married couple with two children under 11 and (iv) a two earner married couple with two children under 11 earning in each case (a) £150 a week and (b) £250 a week and where the incomes of the two-earner couple are split in the ratio 80:20. [81726]

Dawn Primarolo: The available information, which shows weekly disposable (net) income after tax (including Child Benefit and Working Families Tax Credit), National Insurance Contributions and maintenance payments at the specified levels of earnings, is given in the table. The figures are shown for 1999–2000 and take account of all changes announced in the 1998 and 1999 Budgets which come into force in 1999–2000.

From October 1999 the WFTC will provide help with child care costs. The child care tax credit will be worth 70 per cent. of eligible child care costs, subject to maximum child care costs of £100 a week for families with one child and £150 a week for families with two or more children. To ensure that parents with older and disabled children also benefit, the age limits on children for whom parents can claim help with child care costs will be raised to 14, and for disabled children up to age 16.

£ per week

	Gross income	Net income
Lone Parent with 2 children under 11 in receipt of £40 pw maintenance payments	150.00	276.77
	250.00	306.92
Lone Parent with 2 children under 11 not in receipt of maintenance payments	150.00	236.77
	250.00	266.92
Single Earner Married Couple with 2 children under 11	150.00	236.77
	250.00	266.92
Two Earner Married Couple with 2 children under 11 (income split 80:20)	150.00	241.22
	250.00	274.34

Notes:
1. Income tax payments are calculated on the basis that the households receive no tax reliefs other than the standard allowances and have income only from employment. All earners, including wives, are assumed to pay Class 1 national insurance contributions at the contracted-in rate.
2. Child Benefit is treated as negative income tax.
3. WFTC calculations assume no child care costs.
4. Lone parents are assumed to be new claimants after April 1998.

Charrington Case

Mr. Stuart Bell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to announce the findings and recommendations of the inquiry under the chairmanship of Sir Gerald Hosker into the Charrington case; and if he will make a statement. [82148]

Dawn Primarolo: Sir Gerald Hosker is still working on his Inquiry. I will announce the findings as soon as possible after he has presented his report to the Chairman of the Commissioners of HM Customs and Excise.

Debt Relief

Ms Drown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what response his Department has given to the proposal of Jubilee 2000 for a concordat on levels of debt cancellation and how funds released should be spent; and if the Government will discuss this proposal with other creditors to secure agreement for substantial debt cancellation by the end of 1999. [82003]

Ms Hewitt: Departmental officials have attended several discussions of Jubilee 2000's proposals, including a round-table seminar organised by Jubilee 2000 and a HIPC Review Consultation Meeting held by the World Bank. We shall certainly take part in any future discussions with other creditors on these proposals.

Ms Drown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the progress of the Commonwealth debt initiative, set out in his Mauritius speech, indicating which countries have received debt relief and the level of that relief. [82005]

Ms Hewitt: Seven countries have qualified for debt relief packages under the World Bank/IMF's Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) initiative and three countries—Ethiopia, Guinea-Bissau and Mauritania—would be expected to qualify based on preliminary discussions. Uganda and Bolivia have received assistance at completion point, of $347 million and $448 million respectively. Assistance has been committed for Burkina Faso ($115 million), Guyana ($253 million), Cote d'Ivoire ($345 million), Mozambique ($1,442 million), and Mali ($128 million), and is predicted for Guinea-Bissau ($300 million), Ethiopia ($636 million) and Mauritania ($271 million).

Tax and Spending Leaflets

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 21 April 1999, Official Report, column 588, on household leaflets, if he will break down the £1.5 million cost referred to between (a) printing and (b) postage. [82203]

Dawn Primarolo: Printing costs would be approximately £0.5 million. Other costs, including distribution and postage would account for the remainder of the cost.

Red Book

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 21 April 1999, Official Report, column 588, if civil servants reviewed the Red Book to ensure objectivity. [82188]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member back to the reply I gave on 21 April.

Unpaid Taxes

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what response the Government have made to the European Commission's proposal to extend the provisions of Directive 76/308/EEC to allow the recovery between member states of unpaid taxes on income and capital. [81789]

Dawn Primarolo: An Explanatory memorandum on the European Commission's proposal to extend the provisions of Directive 76/308/EEC was laid before Parliament on 24 July 1998. European Council working group meetings, at which the proposal would be discussed, have not yet commenced.

Public Expenditure (Scotland and Wales)

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the additional public expenditure items which the Government have announced for (a) Scotland and (b) Wales since January 1998. [80884]

Mr. Milburn: Public expenditure allocations were made to Scotland and Wales for 1999–2000 to 2001–02 in the Comprehensive Spending Review and published in "Modern Public Services for Britain: Investing in Reform" (Cm 4011), a copy of which is available in the Library.

Further increases to the Departmental Expenditure Limits for Scotland and Wales have been made following successful bids to the Invest to Save Budget (ISB) and the Capital Modernisation Fund (CMF). A breakdown of ISB and CMF awards to Departments can be found in tables 1.8 and 1.9 respectively of Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 1999–2000 (Cm 4201).

Census Returns

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if that part of section 9.21 of the Open Government White Paper of 1993 (Cm 2290) relating to the closure of census returns for England and Wales represents current Government policy. [81791]

Ms Hewitt: The legislation covering the closure of census returns represents current Government policy. Census Returns form 1901 and 1911 are closed to the public for 100 years by virtue of Instrument 12 dated 1966 of the Public Records Act 1958. Censuses from 1921 onwards were taken under the terms of the Census Act 1920 as amended by the Census (Confidentiality) Act 1991 which gives protection to personal census information given by the public.

The Open Government White Paper section 9.21 accurately describes the position with respect to those census returns in the custody of the Public Record Office.

Taxes (Inquiry Notices)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many section 9A Taxes Management Act 1970 inquiry notices relating to 1996–97 dated prior to 31 January were sent to taxpayers on or after 31 January; [80251]

(2) what proportion of section 9A Taxes Management Act 1970 inquiry notices relating to 1996–97 were issued in January. [80252]

Dawn Primarolo: Approximately 20 per cent. of all inquiries into 1996/97 self-assessment tax returns were taken up during January 1999. The Inland Revenue do not record the actual dates on which notices are posted to taxpayers and it is therefore not possible to say whether any notices dated before 31 January 1999 were sent on or after that day. However, notices are normally posted on the date which they bear.

Small Businesses

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of businesses with fewer than 17 employees. [81706]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Nick Gibb, dated 26 April 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on employment.

There are 1.75 million VAT and PAYE based businesses in the UK with less than 17 employees, as at April 1999. It is estimated that there are a further 1.8 million smaller businesses without employees and with low turnovers.

Information is provided from the Inter Departmental Business Register (IDBR), which is administered by the ONS. The register contains details for all businesses in the UK that are traders registered for VAT and/or employers with PAYE schemes.

The ONS annual employment survey is the main source for the number of employees. For businesses that are not selected for this inquiry, employee estimates are obtained through employer PAYE returns. If the business is registered only for VAT, the business will generally have no employees. Such businesses without employees are included in the above counts. Smaller businesses without employees and not registered for VAT are excluded from these counts.

More detailed information on businesses registered for VAT is published annually by the ONS in Size Analysis of UK Businesses (PA1003), most recently for 1998. Broad estimates for all businesses are published by the Department of Trade and Industry, based on the IDBR, in Small and Medium Enterprise (SME) Statistics for the UK, latest version for 1997. Both publications are available in the House of Commons Library.

CABINET OFFICE

Business Regulation (Compliance Costs)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will publish an annual estimate of the total costs of compliance with statutory regulations to (a) all United Kingdom businesses and (b) United Kingdom businesses with fewer than 100 employees. [81645]

Mr. Kilfoyle: No. The Government do not, and do not intend to, publish estimates in the form requested. Individual Regulatory Impact Assessments are already placed in the Libraries of the House.

Costs in isolation are misleading and they should not be aggregated. Regulations bring benefits as well as costs. The Government's approach is designed to ensure that regulations are introduced only where necessary and that they follow the principles of transparency, accountability, targeting, consistency and proportionality.

The approach also includes a specific assessment of the impact on small businesses. In addition, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry recently announced the introduction of the Small Business service to be a strong voice for small business and to provide practical assistance to cut the burdens of compliance.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Professional Statisticians

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff by grade are employed as professional statisticians in his Department; how many of these staff have been accepted as fast stream by the Civil Service Selection Board; and how many have been granted chartered statistician status by the Royal Statistical Society. [81193]

Mr. Byers: Statistical work is undertaken by a range of specialisms such as Research Officers, Social Survey Officers and Economists. Within this Department there are[1]:

3 Senior Civil Servants

4 Grade 6s

25 Grade 7s

13 Assistant Statisticians employed as "professional" Statisticians all of whom have been recruited via CSSB.

In addition our Department employs:

7 Statistical Officers

1 Grade 7 undertaking statistical duties.

These figures do not include staff on loan, secondment, career break or unpaid special leave.

Three of our "professional" Statisticians have been granted Chartered Statistician Status by the Royal Statistical Society.

[1] For the purposes of fair comparison DTI's original grading system has been used in this answer.

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the assisted areas map was submitted to the European Commission; and if he will make a statement. [80589]

Mr. Wills: [holding answer 13 April 1999]: Further to the reply I gave the hon. Member and the hon. Member for Torbay (Mr. Sanders) on 16 April 1999, Official Report, column 367, proposals for the assisted areas map have not yet been sent to the Commission. The Government are considering the proposals they will make. They will submit these as soon as it is ready to do so.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what were the results of his Department's August 1998 consultation exercise on the criteria to be applied in the designation of Objective 2 areas. [81914]

Mr. Wills: As part of the on-going consultation process throughout the Structural Fund negotiations, the Government asked regions and local areas informally, in July 1998, for an indication of their priorities for Objective 2 eligibility. Over fifty local and regional partnership organisations provided information, as well as national bodies and interested Departments.

Two broad conclusions emerged from the responses to the consultation exercise. First, for areas of real need to be targeted, the provisions covering Objective 2 in the Structural Funds regulation must be sufficiently flexible to encompass a wide variety of circumstances. Secondly, there was a degree of similarity in the broad priorities put forward, including employment and labour market measures, the degree of social cohesion, geographical issues, and measures of poverty.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry by what means he plans to achieve a target population in compliance with the four strands within Objective 2. [81918]

Mr. Wills: The UK population for Objective 2 is set by the safety net which maintains two-thirds of the existing Objective 2 and 5b coverage. Within the safety net, the Government will seek to target Objective 2 on the basis of need.

A maximum of 18 per cent. of the European Union's population will be covered by the new Objective 2. The breakdown by strand for Objective 2 of 10 per cent. to industrial areas, 5 per cent. to rural, 2 per cent. to urban and 1 per cent. to fisheries is indicative at EU level, not Member State level.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reasons the consultation paper issued by his Department on 30 March, on the criteria to be applied in the designation of Objective 2 areas, asks the same questions as the consultation exercise in August 1998. [81919]

Mr. Wills: The informal consultation launched in July 1998 was to gain local and regional views to assist the Government in developing their policy for negotiations for Objective 2 funding.

The consultation paper issued on the 30 March seeks views from interested parties on the designation of eligible UK areas under Objective 2. These should include comments on the geographical area; the NUTS level; and the criteria that might be used. This consultation is to assist the Government in determining a list of eligible areas for objective 2 funding post—1999.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will list the areas submitted to the EU Commission at the end of March for consideration as assisted areas; [81917]

(2) what differences there will be between the Assisted Areas map and the Objective 2 map in the UK for 1999 to 2004. [81916]

Mr. Wills: Proposals for the Assisted Areas map have not yet been sent to the Commission. The Government are considering the proposals they will make. They will submit these as soon as it is ready to do so.

A consultation paper on the review of the Structural Funds was issued on 30 March, seeking views from interested parties on the designation of eligible UK areas under Objective 2. The final date for comments is 25 May. Ministers will then have to decide on the proposed areas to be submitted to the Commission. Until this time we are not in a position to say what the final Objective 2 Structural Funds map will be, and therefore what differences there will be between the Assisted Areas and Objective 2 maps.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much debt was owed to the Export Credits Guarantee Department by each individual debtor country on 31 December 1998. [82004]

Mr. Wilson: As at 31 December 1998, the amounts, including arrears, owed to ECGD under Bilateral Debt Agreements stemming from Paris Club reschedulings were:

Thorne Lighting Plants

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) grants and (b) subsidies are available to the two current Thorne Lighting plants, at Hereford and Spennymore; and if he will make a statement. [81563]

Mr. Wills: The main DTI programme for supporting companies is Regional Selective Assistance, under the Industrial Development Act 1982. The plant in Spennymoor is in a Development Area and is eligible to receive such assistance. The Hereford plant is not in an Assisted Area, and is therefore not eligible for support under the Regional Selective Assistance Scheme.

Motor Vehicle Fuel

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the quantity of (a) petrol and (b) diesel fuel used in the UK by all motor vehicles in each of the last 10 years. [82437]

Mr. Battle: The data are given in the table

Total deliveries into consumption in the UK

Telecommunications Council

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish the agenda for the EU Telecommunications Council of 22 April. [79573]

Mr. Wills: The agenda read as follows:

Proposal for a European Parliament and Council Directive on a common framework for electronic signatures: Common Position.

"Year 2000 Computer Problem": Council Resolution.

State of the EU Telecommunications Market: Debate

Commission Communication on Convergence of Telecommunications, Media and Information Technology Sectors, and the Implications for Regulation—Results of Public Consultation and Proposed Actions: Commission presentation and Council Conclusions.

Commission Green Paper on Radio Spectrum Policy: Information from Commission on Public Consultation.

Commission Green Paper on Access to Public Sector Information: Commission presentation.

Globalisation and the Information Society: Information from the Commission.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what factors underlay the setting of a renewable energy target of 10 per cent; [81783]

(2) what is his estimate of the potential contribution of each renewable energy source to meeting a target of 10 per cent. of total energy supply from renewable sources. [81782]

Mr. Battle: The Government published a consultation paper "New and Renewable Energy: Prospects for the 21st Century" on 30 March 1999, which outlines the Government's policy. Key factors underlying that policy include putting the environment at the heart of their decision making. Climate change is recognised as one of the greatest environmental threats facing the world today. Prudent use of natural resources, including renewable energy sources, is one of the Government's objectives. Energy from renewable energy sources is clearly an important element in securing both the diversity and sustainability objectives and has the potential to be supplied on an increasing scale at competitive prices. In line with their Manifesto commitment to "a new and strong drive for new and renewable sources of energy", the Government are working towards a target of renewable energy providing 10 per cent. of UK electricity supplies as soon as possible. They hope to achieve this by 2010. It would require of the order of 3–4 GW (Declared Net Capacity) of new plant in addition to that already contracted to achieve that.

The technologies expected to contribute by 2010 are wastes (municipal, industrial and agricultural), wind (onshore and offshore), hydro, landfill gas and energy crops. The proportions of each will depend upon a number of factors including the extent of technical development and future fuel prices.

Other technologies such as photovoltaics have the potential to make major contributions to world energy needs in the longer term if their development continues and energy companies announce their intention of moving into this market on a significant scale.

Multilateral Agreement on Investment

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made towards negotiating an agreement on investment since the ending of negotiations on the Multilateral Agreement on Investment. [81616]

Mr. Wilson: The UK, and the EU as a whole, have called for investment to be on the agenda of a future round of negotiations in the World Trade Organisation (WTO). Decisions on the content of that agenda will be taken at the WTO ministerial meeting in Seattle later this year. In the meantime, the UK is participating in the analytical work of the WTO Trade and Investment Working Group and the parallel work in the UNCTAD Expert Meetings on International Investment Agreements.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy to ensure that social, environmental and development issues are given high priority in future discussions on developing an international agreement on investment. [81617]

Mr. Wilson: The Government are committed to ensuring that, within any new framework for international investment, full account is taken of social, environmental and development concerns.

World Trade Organisation

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the European Commission document I G 1/98 prepared by DG1 for a meeting of the EU Council's Article 113 Committee, and if he will make a statement. [81627]

Mr. Wilson: I refer my hon. Friend to the response I gave on 23 February 1999, Official Report, column 201, to my hon. Friend the Member for Bury, North (Mr. Chaytor).

Inward Investment

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if a concordat has been agreed between his Department, the Scottish Office, Welsh Office and Northern Ireland Office, concerning inward investment. [81925]

Mr. Wills [holding answer 23 April 1999]: The concordat on financial assistance is one of a number of concordats which will be discussed and concluded between United Kingdom Departments and the devolved Administrations in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland once they are established.

Knitting Machine Mechanics and Technicians

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact on the clothing and textile industry of the proposed closure of the National Training Centre for Knitting Machine Mechanics and Technicians. [81739]

Mr. Battle: I assume that the National Training Centre referred to by my hon. Friend is the knitting facility at the North Warwickshire college in Hinckley, Leicestershire, which I understand has taken the decision to close its textile faculty based on the lack of support from the industry.

News of closure is never welcome, particularly when the industry itself is under such pressure. However, there are many other educational institutions in the region who provide a high level of training in this area. DeMontfort, Derby and Nottingham Trent universities all offer various forms of technical training in knitting and a centre of excellence has been set up in North Nottinghamshire by West Notts College and New College Nottingham. The impact on the industry of the Hinckley closure is therefore likely to be negligible.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum Seekers

6. Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of people likely to seek asylum in Britain over the next 12 months. [80055]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: For a number of reasons, including the situation in Kosovo, it is very difficult to estimate the numbers likely to claim asylum in the next year. The figure could be in the range of 52,000 to 62,000, if we take into account all the potential applicants from countries where there may be upheavals.

13. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of asylum seekers, refused asylum by his Department, who have remained illegally in the United Kingdom over the last five years. [80067]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: At the end of November 1998 the number of failed asylum seekers who had either not appealed against the refusal of asylum or who had exhausted their rights of appeal and who were the subject of port or enforcement action was estimated to be 24,000. This figure does not include applicants whose claims had been refused, but who were not yet subject to enforcement action.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers entered the United Kingdom for each month since January 1998; and of those how many were (a) granted asylum, (b) granted leave to remain and (c) refused the right to remain. [81981]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The available information is given in the table. Decisions on asylum applications may not relate to the same cases within each period.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what admittance criteria are applied to those seeking asylum in the United Kingdom as result of the Kosovo crisis. [82065]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We have agreed with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) that any recommendations for evacuation from the region should be co-ordinated through the office of the UNHCR. They will give priority to medical cases, other vulnerable persons, and the support of family unity, and make recommendations to the Home Office for consideration.

Asylum seekers from Kosovo who arrive in the United Kingdom independently will be admitted pending consideration of their claims in accordance with the 1951 Geneva Convention, in the usual way.

Police Manpower

12. Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met the President of the Association of Chief Police Officers to discuss police manpower [80961]

Kate Hoey: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary meets the President of the Association of Chief Police Officers regularly both at the Home Office and at police events when a range of issues are discussed, including police resources.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers in (a) England and (b) Wales he expects to be in post at the end of the current financial year [80959]

Kate Hoey: The number of police officers in each force is entirely a matter for local determination on the basis of available resources and spending priorities. In 1999–2000, police authority budgets in England and Wales will increase on average by 3.1 per cent. over last year. These increases, along with the 2 per cent. efficiency improvement targets that have been set, should be sufficient to maintain existing levels of service.

Young Offender Institutions

23. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on conditions in young offender institutions in England and Wales. [80974]

Mr. George Howarth: Conditions in young offender institutions in England and Wales vary greatly between, and even within, some establishments. Some are of a high standard while others are in need of considerable improvement. The Government have demonstrated their commitment to improve conditions by, for example, the provision of an additional £51 million over three years for the under-18 estate and its regimes, and through the inclusion of 12 young offender institutions in the welfare-to-work initiative.

Volunteers (Criminal Records)

24. Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the cost to voluntary organisations of obtaining access to criminal records of applicants to work with young people [80975]

Mr. Boateng: We have received representations on this issue from a number of voluntary organisations. We considered very carefully whether there was any way in which free checks could be provided for volunteers. Whilst we acknowledge the very valuable contribution volunteers make, we have concluded that it will not be practicable to provide any free checks from the Criminal Records Bureau for volunteers or for any other groups. We realise that this is unwelcome news, but providing free checks would prove an unsustainable burden on the public purse and may increase demand for certificates from the Bureau to an uncontrollable extent. In addition, we do not consider it would be fair to allow volunteers to have free certificates when there are other equally deserving groups such as school leavers, the unemployed and disabled people. The level of fees for certificates from the Bureau will be kept to the minimum necessary to recoup costs.

Equal Opportunities

26. Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect on equal opportunities and racial equality at work of his proposal to make employers liable for the immigration status of their employees. [80977]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: There have been reports that some employers may be adopting discriminatory practices when seeking to secure a defence under section 8 of the Asylum and Immigration Act 1996. The Government share the concern of the Commission for Racial Equality and others at the substance of the reports, whilst recognising that such action may not be directly attributable to section 8.

Proposals at Clause 13 of the Immigration and Asylum Bill, currently before Parliament, are designed to strengthen the safeguards against possible discriminatory practices. They re-emphasise to employers their statutory duty to avoid racial discrimination in their recruitment practices when seeking to secure the statutory defence.

Scout Movement

27. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the additional costs which will have to be borne by the Scout movement as a result of his proposal to establish and fund a criminal records bureau for England and Wales. [80978]

Mr. Boateng: I have not made an estimate of any additional costs which might accrue to the Scout movement as a result of checks which may be carried out with the Criminal Records Bureau. I understand that the Scout Association has estimated that additional costs of £750,000 per year will accrue to them, but I have no knowledge of the basis on which they have reached this estimate.

Probation Service

28. Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his plans to reform the Probation Service. [80979]

Kate Hoey: Following a public consultation, we have decided to create a new, unified Probation Service for England and Wales, comprising 42 local operational areas that will match the police force area boundaries. The new Service will include the following key elements:

The day-to-day running and management of the service in each area will be, as now, in the hands of chief probation officers, but they will be employed and appointed by the Home Office; and led by a Director;

A local Probation Board will supervise the work of the service in each area within the national framework;

The Chairman of each Board will be appointed and paid by the Home Office, and the appointment of individual members of Boards will be approved by the Home Office;

Chief Probation Officers will be members of these Boards;

The Boards will have a more strategic role and a more diverse composition, and will be more representative of the wider criminal justice system and the wider community;

The Boards will employ, as probation committees do now, the remainder of the probation service staff.

There will be a light regional touch, which the Prison Service is also planning to reflect in its future management structure, enabling that Service to match groups of police force areas;

The new Probation Service will be entirely funded by central Government, ending the current arrangements whereby local authorities make a contribution of 20 per cent.;

The Home Secretary of the day will take full responsibility for the performance of the service and be accountable to Parliament for it; and

The Home Secretary of the day will take greater powers to direct necessary outcomes and standards of service delivery.

Some elements of these proposals require primary legislation which will be introduced when Parliamentary time permits. With the Lord Chancellor and the Secretaries of State for Health and for Wales, I have also been considering the future organisation of court welfare services, including work that is currently undertaken by the probation services for the family courts. We expect to announce decisions on the way forward shortly.

Referendum Campaigns

29. Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to implement the recommendations of the Neill committee on the conduct of referendum campaigns. [80980]

Mr. Straw: We intend to publish our response to the Committee's report in the form of a draft Bill before the Summer Recess; and we hope to have new arrangements in place by the time of the next general election.

Community-oriented Sentences

30. Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to encourage the use of community-oriented sentences. [80981]

Mr. Boateng: Community sentences have a role to play in preventing crime and tackling offending behaviour. They are a crucial part of the Government's sentencing strategy.

We are developing a portfolio of supervision programmes evidentially proven to be effective, which can be implemented nationwide, and, jointly with the Prison Service, systems for accrediting programmes and assessing offenders' risks and needs.

It is important that community penalties are rigorously enforced. We have therefore issued further guidance to probation services and will look to tighten enforcement requirements in Probation Service National Standards, which are currently being reviewed.

Electoral Registration

31. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement concerning the reform of electoral registration procedures and practices. [80982]

Mr. Straw: Electoral registration procedures, including encouragement of registration, public access to the register, and a proposed new system of rolling registration, are being considered by my Working Party on Electoral Procedures. The Working Party will present its final report later this year.

Millennium (Liquor Licensing Hours)

32. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has for amending liquor licensing hours on 31 December 1999; and if he will make a statement. [80983]

Mr. George Howarth: A proposed order was laid on 13 April. If approved by Parliament, this will extend normal licensing hours overnight each New Year's Eve until normal opening time on each New Year's Day, beginning with the millennium. There would be no requirement on operators to open at any particular time; it would be for them to judge whether or not to stay open and for how long.

The legislation would allow licensing authorities to impose appropriate restrictions on opening hours where it is shown that later opening is likely to lead to nuisance or disturbance. Applications for such restrictions could be made by the police, a local authority or an individual resident, or someone acting on their behalf.

Subject to Parliamentary approval, this change would come into force this summer, so that businesses could complete their planning for the coming New Year.

Crime and Disorder Strategies

34. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress in establishing local crime and disorder strategies. [80985]

35. Mr. Casale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress in establishing local crime and disorder strategies. [80987]

Mr. Boateng: The Crime and Disorder Act 1998 required the local authority and police in every area to formulate, by 1 April 1999, a strategy for the reduction of crime and disorder over the next three years. Therefore, all local crime and disorder reduction partnerships—over 400 of them in England and Wales—should now have strategies in place and be starting to implement them.

Police Funding

36. Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with police authorities on the funding of policing in the poorest neighbourhoods. [80988]

Mr. Boateng: In discussions with Ministers on funding issues, police authorities have recognised that the allocation of resources and the deployment of officers within the force area are matters for determination locally within the overall budget. Police authority budgets are set to increase on average by 3.1 per cent. in 1999/2000. In addition, local authorities can make grants to police authorities for additional policing services in particular neighbourhoods.

In addition, we recently announced the shortlist of the first eleven targeted policing projects under the crime reduction programme. These projects are worth about £5 million in total out of the £32 million which will be made available for targeted policing over the next three years as part of the programme. Ministers recognise the importance of ensuring that deprived and disadvantaged neighbourhoods are amongst those who benefit from these and other crime reduction initiatives.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the relationship between funding of police forces, the number of officers directly serving the public and a force's performance. [80984]

Mr. Boateng: The Annual Audit Commission report on Police Performance, published in January, found that there is no direct link between increased spending and improved performance in police forces. The report also showed that success in detecting crime does not depend solely on the numbers of police officers available.

Partnerships between the police and other agencies, targeted policing, better use of information technology, and the efficient and effective use of available resources all have an important part to play in improving police performance. As part of the drive towards Best Value, we are working with the police service to strengthen the link between increased spending and improved performance.

Anti-social Behaviour Orders

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what response he has received from local crime and disorder partnerships to the introduction of anti-social behaviour orders. [80956]

Kate Hoey: The provisions relating to anti-social behaviour orders came into effect on 1 April 1999. It is therefore too early to know what use local crime and disorder partnerships will make of them. I understand, however, that a number of partnerships are actively considering them as tools in their crime strategies.

Bail Support

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding allocation his Department has made for the development of local bail support provision for 1999–2000 and the following two years. [81636]

Mr. George Howarth: The Youth Justice Board for England and Wales, established under section 41 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998, is responsible for administering a fund of £85 million over three years from April 1999 for the development by local authorities and other bodies of good practice in the operation of the youth justice system, the provision of youth justice services and other work to prevent offending by children and young people. It is expected that £35 million of the fund will be used to develop bail support and supervision schemes and other remand-related initiatives.

Coroners

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the model charter for coroners courts to be made available. [82175]

Mr. George Howarth: We expect to be in a position to issue the model charter as a framework guide to coroners and their Councils later in the summer.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average age of (a) full-time and (b) part-time coroners. [82177]

Mr. George Howarth: According to the survey of the coroner service conducted by the Home Office in 1996, the average age of all coroners was then 58. Such information is not collected or updated routinely.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the relevant qualifications held by coroners and their job descriptions. [82176]

Mr. George Howarth: Coroners must have a five year general qualification within the meaning of section 71 of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990, or be a legally qualified practitioner of not less than five years' standing. Coroners are appointed by the relevant local Councils. Details of the actual qualifications held by coroners, and their job descriptions, are not recorded centrally.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for (a) compulsory and (b) voluntary training programmes for coroners. [82201]

Mr. George Howarth: We have no plans to require coroners to undergo training either before or after their appointment. There is an existing programme of training courses organised by the Home Office for coroners. In addition, coroners are encouraged to attend appropriate training events organised by other agencies and professional bodies.

Probation Services (Funding)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total level of funding for each probation service in each of the last three years and the real terms change in funding levels over that period; and what is the planned real terms change in funding for 1999–2000. [81559]

Mr. George Howarth: The table shows the total revenue cash limit available to each probation area in this and the last three financial years; the real terms value of the last three years' cash limits at 1999–2000 prices using the latest Treasury deflators, and year on year changes.

[3] Disaggregated from Central Government support from the start of the new capital financing system

[4] Net Central Government provision. The Home Office pays 100 per cent. grant on hostel capital expenditure and 80 per cent. grant on running costs. The remaining 20 per cent. of running costs is provided by, and 20 per cent. of capital expenditure recouped from, local authorities which make flat payments for each hostel resident.

Curfew Responsibility

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average time between a request for a curfew home circumstances report being signed by a prison governor and being received by the Probation Service. [81952]

Mr. George Howarth: The signature or authorisation of a prison governor is not necessary before a request for a contribution to the risk assessment from the Probation Service can be made. Such requests, either on form HDC3 or form PD1, are made following the initial sift of cases and are usually sent by fax to ensure that the Probation Service receives them as soon as possible. No central records are kept of the time it takes for the forms to reach the home Probation Service.

Departmental Legal Business

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his Department's policy when (a) conducting legal proceedings and (b) seeking legal advice as to the circumstances in which Queen's Counsel should be instructed; and for each of the last three years (i) on how many occasions his Department instructed Queen's Counsel and (ii) what was the total cost of instructing Queen's Counsel. [81756]

Mr. Straw: The Home Office predominately uses junior counsel when it is necessary to instruct counsel to provide legal advice or to conduct legal proceedings.

The two First Treasury Counsel are both junior counsel and they will advise and represent the Government without a Queen's Counsel in many of its important cases. In addition, the Attorney-General maintains four panels of junior Counsel whom Departments are expected to use for the majority of the Government's civil litigation. The Law Officers' approval is required before a Queen's Counsel can be instructed to appear.

In determining the level of counsel to use, the Department considers the individual circumstances of each case. It takes into account, inter alia, the importance and sensitivity of the case, the complexity of the law, the weight and complexity of the evidence, and the degree of experience and expertise required, before deciding whether to instruct Queen's Counsel or junior counsel.

The number of occasions on which the Home Office instructed Queen's Counsel in the last three years, and the cost of doing so, cannot be given without incurring disproportionate cost.

Cleveland Police

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the amount of money paid by Cleveland Police to each of the three Cleveland police officers relating to the libel case involving allegations of sexual harassment; and if he will make a statement. [81850]

Mr. Boateng: On counsel's advice, the case was settled out of court and agreement was reached to pay each of the male officers £15,000.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the legal costs of Cleveland Police in the recent libel case relating to allegations of sexual harassment against three Cleveland police officers; and if he will make a statement. [81851]

Mr. Boateng: The total legal costs for this case are not yet available.

Dangerous Dogs

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will introduce measures to prohibit dogs with a history of aggression which have been deposited in an animal welfare centre from being rehoused with members of the public; [81780]

(2) if he will assess the risks to members of the public from animal rescue charities and organisations finding new homes for dangerous dogs. [81772]

Mr. George Howarth: It is not in the interests of animal welfare organisations, or the animal for which they are custodians, to attempt to re-house an unsuitable dog. We would expect such organisations to operate responsibly and carry out a behavioural assessment of the dog and the suitability of the intended home before re-housing.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with ACPO on the workings of legislation relating to the control of dogs. [81773]

Mr. Boateng: There have been no discussions with the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) about the workings of dangerous dogs legislation. ACPO is consulted about the terms of any guidance which may be issued about dangerous dogs, most recently in 1997 and 1998.

Refugees

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many refugees have been admitted into the United Kingdom since 24 March; and in which local authority areas they have been accommodated. [82063]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It is not possible to identify the number of genuine refugees who have been admitted to the United Kingdom. Those seeking asylum are granted temporary admission to the country while their application is considered. Only after consideration of their claim can a decision be made to recognise the applicant as a refugee.

Information on the number of asylum seekers arriving since 24 March is not available. But in the whole of March a total of 5,060 applications were received of which 3,150 were lodged in-country and 1,910 were made at the port of entry. Information on the local authority areas in which they are accommodated is not held centrally.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the United Kingdom has placed a limit on the number of refugees it is prepared to accept as a result of the Kosovo crisis. [82084]

Mr. Straw: No.

Firearms Compensation Scheme

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will announce a date by which all outstanding payments under the compensation for handguns scheme will be completed; [82026]

(2) how many people who have handed in large or small calibre hand-guns to the police are still waiting to receive final payments under the two firearms compensation schemes; [82025]

(3) what action he is taking to reduce the time it is taking to process compensation payments for people who have handed in handguns to the police. [82027]

Mr. Boateng: Payment offers have been made on all, but around 250 claims, mainly under Option C of the compensation schemes, cannot yet be fully processed. This is principally because the required evidence of value of the surrendered guns and ancillary equipment has not yet been provided. There are around 2,600 outstanding offers of payment, mainly where the claimant has not yet responded, or where the amount of the offer is in dispute. It is not possible to give a firm date for the completion of all payments, as this depends in part on the claimant's response to the payment offer.

Immigration (Marriages of Convenience)

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on unannounced visits to check if a marriage is one of convenience for immigration purposes. [82013]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Department's policy is to make unannounced visits in cases where caseworking staff consider, from the evidence available and from prior checks, that there are strong grounds to suspect that the couple are not living together or that the marriage is otherwise not genuine.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provisions have been made by his Department in respect of emergency planning for the millennium bug. [80968]

Mr. Straw: There are comprehensive and well-developed inter-agency arrangements for dealing with emergencies in the United Kingdom, whatever their cause. Because the millennium bug and large-scale millennium celebrations present additional risks, these arrangements have been enhanced. Initiatives include assessments of local authorities' emergency planning arrangements and a series of inter-agency events and seminars, delivered in central London, at the Emergency Planning College and in regional centres.

Unqualified School Leavers

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many young adults left school without a basic qualification in each local authority area in Wales in each of the past 10 years. [81335]

Mr. Hain: Information on the examination achievements of school leavers is unfortunately available only for years up to and including the 1995–96 academic year. It relates to those pupils aged 15 or over leaving school with no A level, AS level, O level, CSE or GCSE qualifications in each local authority area before local government reorganisation in Wales in 1996. Some of these pupils may have gained other qualifications such as the Certificate of Education. This information, covering the 10 years up to and including 1995–96, is contained in the following table.

For years up to and including 1990–91: the School Examinations Survey, a 10 per cent. sample of school leavers from maintained and independent schools.
For 1991–92 onwards, the RD1 (Intended Destinations of Pupils) Survey of all maintained schools and independent schools. The survey typically recorded the destination and examination achievements of over 98 per cent. of pupils.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Education (Expenditure)

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much central Government money was spent per capita in 1998 in Wales on (a) primary schools, (b) secondary schools, (c) further education colleges and (d) universities. [82200]

Mr. Hain: The majority of central Government money for education in schools is provided to local authorities by the unhypothecated revenue support settlement, and in 1997–98 (on the latest information available) the local authority unit costs per pupil are:

Nursery and primary	1,902
Secondary	2,609
Nursery, primary and secondary	2,187

The largest specified grant provided to local authorities by central Government for schools is the Grants for Education Support and Training (GEST) and it is set out along with other specified grants for schools in table 5.01 of the 1999 Departmental Report, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. Information is not yet available centrally on how much of these grants is spent separately in primary or secondary schools.

Per capita funding for full-time equivalent students in further education institutions in Wales in 1998–99 (the latest outturn year available) was £2,790. The equivalent figure for higher education was £3,406.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much central Government money was spent per capita in 1998 in Wales on books and stationery in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools. [82199]

Mr. Hain: Expenditure on educational equipment, furniture and materials, which covers books and stationery, in 1996–97, the latest year for which figures are available, was £61.50 per pupil in nursery and primary schools and £109.20 per pupil in secondary schools.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much central Government money was spent per capita in 1998 in Wales on grants to (a) voluntary aided schools and (b) voluntary controlled schools. [82197]

Mr. Hain: Capital grants to voluntary-aided schools in Wales in 1997–98 equated to £399 per pupil. The revenue costs of voluntary-aided schools and the revenue and capital costs of voluntary-controlled schools are funded by local authorities.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Wind Farms

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when the letter from the hon. Member for Wrexham to him of 5 April about the Mynydd y Cemmaes wind farm extension planning application was brought to his attention; and when he expects to reply. [82037]

Mr. Michael: I have replied to the hon. Member and have placed a copy in the Library of the House.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list the procedures which he follows when he is minded to overturn a planning decision made by one of his inspectors; [82038]

(2) what procedures he followed in his consideration of the planning inspector's report on the application for an extension to the wind farm at Mynydd y Cemmaes; [82040]

(3) if he will rescind his decision to allow the application for an extension to the wind farm at Mynydd y Cemmaes and pay all appropriate compensation; [82066]

(4) what discussions he had with ministerial colleagues prior to his decision to overturn his inspector's decision not to grant planning permission for an extension to the wind farm at Mynydd y Cemmaes. [82041]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Under the provisions of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 the decision is final. It is not open to Ministers to comment on the merits of the decision or the reasoning behind it. The decision was reached taking account of all relevant considerations, one of which was the Inspector's recommendation.

The conclusions reached by a planning inspector, following a public inquiry, are put to the Welsh Office as recommendations not reasons. The decision is final whether taken directly by the Secretary of State or under delegated powers.

I am satisfied that the handling and determination of this application was carried out having proper regard to all relevant requirements including the Town and Country Planning (Inquiries Procedure) Rules 1992. It is not open to the Department to rescind the decision.

I had no conversations with Ministerial colleagues on this application. The inspector's recommendations were available to me alongside advice from officials.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the visits to wind farms by his Department's Ministers in the last year, indicating upon whose invitation each visit was made. [82039]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Bridgend (Mr. Griffiths) toured Bryn Titli and Carno wind farms, Mid Wales, with National Wind Power and Bonus Energy UK on 1 May 1998. I toured Carno Wind farm, Mid Wales, with National Wind Power and Bonus Energy UK on 1 October 1998.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Cashmere

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to support the cashmere industry. [77648]

Mr. Battle: My Department has worked hard to support the UK cashmere knitwear industry. In response to the US threat of punitive duties on imports of cashmere knitwear from the EU, we announced a bond scheme which indemnified exporters of UK-manufactured cashmere against losses arising from the US action. In the event, and after intensive lobbying from the UK Government, the US removed cashmere knitwear from the list of products subject to the US retaliation.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the implementation of the provisions of the minimum wage legislation. [81940]

Mr. Ian McCartney: We estimate that implementation of the national minimum wage has directly benefited almost 2 million workers. Initial feedback indicates that very few employers are deliberately seeking to evade their responsibilities. Recent research commissioned by Reed Personnel Services shows that almost 9 out of 10 companies surveyed support the national minimum wage in principle and were paying their workers the minimum wage rates in advance of its introduction on 1 April.

The Inland Revenue is enforcing the national minimum wage policy, and will supply this Department with data on all matters relating to compliance on a regular basis. Further information on the impact of the introduction of the minimum wage will be available once official statistics are published in the autumn.

Standards (Goods and Services)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what regulations apply to the standards of goods and services sent to the United Kingdom by companies based overseas; and if he will make a statement. [82043]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 26 April 1999]: As far as I am aware, all the regulations for which my Department has responsibility dealing with goods and services supplied in the UK, apply irrespective of whether the company supplying those goods or services are based within the UK or elsewhere overseas.

ECGD

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the future of the Export Credits Guarantee Department's reinsurance facilities. [82624]

Mr. Wilson: Following the privatisation of ECGD's Insurance Services Group in 1991, which was responsible for providing credit insurance in respect of raw materials, consumer durables type exports normally sold on up to 6 months credit, ECGD has provided reinsurance support to private sector credit insurers when there has been a lack of private reinsurance for this class of exports. Since then, demand for ECGD reinsurance has declined as private market capacity has increased. ECGD is to conduct a review of its role in the provision of reinsurance. This will be preceded by a public consultation which will commence shortly. The results of the review are expected in the Autumn.

A copy of ECGD's consultation document has been placed in the Library of the House.

WALES

National Assembly

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what meetings he has had with the Assembly election campaign leaders of each of the political parties. [79387]

Mr. Michael: I am not sure what is meant by "election campaign leaders". I have had no meetings with any individuals in respect of the organisation of the Assembly election campaign for their Party. I have had many contacts with Welsh MPs, including the right hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley) and the hon. Member for Brecon and Radnorshire (Mr. Livsey), as the leaders of their Welsh Parliamentary Parties, and as there are no Welsh Conservative MPs, with the hon. Member for Woodspring (Dr. Fox) as the spokesperson for the Conservative Party on Welsh Affairs. I have also had regular informal contact with Mr. Rod Richards and Mr. Mike German as the respective leaders of the Conservative Party and the Liberal Democrat Party in Wales.

Inward Investment

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the work he has done to secure (a) Korean and (b) Japanese inward investment into the United Kingdom. [81102]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 16 April 1999]: In addition to taking any opportunity to promote Wales to overseas markets, my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Wales has hosted a reception at Lancaster House for senior Japanese industrialists and has written to potential and existing investors. He has also met the Ambassador of each country.

I led an inward investment mission to Japan last October. These efforts have been in addition to the day-to-day efforts of the Welsh Development Agency.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Long-standing Illnesses

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people have been diagnosed as suffering limiting long-standing illness or disability in each of the (i) unitary and (ii) health authority areas in Wales for each of the past 10 years. [81338]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Information on the basis of a diagnosis is not centrally available. The only available information, as given in the table, is based on the 1991 Census of Population and the 1997 Welsh Household Interview Survey, the latter being a sample survey and subject to sampling error. The two sources are not wholly comparable, but can be used as an indication of the relative numbers by authority in each year.

Depression

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people have been diagnosed as suffering from depression in each (i) health and (ii) unitary authority area in Wales in each of the past 10 years. [81339]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: In the Welsh Health Survey, a postal survey carried out in 1995, people were asked "Do you have depression now that you have had for 3 months or more?". The following table shows, by health authority and unitary authority, the percentage of the respondents (aged 18 and over) who answered yes. Because of possible response bias in surveys of this nature, the figures given may overstate the actual prevalence of the condition in the population.

Information for other years is not available centrally.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Genetically Modified Food

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the total number of genetically modified food trial sites; how frequently they have been inspected by the Health and Safety Executive; and if he will list those sites which have not been inspected in the past 12 months. [72677]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 24 February 1999]: Since the current regulations came into force in 1993, genetically modified crops have been grown on approximately 373 individual test sites, some at the same research establishments or farms. In the coming growing season, we have received notifications that genetically modified crops will be grown at 65 different sites.

There is no set pattern of inspection. In previous years about half of the active test sites have been inspected each year. From April 1999, inspections will increase so that at least one test site from each consent is inspected. In total, we expect about 70 to 80 site inspections to take place and repeat inspections will be carried out where necessary. Also from this year, an annual report on inspection activities is to be produced listing the sites which were inspected. Copies of the report will be placed in the Library as soon as the report is produced.

Genetically Modified Animals

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many genetically modified animals, by species, have been exported in each year from 1990 to date, and to where. [81262]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 19 April 1999]: The information requested is not available. There is no requirement to keep or collect such information.

Anyone intending to use premises for the keeping of genetically modified animals in the United Kingdom must give prior notification to the Health and Safety Executive under the Genetically Modified Organisms (Contained Use) Regulations, but there is no requirement to keep records of the export of such animals.

The keeping of genetically modified mammals is subject to licencing by the Home Office and the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act. The Home Office collects figures on the discharge of transgenic animals but these figures do not distinguish between export and other methods of discharge such as humane killing.

Genetically Modified Crops

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to have gathered enough scientific evidence from farm-scale testing of genetically modified crops to make an assessment of the environmental and wildlife consequences of the commercial growing of such crops. [81639]

Mr. Meacher: It is difficult to give a clear statement about when we expect to have gathered enough scientific evidence, but the programme of ecological studies will run for three years in the first instance.

In the first year, the evaluations of the effects of the management of the GM crops on wildlife will be carried out on a limited number of sites, as explained in my answer given today to my hon. Friend's other question (PQ 81638). The first year's work will establish the methodology for future years, but will also generate information which could give an early indication of whether there could be adverse effects.

The work in the subsequent years 2000 and 2001 will be carried out on at least 20 sites for each crop. Because this work is carried out on a greater number of sites, the results will have greater statistical significance. The research contractors will be following the crops through the cropping rotations in subsequent years.

To ensure that this work is scientifically sound, we are in the process of appointing an independent steering committee to oversee the experimental design and methodologies, the statistics, and to advise on the interpretation of the results. I will consider the advice of this committee about at what stage we have gathered enough evidence and whether, and if so, what further studies need to be carried out. The work will be reviewed year by year and we will use this to decide how best to proceed with the managed development of GM crops in the UK.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for farm-scale test sites for genetically modified crops in addition to the three he announced on 15 April in the current year. [81638]

Mr. Meacher: This year, three fields of genetically modified (GM) spring oilseed rape and four fields of GM maize will be planted for the farm-scale evaluations and compared with a similar number of fields of equivalent non-GM crops. It is anticipated that three to five fields of GM winter oilseed rape will be planted in August.

In subsequent years, at least 20 fields of each crop will be planted to enable the evaluations to be carried out at a scale which will generate sufficient information to ensure that a rigorous statistical analysis can be carried out to identify whether or not the management of the GM crops results in indirect effects on wildlife compared to non-GM crops.

Information on the farm-scale evaluations will be published shortly on the DETR Website (www.environment.detr.gov.uk/acre/wildlife/index.htm).

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what regulations he has applied to the dispersal of seed from genetically modified crops grown in farm-scale test sites over the next five years. [81640]

Mr. Meacher: All the releases of genetically modified (GM) crops will be carried out under the appropriate authorisations in accordance with the Genetically Modified Organisms (Deliberate Release) Regulations 1992, as amended. With respect to the control of dispersal of seed, the farmers growing the crops will in addition be applying the guidelines being prepared by the industry body Supply Chain Initiative for Modified Agricultural Crops (SCIMAC). The draft guidelines cover the issue of seed dispersal, and farmers will be advised to take the necessary precautions to prevent seed spillage and dispersal.

Highways Agency

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what quality control measures are in place to ensure that highway repairs undertaken by the Highways Agency are of adequate durability. [81957]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Highway repairs undertaken by the Highways Agency are usually procured under contract and the terms of the contract include the "Specification for Highway Works" (the latest edition was published by the Stationery Office in May 1998). This is the main document that sets out the performance, materials and workmanship requirements.

Workmanship on site and contract compliance is supervised by suitably qualified and experienced highway engineers and inspectors commissioned by the Highways Agency.

The specification includes detail of checkpoints at which suppliers provide the Highway's Agency's agents with evidence of compliance with the specification either by testing of materials and/or by staged inspection of the work. Work is not accepted until it is certified as meeting the requirements of the specification.

Contaminated Land

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) when he plans to bring into force the contaminated land regime in Part IIA of the Environmental Protection Act 1990; [81798]

(2) when he plans to lay guidance issued under the contaminated land regime before each House of Parliament; [81799]

(3) what plans he has to consult the public on proposed guidance under the contaminated land regime before it is laid before Parliament. [81800]

Mr. Meale [holding answer 26 April 1999]: Implementation of the contaminated land regime in Part IIA of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 is dependent upon statutory guidance to be issued by the Secretary of State, and also on secondary legislation.

The Act requires the Secretary of State to consult the Environment Agency and others before he issues that guidance. Two rounds of consultation on draft texts have been carried out. We intend to issue a further draft of the guidance, for a final round of consultations, in June, with the aim of laying the final draft before each House of Parliament before the Summer recess. We intend to make the Commencement Order and Regulations necessary to implement the Part IIA regime at the same time.

This should enable us to bring the regime into force in England on 1 December. Implementation of the regime in Scotland and Wales is the responsibility of their respective Secretaries of State.

Asbestos

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the current maximum sentence for serious offences relating to asbestos. [81026]

Mr. Meale: At present, the higher courts may impose unlimited fines for Health and Safety at work offences, including those related to asbestos, and may imprison people for breaching asbestos licensing requirements. The lower courts may fine up to £20,000 for certain charges, which may be brought in asbestos-related cases, and up to £5,000 for others. However, within the broad statutory limits set by Parliament, sentences in individual cases are a matter for the Courts alone.

I am concerned that the general level of penalties imposed by the Courts for Health and Safety offences, including those related to asbestos, do not match their seriousness, especially given that lives are being put at risk. The Government are considering what can be done to address this, including consideration of whether the available maximum penalties remain appropriate.

Motor Insurers Bureau

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what organisations and individuals he has (a) consulted, (b) received requests for consultation from and (c) received representations from concerning his proposals for changes to the Motor Insurers Bureau arrangements. [82336]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Representations have been received over the years since the last revision from many applicants, their legal representatives and from solicitors' organisations. Representations have also been received from the European Commission. All of these are taken into consideration in the review of the Agreements. We have recently received and accepted a request from the Association of Personal Injury Lawyers that they be consulted in the review of the Uninsured Drivers Agreement which is nearing completion.

Trains (Reliability)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with (a) Great Western Trains and (b) South Wales and West Railway about improving reliability. [81907]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Secretary of State had general discussions with both these Train Operating Companies at the November 1998 and February 1999 Rail Summits. OPRAF monitors the performance of franchise agreements by Train Operating Companies and agrees remedial action with them as necessary to ensure compliance with contractual obligations. The reliability and punctuality of Train Operating Companies is reported in OPRAF's Quarterly Bulletins, copies of which are in the Library of the House.

Planning Obligations

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he proposes to publish new guidelines on the use of planning obligations. [81908]

Mr. Raynsford: It is planned to issue a Consultation Paper on Planning Obligations this year. Current guidelines on the use of Planning Obligations are set out in DOE Circular 1/97.

Vacant Dwellings (Avon)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many vacant dwellings there are in each of the unitary authorities in the former county of Avon. [82302]

Mr. Raynsford: The latest available data are as follows:

Vacant dwelling stock, by category of ownership, as at 1 April 1998

	Unitary authority	Registered social landlords	All other tenures[1]	Total stock

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Subsidiarity

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those topics to which subsidiarity cannot apply, being wholly within the sole competence of the European Union. [81430]

Ms Quin: There are two topics which are solely within the competence of the European Community by virtue of the Community Treaties, and to which subsidiarity is therefore not applicable. These are: (a) the Common Commercial Policy; and (b) the Common Fisheries Policy insofar as it relates to conservation of marine resources.

The Community may also acquire implied exclusive competence by enacting legislation which restricts the ability of Member States to act in a particular area as long as that legislation is in force. Examples of such areas are parts of the Single Market and the Common Agricultural Policy. However, before enacting this legislation, the Community would, since entry into force of the Maastricht Treaty, have had to take subsidiarity concerns into account.

Departmental Legal Business

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his Department's policy when (a) conducting legal proceedings and (b) seeking legal advice as to the circumstances in which Queen's Counsel should be instructed; and for each of the last three years (i) on how many occasions his Department instructed Queen's Counsel and (ii) what was the total cost of instructing Queen's Counsel. [81754]

Mr. Robin Cook: I refer the hon. Member to the answer he received from my hon. and learned Friend the Solicitor-General on 26 April 1999, Official Report, column 1. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office conducts very few proceedings in the UK domestic courts. For proceedings in international tribunals, such as the International Court of Justice or the European Court of Human Rights, nominations of Counsel to represent the United Kingdom are always sought from the Attorney-General, bearing in mind the level of national importance of a particular issue and the legal expertise required.

Iran

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects diplomatic representation with Iran to be raised to the level of ambassador. [82216]

Mr. Fatchett: The exchange of ambassadors with Iran was part of the agreement between the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and his Iranian counterpart Dr. Kharrazi in New York last September. We remain committed to this and expect that the exchange will take place in the next few weeks.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to continue to make representations to the Iranian Government on the position of followers of the Baha'i faith currently living in Iran; and if he will make a statement. [82155]

Mr. Fatchett: We and our EU partners have regularly raised with the Iranian authorities our concerns over certain aspects of their human rights record, and in particular the plight of the Baha'i community in Iran.

An EU sponsored resolution at the recent United Nations Commission on Human Rights, including firm language on the plight of the Baha'is, was adopted on 23 April.

We will continue to raise these matters with the Iranian Government in bilateral and EU contracts.

Algeria

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Algerian Government on co-operation with the UN (a) Special Rapporteur on Torture, (b) Special Rapporteur on Extrajudicial, Summary or Arbitrary Executions and (c) Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances; and what undertakings he has received from the Algerian Government in this regard. [81986]

Mr. Fatchett: I visited the UN Human Rights Commission in Geneva on 31 March to deliver the UK national speech. In it, I mentioned our disappointment at Algeria's continued refusal to grant access to the Special Rapporteurs on Torture and on Extrajudicial Killings. With our support, the EU also urged the Algerian government to cooperate with the UN Working Group on Enforced Disappearances.

We have received no undertakings from the Algerian government to cooperate with these UN bodies, even though they are obliged to do so by UN rules.

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action the Government are proposing to take at this year's UN Commission on Human Rights in respect of human rights abuses in Algeria. [81987]

Mr. Fatchett: While delivering the UK national speech to this year's UN Commission on Human Rights on 31 March, I expressed our continued disappointment at Algeria's refusal to allow UN human rights bodies access to the country, even though they are obliged to do so.

Gibraltar

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the discussion held with the Chief Minister of Gibraltar on 20 April. [82028]

Ms Quin [holding answer 26 April 1999]: My right hon. Friend did not meet the Chief Minister on 20 April. However, I had a useful discussion with him which covered the European Parliament vote; financial services; Schengen; Moroccan workers in Gibraltar; and the UK/Spain Summit.

European Union Council

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the forthcoming business in the Council of the European Union for May and the major European Union events for the next six months. [82623]

Ms Quin: The information is as follows:

PRIME MINISTER

Economic Sovereignty

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister if he will set out his definition of the term "pooling of economic sovereignty". [81737]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the oral statement given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 27 October 1997, Official Report, columns 583–88.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Queen's Counsel

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on his Department's policy when (a) conducting legal proceedings and (b) seeking legal advice as to the circumstances in which Queen's Counsel should be instructed; and for each of the last three years (i) on how many occasions his Department instructed Queen's Counsel and (ii) what was the total cost of instructing Queen's Counsel. [81765]

Mr. Timms: The Department does use Queen's Counsel in the conduct of its litigation. They are used for important and complex cases. For the rest, the Department uses the panel counsel referred to in the Written Answer to the hon. Member from my hon. and learned Friend the Solicitor-General on 26 April 1999, Official Report, columns 1–2. Approval for off-panel counsel is sought from my right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General as necessary. Records are not maintained in a form which would enable the number of occasions in which the Department has instructed Queen's Counsel to be identified in the last three years and the cost of doing so would incur disproportionate cost.

Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by how much it would be possible to increase the basic state pension, taking into account savings on means-tested benefits and increases in income tax revenues, if the £100 winter fuel payment were abolished and all the proceeds spent on the basic state pension. [81975]

Mr. Timms: The amount allocated for Winter Fuel Payments for 1999–2000 is £0.8 billion. We estimate that this would provide an increase in the basic State pension for one year only in the order of £2.55 a week for Category A cases and £1.50 a week for category BL cases.

Notes:

1. The gross costs underlying this estimate have been provided by the Government Actuary's Department.

2. Income tax offsets were provided by the Inland Revenue.

3. Means-tested benefit offsets were estimated using the 1996–97 Family Resources Survey and the 1997 Quarterly Statistical Enquiry and are in 1999–2000 prices, earnings and benefit levels.

4. The estimate provides a broad order of magnitude and is rounded to the nearest £0.05.

Benefits (Private Sector)

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what further plans he has to involve the private sector in the delivery of benefits. [82291]

Angela Eagle: We have no plans to use the private sector to deliver Social Security benefits. However, we will be using the private sector to support the delivery of new systems and to support staff to manage the changes needed to achieve the Government's objectives for Welfare Reform.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of Single Focus Work Gateway pilot projects include private sector involvement. [82293]

Angela Eagle: Ministers decided in November 1998 that in 4 of the 12 Single Work-focused Gateway (SWFG) areas, organisations from the private and/or voluntary sector would be invited to lead the delivery of SWFG. We would expect to see all successful organisations finally selected to deliver SWFG working in partnership with local organisations from the voluntary, private and public sector within each locality.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the reduction in the number of public sector jobs as a result of the use of the private sector for benefit delivery. [82292]

Angela Eagle: None.

Pensions (Green Paper)

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a list of the individuals and organisations that commented on "A New Contract for Welfare-Partnership in Pensions" (Cm 4179). [82635]

Mr. Timms: A total of 581 responses to the Green Paper on pensions were received. I have arranged for a list, in the order of receipt, of those who submitted comments to be placed in the Library of the House.

HEALTH

Pressure-relieving Equipment

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes he has made to his Department's guidance ref. HSG(95)8 regarding the availability of specialist pressure-relieving equipment. [79912]

Mr. Hutton: HSG(95)8 "NHS responsibilities for meeting continuing health care needs" covers the arrangements that health authorities need to make for patients who have continuing health care needs which can be met in hospital, nursing homes or their own homes. The guidance confirms that people in nursing homes may require some regular access to specialist medical, nursing or other community health services, including specialist medical or nursing equipment, but does not specifically list pressure-relieving equipment. There have been no changes to the guidance since it was issued in 1995. In the light of the Health Committee report on the interface between health and social services, there will be a review of continuing health care policy.

Health Professionals (Salaries)

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the average salary increase for all health professionals in the NHS in each of the last five years, expressed as a percentage. [81059]

Mr. Denham: The average salary increase for all health professionals in the National Health Service in each of the last five years is set out in the table.

Year	Percentage
1995–96	2.9
1996–97	3.4
1997–98	3.4

Notes:

This is a weighted average for directly employed doctors and dentists, nurses, midwives and health visitors, professions allied to medicine and staff covered by the scientific and professional Whitley Council, using the full increase and including local pay where relevant. It omits the value of increments and other changes in earnings.

Body Piercing

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people sought medical help as the result of body piercing in each of the past three years for which records are available; and if he will make a statement: [80864]

(2) what powers a local authority has to revoke the ear piercing registration of a person convicted of a sexual assault; and if he will make a statement; [80863]

(3) if a person registered for ear piercing is allowed to pierce other parts of the body; and if he will make a statement; [80862]

(4) what (a) legislation and (b) other regulations apply to those providing (i) ear piercing and (ii) piercing of other parts of the body; and if he will make a statement. [80861]

Ms Jowell: Local authorities in London have powers to control ear piercing and cosmetic body piercing businesses by licensing using provisions in the London Local Authorities Act 1991, or by registration and byelaws using provisions in the Greater London Council (General Powers) Act 1981, depending on which legislation they have adopted. The majority of London local authorities have adopted licensing powers.

Local authorities outside London have powers to register and make byelaws for ear piercing businesses under the provisions of the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982, but not for cosmetic body piercing businesses.

Local authorities are empowered to make byelaws or licence conditions for ear piercing businesses related to hygienic and safe practice. Breaches of these byelaws and licence conditions may lead to the cancellation of registration or a licence.

In addition, under the London Local Authorities Act 1991, local authorities in London may revoke or refuse to grant, renew or transfer a licence, if the individual carrying on the business is not reasonably regarded by the local authority as a fit and proper person to hold a licence. Therefore it is possible that if information about a conviction for a sexual offence came to light, the local authority may decide to revoke or refuse to grant, renew or transfer a licence.

Following consultation by the Department in 1996 on the regulation of skin piercing, we have decided that primary legislation should be introduced, if parliamentary time allows, to give local authorities outside London powers to regulate cosmetic body piercing businesses. Those authorities are at present able to use general enforcement powers under health and safety at work legislation, should they judge that there is a risk to customers' health and safety. Also, the cosmetic body piercing businesses which are registered for ear piercing under the existing legislation will already be subject to local authority inspection.

The Department does not have information on the number of people who seek medical help as a result of body piercing and we are not aware of any relevant studies.

Ministerial Meetings (US)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many times Ministers in his Department met their counterparts in the US Administration between 1 January 1998 and 1 June 1998, indicating the dates and locations of each meeting, the Ministers involved and the name of the US counterpart. [81078]

Ms Jowell: I met the United States Secretary of State for Health, Donna Shalala at the World Health Assembly in Geneva in May 1998.

Professional Statisticians

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff by grade are employed as professional statisticians in his Department; how many of these staff have been accepted as fast stream by the Civil Service Selection Board; and how many have been granted chartered statistician status by the Royal Statistical Society. [81195]

Ms Jowell: Within the Department of Health there are 3 Senior Civil Servants, 28 Integrated Payband 4 (Grade 7) statisticians and 12 fast-stream Assistant Statisticians employed as professional statisticians, all of whom have been recruited via the Civil Service Selection Board'. In addition, the Department employs on a permanent basis Statistical Officers who have statistical qualifications.

The answer covers the number of permanent statistically qualified staff working in professional statistician posts in the Department. In addition, there is 1 Senior Civil Servant who was recognised as a professional statistician by the then Central Statistical Office without the involvement of the Civil Service Selection Board.

Note:

The answer excludes staff with professional statistical qualifications working in general administrative posts and staff in regional offices of the National Health Service Executive who may be undertaking some statistical work.

Iophendylate

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much iophendylate was purchased by the National Health Service in 1998–99. [81620]

Mr. Hutton: No iophendylate (Myodil) was purchased by the National Health Service in 1998–99.

Medicines Control Agency

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when and with whom he expects the Medicines Control Agency to consult about revisions to the proposals in its consultation document MLX 249. [81650]

Ms Jowell: We are grateful for all the representations received during the consultation period which ended on 31 January. Having fully considered those representations we will decide whether and what legislation should be placed before Parliament. We have no current plans for further public consultation.

Dentistry

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has for the long-term future of dentistry in the NHS; [81875]

(2) what plans he has to ensure a comprehensive NHS dentistry service is available throughout the country; [81874]

(3) what is the Government's long-term policy on NHS dentistry. [81873]

Mr. Denham: These issues are under consideration as part of the strategy for National Health Service Dentistry that we will publish in due course.

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what target his Department has set for the number of dentists providing NHS services per 1,000 population. [81865]

Mr. Denham: Health authorities are responsible for monitoring the provision of National Health Service dental services in the area. The table shows that on 31 December of each year from 1996 to 1998, there was an increase in the number of dentists providing general dental services per 1,000 population.

General Dental Service: Number of GDS dentists [1] per 1,000 population at 31 December in England

Year	Number	Per 1,000 population
1996	16,341	0.33
1997	16,722	0.34
1998	17,266	0.35

[1] The number of dentists are a head count not whole time equivalents

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many bids have been received from dentists in Northavon since the launch of his Investing in Dentistry initiative; and how many of these have been successful. [81955]

Mr. Denham: No Investing in Dentistry funding requests have been received from Northavon.

St. George's Hospital (Tooting)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the change in (a) waiting lists and (b) waiting time for consultation at St. George's Hospital, Tooting, in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [81886]

Mr. Denham: At 28 February 1999, 6,464 people were waiting for inpatient treatment at St. George's Healthcare National Health Service Trust, a reduction of 1,668 since 31 March 1998. At 31 December 1998, 2,195 people had been waiting 13 weeks or more for a first outpatient appointment there, an increase of 905 since 31 March 1998.

Osteoporosis

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to publish clinical guidelines on osteoporosis prevention and treatment. [81884]

Ms Jowell: The Royal College of Physicians published "Osteoporosis: clinical guidelines for prevention and treatment" on 12 March 1999. Copies of the guidelines are available direct from the Royal College.

Ongar War Memorial Hospital

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the closure of Ongar War Memorial Hospital. [81871]

Mr. Denham: No decision has been made about the future of Ongar War Memorial Hospital. The health authority has not yet provided all the information necessary to enable Ministers to take a decision on the long-term future of the hospital.

We understand that the National Health Service trust may be considering closing the hospital on health and safety grounds. This is a matter which is the responsibility of the trust.

Treatment Costs

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will estimate the cost to the National Health Service of treating people who have been injured by animals in each of the last three years; [81775]

(2) if he will introduce measures to enable those in charge of animals which have caused injuries requiring health service treatment to be charged for that treatment. [81774]

Mr. Denham: Central information is collected annually on the cost of treatments and procedures for services undertaken by National Health Services trusts. These costs are not differentiated between the cause of the treatment, for example whether the treatment was required as a result of animals, a fall etc., and therefore we are unable to estimate the costs of services in this way. There are no plans to introduce charges to owners for the cost of treating people injured by their animals.

Food Standards Agency

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many existing staff from his Department will be transferred to the Food Standards Agency. [82271]

Ms Jowell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Maidenhead (Mrs. May) on 29 March 1999, Official Report, column 500.

DEFENCE

Second World War Airmen

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will release the information held by his Department on the number of airmen during the Second World War who were classified as lacking moral fibre; and if he will take steps to remove this classification from service records. [81341]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Aircrews in the Second World War included personnel from all three Services, although the Royal Air Force were the only Service to use the classification of "lacking moral fibre". Cases where aircrew had significant psychological problems were dealt with by administrative procedures and fell into two categories; those which were seen as having medical causes, and those where the determination and reliability of the airman in the face of danger were doubted. It was the latter category that were actually classed as "lacking moral fibre".

The Royal Air Force has no central record of officers/airmen classified as "lacking moral fibre" during World War II and this information could be obtained only through a manual check of individual personnel files. Whilst it might be possible to obtain background information on officers categorised as "lacking moral fibre", airmen's personal files will have been destroyed, and only a basic Record of Service retained. It would not therefore be possible to discover any background information on the reasons behind any "lack of moral fibre" annotation recorded on an individual airman's record.

Service Records are amended only on those rare occasions when there is irrefutable evidence that inaccurate information has been entered. The Ministry of Defence therefore has no plans to review those cases categorised as "lacking moral fibre" during World War II, or to remove this classification from those airmen's individual records which have survived.

Landmines

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has obtained on the laying of anti-personnel landmines and anti-tank mines by the Yugoslav army in Kosovo. [81994]

Mr. George Robertson: There is evidence that both anti-tank mines and anti-personnel mines have been employed by the Yugoslav army in Kosovo since April of last year. While our information is incomplete, we believe that in central and south west Kosovo, where many of the minefields are laid, these are small scale. Along the Albanian and Macedonian borders with Kosovo, there is evidence of more conventional large scale minefields.

Munitions (Kosovo)

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what munitions are being used by the RAF in the Kosovo campaign that employ a form of sub-munition designed to impede damage repair. [82149]

Mr. George Robertson: None.

War Cabinet

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions since 24 March the Chiefs of Staff have accompanied the Chief of the Defence Staff to meetings of the War Cabinet. [81665]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 22 April 1999]: It is established practice under Section 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information not to disclose information relating to proceedings of Cabinet and Cabinet Committees. However, as I have made clear publicly on a number of occasions, we are not at war with the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. There is therefore no War Cabinet. The Prime Minister regularly discusses the situation in Kosovo with his Ministerial colleagues.

Vinca Institute

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reports he has received of the presence of nuclear material at the Vinca Institute near Belgrade. [82349]

Mr. George Robertson: Any nuclear material held at the Vinca Nuclear Research Institute is held under the terms of the Safeguards Agreement between Yugoslavia and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), and is monitored by its inspectors.

Vegetarians

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to cater for those requiring vegetarian food when involved in front-line activities. [81909]

Mr. Spellar: Where fresh rations are supplied by military catering staff, a vegetarian choice is available on the daily menu for all meals. In the case of Operational Ration Packs, work has begun to identify the requirement to provide a vegetarian option.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Knitting Machine Operators

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has for the future of the National Training Centre for Knitting Machine Mechanics and Technicians at North Warwickshire and Hinckley College. [81738]

Mr. Mudie: Having reviewed their mix of training provision, I understand that the college authorities have decided to close the knitting technician facility. That is a business decision for them to take and is not a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. I am advised that there are a number of other institutions offering technician training for the knitting industry. This may well have been a factor in the decision to close the centre at North Warwickshire and Hinckley College.

I can assure my hon. Friend that the prospective National Training Organisation for the Textiles industry—the National Textiles Training Organisation—is very active in linking with education institutions to ensure the availability of an appropriate level of training facilities to meet the needs of the industry.

FE Colleges

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to ensure that colleges of further education are not penalised financially as a result of the transfer of responsibility for funding part-time higher education courses in further education colleges from the Further Education Funding Council to the Higher Education Funding Council. [81872]

Mr. Mudie: The funding to transfer from FEFC to HEFCE from 1999–2000 has been calculated based on detailed information from the colleges concerned. These colleges were invited to confirm that the proposed funding transfer is appropriate. HEFCE and FEFC jointly commissioned research, which has shown that HEFCE will fund the transferred provision at, at least, the same level as applies now in FE.

A-levels (Maths and Science)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action he has taken to monitor standards in A-level subjects in (a) mathematics, (b) physics, (c) chemistry and (d) other science subjects since May 1997. [81853]

Mr. Mudie: The Government are committed to ensuring that standards in all public examinations are rigorously maintained. The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority carries out a rolling programme of reviews to ensure that examination demand and grade standards are maintained in all major subjects. The first such review, published in 1996, confirmed that standards in A-level mathematics and chemistry remained broadly comparable between 1975 and 1995. The second review, published in March this year, confirmed that standards in A-level physics remained broadly comparable between 1976 and 1996. The A-level biology review is due to be published next year. Specific recommendations from the reviews for ensuring that standards continue to be maintained—and where necessary are strengthened—are being incorporated in the revised A-level criteria, which will underpin the new syllabuses to be introduced from September 2000.

Further Education Funding Council

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the value was of the (a) funds administered by the Further Education Funding Council and (b) overheads of the Further Education Funding Council in the last year for which figures are available. [81881]

Mr. Mudie: In 1998–99, the value of the funds administered by the FEFC were £3,112,265,976 and the overheads of the FEFC were £22,610,000.

Early Years Education

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress he has made in establishing an early years learning curriculum. [81989]

Ms Hodge: We have asked the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA) to review the existing Desirable Outcomes for Children's Learning on Entering Compulsory Education. The QCA published a consultation paper in February and the consultation closes on 30 April.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 23 March 1999, Official Report, columns 200–01, when he expects to be able to publish the detailed breakdown of the expected expenditure on early years education in 1998–99. [82014]

Ms Hodge [holding answer 26 April 1999]: Expenditure plans—including estimated outturn expenditure for 1998–99—were published in the Departmental Report of the department for Education and Employment and Office for Standards in Education (Cm 4202) in March 1999. These included the following estimates of outturn expenditure on early years education and childcare in 1998–99:

	£ million
National Childcare Strategy	27
Funding from the windfall tax for the National Childcare Strategy	25
Under fives	137
Local authority expenditure on under fives education	1,692
Sure Start	3

New Deal (Pilot Projects)

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of New Deal pilot projects include private sector involvement. [82303]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Private sector organisations lead delivery in 10 (36 per cent.) of the 28 pilots for the New Deal for long term unemployed people aged 25 or over and five (42 per cent.) of the 12 Personal Adviser Service pilot projects and three (12 per cent.) of the 24 Innovative schemes under the New Deal for the Disabled. Private sector organisations may also be involved in New Deal pilots as sub-contractors.

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the next stage of Part III of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 will come into force; and if he will make a statement. [82542]

Ms Hodge: The next stage of Part III of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 will come into force on 1 October. Service providers will then have to take reasonable steps to change practices, policies or procedures which make it impossible or unreasonably difficult for disabled people to use a service; provide auxiliary aids or services which would make it easier for, or enable, disabled people to use a service; and overcome physical features which make it impossible or unreasonably difficult for disabled people to use a service, by providing the service by a reasonable alternative means.

I have placed in the Library copies of the report on the public consultation exercise that the Government held jointly with the National Disability Council from 30 July 1998 to 13 November 1998, as well as copies of the Regulatory Impact Assessment. I have also laid supporting regulations and a revised Code of Practice, which describes the current and new duties and gives examples of good practice. It also helps service providers and disabled people to understand the law. Subject to the completion of the relevant Parliamentary procedures, we aim to publish the Code, and other information about the Act, at the end of June. This represents significant progress in our programme to tackle discrimination against disabled people.

The final phase of the later rights in Part III of the Disability Discrimination Act is scheduled to come into force in 2004. As a matter of good practice, service providers should be considering now what steps to take in respect of removing or altering or providing a means of avoiding physical obstacles which prevent access to their services.

The duty of reasonable adjustment on trade organisations will also come into force on 1 October. They will then have to take reasonable steps to prevent any arrangements they make placing a disabled member or applicant at a substantial disadvantage compared with people who are not disabled. I have laid a separate Code of Practice for trade organisations, which takes into account the brief guidance on trade organisations currently in the Employment Code of Practice. I have also placed in the Library copies of the associated Regulatory Impact Assessment and Consultation Report. Supporting regulations are not necessary.

New Deal for Partners of Unemployed People

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the national launch of the New Deal for Partners of Unemployed People. [82543]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The New Deal for Partners of Unemployed People was launched today. It offers partners of people who have been receiving Jobseekers' Allowance for six months or more, the opportunity, on a voluntary basis, to receive guidance and advice on job search and training from specialist Employment Service Personal Advisers.

The national programme will build on the experience gained by pathfinder districts—Cardiff, Leeds and Tayside—which started on 8 February.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Racial Hatred

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) reports, (b) investigations and (c) arrests there were of crimes committed in the areas covered by (i) Hammersmith and (ii) Fulham police stations for the offence of incitement to racial hatred for the years (a) 1994, (b) 1995 and (c) 1996. [81684]

Kate Hoey: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis tells me that such information as to the offence of incitement to racial hatred was not identifiable from other collected data before the introduction of the Metropolitan Police crime reporting computer system on 30 July 1996 at Hammersmith Police Station and 27 August 1996 at Fulham Police Station. No cases of incitement to racial hatred were reported or investigated, and no arrests were made, in the period from 30 July 1996 to end December 1996 at Hammersmith and, during the period 27 August 1996 to end December 1996, at Fulham.

IND Offices, Croydon

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average time recorded by the IND offices in Croydon for response to inquiries made to them by (a) telephone and (b) in writing for the months of (i) January, (ii) February and (iii) March. [81683]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: In respect of telephone inquiries, I would refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Woking (Mr. Malins) on 29 March 1999, Official Report, column 537. The latest position is that the average time a caller waits in the queue has reduced to two minutes and twenty seconds. In respect of written inquiries for January, February and March, eighty four per cent. of written inquiries are responded to within 20 working days, excluding correspondence related to casework and applications.

Probation Service

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the outcome of the review of the Probation Service's recruitment needs; and if he will publish the results. [81954]

Mr. George Howarth: The work force planning survey of the Probation Service has not yet been completed. The data collected are currently being analysed, and it is hoped that a final report will be ready by August. The findings will be made available to Probation Service managers and probation committees.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the ergonomic assessment of the Crams IT system currently being installed by the Probation Service. [81978]

Mr. George Howarth: The ergonomic assessment of Case Record Administration and Management System (CRAMS) has been sent to all Chief Probation Officers; and UNISON and the National Association of Probation Officers (NAPO) have sent copies to their branch officers. Copies have also been placed in the Library.

Juvenile Offenders

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimates he has had made of the likely change in the number of juveniles sentenced to custody during the next five years. [81979]

Mr. Boateng: Projections have been made of the number of young prisoners who it is expected will be either serving a custodial sentence or held on remand in all forms of secure accommodation. The projections are based on two possible scenarios:

The assumption that the use of custody by the courts increases by 0.6 per cent. per year for males and 1 per cent. for females, which is in line with recent trends; and the assumption that, in addition to 1, there is an increase in average sentence length of 1.5 per cent. per year for males and 2 per cent. for females.

The tables also allow for seasonal variations in each year.

Expected populations of prisoners aged under 18

	Remand	Sentenced
Assumption 1
1998–1999[1]	900	1,800
1999–2000	1,000	1,700
2000–2001	1,000	1,800
2001–2002	800	2,000
2002–2002	700	2,100
2003–2004	700	2,100
2004–2005	700	2,200
Assumption 2
1998–1999[1]	900	1,800
1999–2000	1,000	1,900
2000–2001	1,100	2,100
2001–2002	900	2,400
2002–2003	800	2,400
2003–2004	800	2,600
2004–2005	800	2,700

[1] Provisional

Actual outcomes will depend on the decisions of the courts. Other scenarios are possible. For further information on the methodology of the projections see "Projections of Long-Term Trends in the Prison Population to 2006", Home Office Statistical Bulletin 1/99, copies of which are in the Library.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for housing juveniles within the Prison Service estate. [81976]

Mr. George Howarth: The initial composition of the Prison Service's new, distinct juvenile estate has now been finalised, following consultation with the Youth Justice Board. It will consist of the following establishments: Ashfield; Aylesbury; Brinsford; Castington; Feltham; Hollesley Bay; Huntercombe; Lancaster Farms; Onley; Portland; Stoke Heath; Thorn Cross; Werrington; and Wetherby. These establishments will be either juvenile-only or will contain juvenile units.

The Prison Service also has a strategy for securing further improvements to the estate over the next three years.

These changes will mean that all 15 to 17 year old boys will be held in separate, dedicated accommodation (other than in exceptional circumstances) in readiness for the introduction of the Detention and Training Order in April 2000.

In relation to 15–17 year old girls, I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Shipley (Mr. Lesley) on 8 March 1999, Official Report, columns 28–29.

Parole

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average time taken to process parole applications. [81959]

Mr. George Howarth: The parole timetable for determinate sentenced prisoners specifies that the review process should be complete, and the result notified to the prisoner, within 24 weeks of the scheduled start date for the review.

Over the past four quarters, the average time taken is as follows:

weeks

	Average time taken to process reviews
April 1998-June 1998	24.7
July 1998-September 1998	24.0
October 1998-December 1998	24.0
January 1999-March 1999	22.1

Young Offender Teams

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the (a) salaries, (b) leave entitlements and (c) other conditions of service for (i) police, (ii) health, (iii) education, (iv) probation and (v) social services members of young offender teams. [81958]

Mr. Boateng: The salaries, leave entitlements and other conditions of service of members of youth offending teams, from whichever agency they are drawn, are governed by the arrangements applying to each member's employing agency. They will vary between agencies and, in some aspects, between different parts of England and Wales, and they will vary according to the rank or grade and seniority of individual youth offending team members and, in respect of education and health staff, according to the occupational group nominated by chief education officers and health authorities as team members. It will be for youth offending team managers to manage the teams effectively, ensuring that the diversity of their membership contributes to, and does not impede, good multi-agency working.

Drug-related Crime

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of (a) the number of drug users who are criminally active and (b) the cost of drug-related crime. [81982]

Mr. George Howarth: As I stated in my reply to the hon. Member for Hertsmere (Mr. Clappison) on 29 April 1998, Official Report, column 136, the information requested on criminally active drug users is not available. A report was published last year of research carried out on behalf of the Home Office by the University of Cambridge, which shed light on the links between drugs and crime. Further work is currently being conducted within this programme. The results of this additional research will be published later this year.

At present there are no estimates of the costs of drug-related crime. However, the Home Office is currently working to develop, within the context of the crime reduction programme, an estimate of the cost of crime.

Young Offenders Institutions

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to build additional young offenders' institutions within Greater London. [81977]

Mr. George Howarth: In 1998, the Prison Service acquired a site adjacent to Belmarsh prison in order to obtain planning permission to build another prison to serve the London area. It is the intention that the new prison should include a young offender institution function. Preliminary discussions have been held with the local planning authority, but a formal planning application has yet to be submitted.

Home Detention Curfews

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the prisoners released on home detention curfew on or since 28 January have (a) been returned to custody and (b) committed offences whilst on curfew. [81948]

Mr. George Howarth: Between 28 January and 21 April, 3,953 offenders have been made subject to home detention curfew. In the same period, 166 curfewees have had their licences revoked by the Secretary of State and 140 have been returned to custody.

Home Office Circular 1/1999 requires the police to inform the Prison Service parole unit when a curfewee is charged with an offence. Between 28 January and 21 April, the parole unit has been notified of 40 such cases. As a result, 26 curfewees have had their licences revoked immediately under Section 38A(1) or Section 39 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991. In the remaining 14 cases, either the police or the probation service have been asked to pursue breach action through the courts under section 38(2) of the Criminal Justice Act 1991.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what difficulties there have been with the equipment used to enforce home detention curfews, with particular reference to multi-storey dwellings, hostels and farms. [81953]

Mr. George Howarth: In a small number of cases, it was initially difficult to set curfew ranges for premises in multiple occupation or of unusual shape or size; but the contractors have been able to meet these problems by installing additional monitoring equipment, re-calibrating curfew ranges or restricting the curfewee to certain areas of the property.

Any address that is not technically suitable for monitoring will be reported to the Parole Unit of the Prison Service, which will consider whether to recall the offender to prison. To date, there have been no such reports.

Tooting and Wandsworth Police Stations

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of stop and search have been recorded at (a) Tooting and (b) Wandsworth police stations; and how many of these have led to arrests in each of the last three years. [81889]

Kate Hoey: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis tells me that Wandsworth and Tooting police stations are part of Wandsworth Division and it is not possible to break down the figures below divisional level. He has provided the following information:

Wandsworth Division

	1996	1997	1998
Stop and Searches	5,489	5,784	4,130
Arrests Resulting	522	551	386

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many ethnic minority police officers are currently stationed at (a) Tooting and (b) Wandsworth police stations. [81891]

Kate Hoey: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis tells me that, on 23 April 1999, there were four police officers from visible ethnic minorities stationed at Tooting Police Station and seven at Wandsworth Police Station.

European Elections (Voter Eligibility)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the eligibility of those overseas voters eligible to vote in the United Kingdom general elections to vote in the forthcoming European Parliament election. [81788]

Mr. George Howarth: Under the European Parliamentary Elections Act 1978, as amended, an overseas elector registered to vote at a parliamentary election is entitled to vote at an European Parliamentary election.

European Elections (Gibraltar)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the eligibility of holders of Gibraltarian passports to stand as candidates for the European Parliament if they are (a) residents of Gibraltar and (b) resident in the United Kingdom. [81787]

Mr. George Howarth: Under the European Parliamentary Elections Act 1978, as amended, the holder of a Gibraltarian passport, as a citizen of the Commonwealth, is eligible in the same way as a United Kingdom citizen to stand as a candidate for election to the European Parliament wherever he or she is resident.

European Elections (Commonwealth Citizens)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the eligibility of citizens of Commonwealth countries, other than United Kingdom citizens, who are resident in the United Kingdom and eligible to stand as candidates for the Parliament of the United Kingdom, to stand for election to the European Parliament. [81786]

Mr. George Howarth: I can confirm that, under the European Parliamentary Elections Act, 1978, as amended, a Commonwealth citizen is eligible in the same way as a United Kingdom citizen to stand as a candidate for election to the European Parliament wherever he or she is resident.

Macpherson Report

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to receive the report of the inquiry into the leaking of the Macpherson report. [81862]

Mr. Straw: I hope to receive the report shortly.

Telephone Services

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions the telephone preference scheme and the access overload control scheme have been used in each of the last 20 years; which categories of user were disconnected in each case; and if he will make a statement. [82445]

Mr. George Howarth: Since 1987, the preference scheme has been activated by British Telecom, in order to relieve congestion on the network, or to overcome other network problems, on the following occasions:

August 1987: Hungerford

October 1987: South East England

December 1988: Lockerbie

January 1990: Southern England

December 1990: Midlands

February 1993: Welford upon Avon

June 1993: Chadford.

On each occasion the public telephone service was restricted to essential users in the emergency services, central and local government, public call boxes and certain categories of people at risk, such as on kidney dialysis machines or in residential homes which have difficulties of access. Normal service was restored as soon as possible. Records prior to 1987 are no longer available.

The access overload control scheme was established in November 1989. The scheme has been activated on the following occasions:

December 1989: M6 Motorway

June 1990: Knebworth (invoked in error)

April 1997: Aintree

April 1997: Crewe

April 1997: Gatwick

April 1997: Leeds.

Priority was given, in each case, to the emergency services and other essential users. The general public continued to have access to the network, limited at times by the number of essential user calls being made.

Public Pay Telephones (Prostitutes Cards)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what consultation he has undertaken on developing new plans to combat the advertising of prostitutes in public pay telephones; and if he will make a statement; [82450]

(2) what plans he has to introduce new measures to combat the advertising of prostitutes in public pay telephones; and if he will make a statement. [82449]

Mr. George Howarth: As my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Home Department said, in his reply to the right hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire (Sir B. Mawhinney) on 22 April 1999, Official Report, column 669, the Home Office hopes to publish its consultation paper on new measures to tackle the problem of prostitutes' cards in telephone kiosks next month. The consultation paper will look at options for changing the law to enable those who put cards in telephone kiosks to be dealt with more effectively.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Electronic Locks

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee how much the electronic locks provided under the works vote for the House of Commons areas of the Parliamentary Estate cost; how many have been authorised for fitting; and if he will make a statement. [81992]

Sir Sydney Chapman: I understand that Serjeant at Arms wrote to my hon. Friend in December 1998 setting out the information on this subject as it stood at the time. I have asked the Serjeant at Arms to provide my hon. Friend with details of the current position and to place a copy of the letter in the Library.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Tourism

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what decision he has made about the new national body for tourism in England. [82544]

Mr. Chris Smith: On 14 December 1998 we announced in A New Cultural Framework that we would establish a new streamlined, more strategic body to support tourism in England. An Implementation Team was set up in January, supported by an Advisory Group representing the industry. We have now considered its report, which was received on 9 April and of which a copy has been placed today in the Libraries of both Houses. I am now able to announce more fully the details of the framework within which the new arrangements will operate under the leadership of a Chairman, whom I will shortly appoint.

The new body will be known as the English Tourism Council (ETC). Its prime role will be to provide strategic leadership to drive delivery of the national tourism strategy. It will have a parallel function as a centre of excellence supporting the industry in five key areas: research, in particular work on emerging markets and sectors; quality, including work on the accommodation schemes and also attractions and seaside resorts; overseeing systems for data collection and analysis; championing sustainable tourism, and wider access; and spreading news of innovative ideas and examples of best practice in all these areas of work.

There will be a significant switch of funding so that most is available for tourism in the regions and I want to see a new system for its distribution. This will enable a greater proportion of the strategy to be delivered at regional level and will secure enhanced benefits for tourism in the regions. The money will continue to be passed via the ETC to the Regional Tourist Boards (RTBs), except in the case of London where the Department will pass it directly to the Mayor of London, while recommending that the London Tourist Board is the most appropriate partner for delivery of the national strategy.

We are currently considering applications received for the post of Chairman of the ETC, whom we will announce as soon as a decision has been made. At present the Board consists of six other members and we intend to increase that to eight. Decisions on staffing will be for the Chairman and Chief Executive, but are likely to lead to a different structure with higher skilled staff and a new mode of working. The ETC is likely to relocate within Thames Tower, Hammersmith but, in due course or if the funds allocated for its transition allow, the organisation may decide to move to new premises.

Once the new Chairman and Chief Executive are in place, the ETC will be able to finalise its Strategic Action Plan and the Planning and Bidding Guidance for the Regional Tourist Boards on regional funding. We expect this to be possible by July, at which stage there will be a public launch of the new national body for tourism in England, one that has a far clearer and more focused remit than before and will be better equipped to maximise England's tourism interests. In the meantime, I am grateful to the current Chairman, Board members and staff at ETB who continue to provide a high standard of support for this vital industry.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Professional Statisticians

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many staff by grade are employed as professional statisticians in his Department; how many of these staff have been accepted as fast stream by the Civil Service Selection Board; and how many have been granted chartered statistician status by the Royal Statistical Society. [81200]

Mr. Morley: Statistical work is undertaken by a range of specialisms including Economists. Within this Department there are 2 Senior Civil Servants, 2 Grade 6s, 11 Grade 7s and 6 Assistant Statisticians employed as "professional" Statisticians, all of whom have been recruited via CSSB. In addition our Department employs 2 Statistical Officers.

Two officers have applied for and been granted chartered statistician status.

Silk Stream Flood Scheme

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the environmental assessment of the Silk Stream flood alleviation scheme to be completed; and if he will make a statement. [81748]

Mr. Morley: I understand that following consultation on the Scoping Report, the Environment Agency will be undertaking an environmental assessment of the Silk Stream flood alleviation scheme with a view to publishing an Environmental Statement for formal consultation in August 2000.

Haddock

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the 1999 haddock quota tonnage allocated to the United Kingdom and the total haddock quota tonnage available to the EU within EU and external waters. [81854]

Mr. Morley: The information requested is as follows:

Stock	EU quota (tonnes)	UK quota
EU waters
Area IIa, North Sea	69,680	57,045
Skagerrak and Kattegat, Area IIIb, c, d	3,675	0
Area Vb, VI, XII, XIV	19,000	15,110
Area VII, VIII, IX, X CECAF 34 1.1	26,990	4,590
External waters
Faroese zone	500	430
Norwegian zone (north of 62°N)	1,700	1,118
Norwegian zone (south of 62°N)	930	0
Total	122,475	78,293

Of which no more than 50,000 tonnes may be fished in the Norwegian zone

EU quota in Faroese waters is for cod and haddock combined and is not split for each species

Crop Sub-species

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the arrangements for the licensing of crop sub-species. [82047]

Mr. Rooker: There are no licensing arrangements for crop sub species.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Prosecutions (Hammersmith and Fulham)

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Attorney-General how many (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions there have been for crimes committed in the areas covered by (i) Hammersmith and (ii) Fulham police stations for the years (a) 1994, (b) 1995 and (c) 1996. [81685]

Kate Hoey: I have been asked to reply.

The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis tells me that the Metropolitan police does not collect prosecution or conviction data for individual divisions. They are, however, able to provide data which combine persons charged, summonsed and those receiving adult cautions:

	Number
Fulham Division
1994	998
1995	1,233
1996	1,049
Hammersmith Division
1994	1,648
1995	1,747
1996	1,372

NORTHERN IRELAND

Consultations (Postal Costs)

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will pay the postal costs of voluntary bodies and registered charities requested to respond to Government consultation documents; and if she will make a statement. [80915]

Mr. Paul Murphy: When voluntary bodies and registered charities are invited to respond to a consultation document, it is not standard practice to automatically meet the postal costs incurred. However, any individual request for reimbursement would be considered on its merit. Where a voluntary organisation receives a grant from the Department towards its central administration costs, it is not unreasonable to expect postal costs in responding to consultation documents to be met from that grant.

Lee Clegg (Trial Costs)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the cost to her Department of the original trial of Lee Clegg in 1993. [81125]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 19 April 1999]: It would be possible to answer this question only at disproportionate cost.

Paramilitary Violence

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if she will list for the week ended Saturday 17 April the number of violent incidents involving paramilitary groups which took place in Northern Ireland, indicating how many involved (a) Loyalist and (b) Republican groups; [81740]

(2) if she will list for the week ended Saturday 17 April the number of (a) punishment beatings and (b) punishment shootings which took place in Northern Ireland, indicating how many in each category were committed by (i) Loyalist and (ii) Republican groups. [81741]

Mr. Ingram: The number of security incidents during the period 11 April-17 April 1999 are as shown:

Shooting incidents: 1

Bombing incidents: 2.

The number of casualties as a result of paramilitary-style attacks during the period are as follows:

	Loyalist	Republican
Assaults	0	1
Shootings	0	1

Notes:

1. Figures may be subject to minor amendment.
2. The shooting and bombing incidents cannot as yet be firmly attributed to a grouping.

Advance Factories

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many advance factories have been built in Northern Ireland in each of the last two years and in which constituencies; and if she will make a statement on the policy of Her Majesty's Government regarding the provision of advance factories in Northern Ireland. [82000]

Mr. Ingram: The Industrial Development Board (IDB) build one advance factory in 1998–99. This is a high-tech unit of 5,400 sq m and is located at Duncairn Gardens in the North Belfast Constituency. IDB built no advance factories in 1997–98, but did build one specialised call centre of 2,800 sq m on a speculative basis at Springvale Business Park in the West Belfast Constituency.

Government policy is to reduce to a minimum IDB's stock of advance factories. Recent project experience has shown that IDB-led construction programmes can meet the requirements of the most demanding inward investors' timetables. Furthermore, there is an increased demand for bespoke factories. Flexibility to provide advance units will, none the less, be retained where such action is considered essential in attracting investment to particular disadvantaged areas.

CABINET OFFICE

Local Government Elections

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what discussions he (a) has had and (b) plans to have with the right hon. Member for Berwick-on-Tweed (Mr. Beith) on the introduction of proportional representation for local government elections. [81974]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: I have had no such discussions and have no current plans to have any.

Civil Servants (Ethnic Make-up)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the ethnic make-up was of civil servants in each Department on 1 April. [81934]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Information about the ethnic origin of civil servants is collected through voluntary, confidential questionnaires. Civil Service personnel statistics are collated and published annually for staff in post at 1 April by the Cabinet Office. The latest information, which is shown in the table, is for 1 April 1998.

New Deal (Young People)

Mr. Green: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many trainees on the New Deal for Young People were employed in (a) Her Majesty's Treasury, (b) the Home Office, (c) the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, (d) the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, (e) his Department, (f) the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, (g) the Department of Health, (h) the Department for International Development, (i) the Lord Chancellor's Department, (j) the Department of Social Security, (k) the Department of Trade and Industry, (l) the Scottish Office (m) the Welsh Office, and (n) the Northern Ireland Office, on 31 January. [82351]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave him on 2 March 1999, Official Report, column 609. Information on the numbers of those employed under the programme for 18 to 24-year-olds as at 31 January is not held centrally. My Department is currently collating figures which it has obtained from Departments showing the position at 1 April. I will write to the hon. Member with these in due course.

TREASURY

MIRAS

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals are currently in receipt of MIRAS. [70677]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 15 February 1999]: There are an estimated 10.6 million single people and married couples with mortgages in receipt of mortgage interest relief. About 10.3 million of these mortgages receive the relief through the MIRAS—mortgage interest relief at source—scheme.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the cost to the average taxpayer of the restriction of MIRAS to 10 per cent. in the 1997 Budget. [70676]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 15 February 1999]: The average cost to a taxpayer of the restriction of mortgage interest relief to 10 per cent. in the 1997 Budget is estimated to be about £36 in 1998–99.

Childcare Tax Credit

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the amount of childcare tax credit which will be claimed as a result of the provisions for the new category of childcare for eight to 14 year olds set out in the Tax Credits Bill; and if this estimate has been included in the Red Book just published. [78293]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 23 March 1999]: The cost of extending childcare eligible for the childcare tax credit in the Working Families Tax Credit is estimated to be under £5 million in 2000–01, the first full year of the tax credit.

The estimate was not included in the Budget 99 Red Book as the measure was tabled after the Budget.

Income Tax (Pensioners)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate how many people over the age of 65 years will have a marginal rate of income tax of (a) nil, (b) 10 per cent., (c) 20 per cent., (d) 23 per cent. and (e) 40 per cent. in (i) 1998–99 and (ii) 1999–2000; [79359]

(2) if he will estimate how many pensioners will have a marginal rate of income tax of (a) nil, (b) 10 per cent., (c) 20 per cent., (d) 23 per cent. and (e) 40 per cent. in 1999–2000. [79360]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 30 March 1999]: Estimates by marginal rates of income tax are shown in the table.

Thousand

Marginal rate (percentage)	Aged 65 and over 1998–99	Aged 65 and over 1999–2000	Pensionable ages 1999–2000

Correspondence

Mr. Brady: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will reply to the letters from Ms Sue Owen which were sent to him on 28 January and 22 March. [80651]

Dawn Primarolo: A letter in response to Ms Owen's first letter was sent on 22 March 1999. A reply to the second letter has been sent today.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Bolton, West (Ms Kelly) on 23 March 1999, Official Report, column 201, if he will estimate the number of (a) claimants of housing benefit who are of working age, (b) claimants of the working families tax credit and (c) current claimants of family credit, and the number and percentage of claimants of current family credit and future working families tax credit who also claim housing benefit. [80567]

Dawn Primarolo: The available information is contained in the tables:

Recipients of Family Credit and Housing Benefit in England, May 1998

	Number
Recipients of Housing Benefit where claimant is aged under 60 years	2,223,000
Recipients of Family Credit	654,000
Recipients of Family Credit and Housing Benefit	212,000
Percentage of Family Credit recipients with Housing Benefit	32 per cent.

PFI Initiative

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the Second Review of the Private Finance Initiative by Sir Malcolm Bates. [79782]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 13 April 1999]: I received Sir Malcolm's Review on 22 March. I will respond in due course.

VAT

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received on ending VAT on the Bleep Alarm Service; and if he will make a statement. [81368]

Dawn Primarolo: One representation has been received recently about VAT on a personal alarm. Personal and other bleep alarms which enable people with disabilities to alert specified people or control centres that they are in distress are already fully relieved from VAT when bought by disabled people and charities which serve their needs.

Direct Tax Rates

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list each of the possible direct tax rates for (a) individuals and (b) companies. [81705]

Dawn Primarolo: Rates of tax are set to raise revenue, with due regard to the Government's stated objectives of raising productivity, increasing employment opportunity and building a fairer Society.

By April 2000 Income Tax rates will have reduced to 10p, 22p and 40p.

By April 2000 Corporation Tax rates will have reduced to 10p, 20p and 30p.

Rates of Capital Gains Tax (CGT) and tax on savings income are 20p and 40p.

Inheritance Tax has a 40 per cent. rate.

Rates of tax on dividends are 10p and 32½ per cent.

Levels of personal allowances, higher rates of allowances for pensioners, the new Children's Tax credit, CGT taper relief, capital allowances and Individual Savings Accounts (ISAs) are just some examples of measures which mean that actual tax paid by taxpayers is much lower, and even negative in some cases.

Married Couples Allowance

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would have been the value to a basic rate taxpayer of the non-aged married couples allowance and the linked allowance in 1990 to 2000 if the allowance had been indexed every year since its introduction in 1990 and given at the basic rate of tax. [81727]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is given in the table:

	Indexed level of 1990–91 non-aged married couple's allowance (£)	Basic rate of income tax (per cent.)	Value to a basic rate taxpayer (£)
1990–91	1,720	25	430.00
1991–92	1,910	25	477.50
1992–93	1,990	25	497.50
1993–94	2,070	25	517.50
1994–95	2,110	25	527.50
1995–96	2,160	25	540.00
1996–97	2,250	24	540.50
1997–98	2,300	23	529.00
1998–99	2,390	23	549.70
1999–2000	2,470	23	568.10
2000–01	2,510	22	552.20

Queen's Counsel

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his Department's policy when (a) conducting legal proceedings and (b) seeking legal advice as to the circumstances in which Queen's Counsel should be instructed; and for each of the last three years (i) on how many occasions his Department instructed Queen's Counsel and (ii) what was the total cost of instructing Queen's Counsel. [81785]

Ms Hewitt: In determining the level of counsel to use either for legal proceedings or when seeking legal advice, the Treasury will consider the individual circumstances of each case. They will take into account, inter alia, the importance and sensitivity of the case, the complexity of the law, the weight and complexity of the evidence, and the degree of experience and expertise required before deciding whether to instruct Queen's Counsel or junior counsel.

The Treasury has instructed Queen's Counsel on four occasions in the last three years—twice in 1996–1997, once in 1997–1998 and once in 1998–1999. The total costs in the first three cases were £6,100; no fee note has yet been received in the latest case.

Inland Revenue

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 19 April 1999, Official Report, column 425, on the Inland Revenue, if he will list those circumstances referred to where it might become clear after the taxpayer had appealed against a section 19A notice that section 20 was in fact the more appropriate. [82204]

Dawn Primarolo: It is impossible to provide such a list; circumstances depend on cases, and there is an infinite number of actual and hypothetical cases. If the hon. Member has a specific example in mind I would be happy to respond if he would provide me with the relevant details.

Taxation

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 16 April 1999, Official Report, column 387, on income tax, how much tax an individual who pays a marginal rate of tax of 10 per cent. will have to pay as a result of making a covenanted payment to charity under an existing covenant in place prior to 5 April. [82202]

Dawn Primarolo: As has always been the case, covenantors will continue to be liable to pay tax at the basic rate on an amount of their income equal to the amount of the covenanted payment before deduction of tax. This applies whether the covenant existed at 5 April or is entered into after that date.

EU Budget

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much new money has been allocated to EU budget subsection B3 established in the first Supplementary Amending Budget (1999/211/EC-OJ L81, 26.3.99); and what is the policy of the Government in respect of that. [82233]

Ms Hewitt: 14.5 million ecus in payment appropriations were added to subsection B3 of the 1998 EC budget in the supplementary amending budget for 1998. These appropriations cover higher than expected payments in 1998 in respect of existing commitments. The Government agreed with this increase simply in order that the Community should be able to meet its existing obligations.

Advance Pricing Agreement

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the results of the advance pricing agreement consultation process. [82405]

Dawn Primarolo: Yes. In a Press Release dated 17 December 1998 comments were invited on draft clauses relating to Advance Pricing Agreements by 31 January 1999 and on a draft Statement of Practice by 31 March 1999. That Press Release stated that the Inland Revenue will provide feedback about the comments received, and that copies of comments will be made available on request.

Taxpayers

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of taxpayers who have taken advantage of (a) ESC D15, (b) ESC D16, (c) ESC D22 and (d) ESC D39 in (i) 1992–93, (ii) 1993–94, (iii) 1994–95, (iv) 1995–96, (v) 1996–97, (vi) 1997–98 and (vii) 1998–99. [82406]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Anti-avoidance Rule

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the results of the General Anti-avoidance Rule and Mini-GAAR consultation process. [82404]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor said in a Budget Day Press Release that the General Anti-avoidance Rule (GAAR) for corporate direct tax remains an option for the future if more targeted legislation proves ineffective in dealing with the problem of avoidance, but that the Government would not be proceeding with a GAAR in this Budget or with a mini-GAAR for VAT on construction services. The Chancellor has asked Customs to consider a mini-GAAR in the area of the VAT grouping facility.

The responses to the consultative documents (other than those made confidentially) may be inspected at the head offices of the Inland Revenue or Customs and Excise.

Tuition Fees

Mr. Green: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to introduce tax relief for tuition fees paid by mature students. [82328]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor announced in the Budget that the national framework for Individual Learning Accounts (ILAs) is to be launched in the year 2000. Under this framework, individuals will be able to obtain 20 per cent. discounts, rather than tax relief, on the first £500 a year of eligible learning which they pay for—with 80 per cent. discounts for certain key courses, including computer literacy. Contributions paid by employers into employees' ILAs will qualify for a deduction from taxable profits and will be tax and NICs free in the hands of their employees, provided employers contribute to the ILAs of their lowest paid workers on similar terms.

ILAs will replace vocational training relief (VTR), which is currently available to individuals paying for their own vocational training. In the Budget, VTR at the higher rate was withdrawn for payments made on or after 6 April 1999, and will be abolished completely some time in 2000–01.

There are no plans for ILAs to cover full-time courses or Higher Education tuition fees which are already subsidised by the taxpayer.

Sports Orders

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will revise Table C.1 of the Financial Statement and Budget report, March 1998, to take account of the timing of the implementation of the VAT (Sports, Sports Competitions and Physical Education) (No.2) Order 1998. [82310]

Dawn Primarolo: When the new order is laid before Parliament, the revenue effects will be included in the equivalent of Table 1B.1 of the Financial Statement and Budget Report March 1999, providing they are non-zero and non-negligible in the relevant years.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what organisations were consulted by Customs and Excise during the drafting of the VAT (Sport, Sports Competitions and Physical Education) (No. 2) Order 1998. [82318]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs have had discussions on the draft Value Added Tax (Sport, Sports Competitions and Physical Education) Order 1999 with the Central Council of Physical Recreation, the English Golf Union, the National Golf Clubs' Advisory Association and the Chartered Institute of Taxation.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he intends to implement the VAT (Sport, Sports Competitions and Physical Education) (No.2) Order 1998. [82317]

Dawn Primarolo: H.M. Customs and Excise are considering comments received on the draft Value Added Tax (Sport, Sports Competitions and Physical Education) Order 1999 published on 14 January 1999.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the annual difference in revenue raised between the VAT (Sport, Sports Competitions and Physical Education) Order 1998 and the VAT (Sport, Sports Competitions and Physical Education (No.2) Order 1998; and if he will make a statement. [82319]

Dawn Primarolo: An estimate will be made when an announcement is made about The Value Added Tax (Sport, Sports Competitions and Physical Education) Order 1999.

Fuel Smuggling

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the sums lost to the Revenue as a consequence of the smuggling of (i) petrol and (ii) diesel fuel into Northern Ireland from the Irish Republic in each quarter for each of the last three years and the current year up to 31 March. [82215]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 26 April 1999]: The collection of excise duty is the responsibility of HM Customs and Excise. Customs do not have sufficient reliable information on which to base a published estimate for the revenue lost to the Exchequer through such activity.

New Policies

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what new policies were announced by the Economic Secretary in her speech on Financial Exclusion at the Dorchester Hotel; what his policy is on appropriate venues for announcing new policies; and if he will make a statement. [82267]

Ms Hewitt: No new policies were announced.

Self-employed Builders

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to reduce the level of turnover for the 714c Certificate for self-employed builders in the construction industry scheme. [82484]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government have no plans to reduce the turnover thresholds which determine whether a self-employed builder is eligible for a gross payment certificate under the new construction industry scheme. The thresholds were established after full consultation with the representative bodies from all sectors of the construction industry, who broadly support them.

SCOTLAND

School Buildings

7. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what resources are being made available for school buildings and refurbishment in Scotland in the current financial year. [80995]

Mrs. Liddell: Of the £1.3 billion additional expenditure on education in Scotland over the next three years, £629 million is available for schools. Gross capital resources allocated to authorities for 1999–2000 amount to £377.3 million to cover all their non-housing capital programmes. Within these programmes, priority will be given to improving and replacing school buildings, consistent with the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review. In addition, £26.7 million is available directly under the New Deal for Schools.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

One-stop Clinics

15. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many one-stop NHS clinics are currently operating in Scotland. [81004]

Mr. Galbraith: There are now over 80 one-stop clinics in Scotland offering help for a wide range of worrying conditions.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Nuclear Waste

16. Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland to which Minister of the Crown an hon. Member should direct a question relating to the disposal of nuclear waste in England, originating from Coulport or Faslane and currently subject to his authorisation, after 1 July. [81005]

Mr. Dewar: Disposals of waste from Ministry of Defence premises are subject to letters of agreement between the regulator and the applicant. These will remain matters for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence. More generally, matters relating to the Radioactive Substances Act 1993 will be for the First Minister.

Haulage Industry

17. Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of the haulage industry in Scotland to discuss the state of the industry. [81006]

Mr. Macdonald: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland met representatives of the haulage industry and unions on Thursday 8 April to discuss the state of the industry.

18. Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has made to the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the economic consequences for Scotland of the recent rise in taxes affecting the road haulage industry. [81007]

Mr. Macdonald: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State meets regularly with my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer and discusses with him a range of issues which affect Scotland.

Drug Misuse Education

19. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the provision of drug misuse education in Scottish schools. [81008]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government provide extensive advice and support to schools on drug education within the curriculum; our recently published drugs strategy 'Tackling drugs in Scotland: Action in Partnership' will ensure that this reaches every pupil.

Ferry Fares

20. Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what meetings he has had with representatives of Caledonian MacBrayne to discuss this year's increases in ferry fares. [81009]

Mr. Macdonald: I met with the Chairman and Managing Director of Caledonian MacBrayne Ltd. on 20 October 1998 to discuss a number of matters, including the company's proposals on the level of fares increase. In November last year CalMac announced its fares increase for 1999–2000 of, on average, 2.7 per cent. This took effect in April and represents the lowest network-wide increase for 10 years.

Road Fuel Duty

21. Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the impact of the increase in road fuel duty on the Scottish economy. [81010]

Mr. Macdonald: Road fuel duty is a matter for the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The changes are part of a package of measures outlined in the Chancellor's recent Budget designed to create a climate of sustainable economic growth and long-term investment in business, both in Scotland and in the UK as a whole.

We are conscious that road fuel prices can be higher in remote rural areas. I have brought that difference in price to the attention of the Office of Fair Trading, who are currently investigating the matter. Last year the Chancellor provided £13.5 million over three years to provide for a Rural Transport Fund to extend the range of public transport services in rural communities. The fund will now be worth more than £14 million in the three years from 1998–99, to support better public transport in rural areas of Scotland and to help rural petrol stations meet the costs of tank replacement. The Chancellor also announced a reduction by £55 to £100 in Vehicle Excise Duty for smaller cars.

Licensing Laws

22. Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the impact of the liberalisation of the licensing laws in Scotland in the 1970s on the nation's health, crime levels and quality of life. [81011]

Mr. McLeish: Available research suggests that the percentage of the population Consuming alcohol in Scotland has not altered significantly since the introduction of the Licensing (Scotland) Act 1976. However, the Government's White Paper on Public Health, "Towards a Healthier Scotland", published in February identified an upward trend in excessive drinking among adults and young people. The Government's crime strategy document, "A Safer Scotland, Tackling Crime and Its Causes" recognised the need to explore the links between anti-social behaviour, crime and alcohol and the adverse health effects of alcohol misuse within the context of a new national strategy on alcohol. This will be developed and implemented by the newly formed Scottish advisory committee on alcohol misuse.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Freight Cargo (Prestwick)

24. Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will assess the economic benefit to Ayrshire of freight cargo transported from Glasgow Prestwick Airport. [81014]

Mr. Macdonald: The growth in freight cargo traffic at Glasgow Prestwick Airport in recent years has been impressive. The airport now handles more freight tonnage from wide-bodied freighter traffic than any other airport in the UK. The current freight services link Scotland with major points around the globe thus providing Scottish industries with direct, fast air links for import and export.

Modern Apprenticeship Scheme

26. Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the impact of the proposed expansion of the modern apprenticeship scheme. [81016]

Mr. Macdonald: We are well on the way to meeting the target of 15,000 Modern Apprenticeships by 2002 which was set in the Lifelong Learning Paper, "Opportunity Scotland". There are now 10,500 Modern Apprentices training, and 67 industry-designed frameworks in Scotland. Modern Apprenticeships will make an important contribution to raising skills in the work force.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Job Losses

27. Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the rate of job losses in Scotland in the current year. [81017]

Mr. Macdonald: The latest official figures on the number of employee jobs in Scotland are available from the Civilian Workforce Jobs Series for the period to December 1998. Seasonally adjusted data show that the number of employee jobs has increased by 38,000 between June 1997 and December 1998.

From 1 July 1999, economic development will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Voluntary Organisations

28. Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he has taken to ensure that voluntary organisations receive funding to enable them to continue the provision of services. [81018]

Mr. Galbraith: The importance of voluntary organisations in helping to deliver services is already recognised in the high level of funding which is provided by the Government. Scottish Office funding for the sector totals nearly £283 million a year, with £23 million in direct aid and a further £260 million provided through other funded agencies. These funds support organisations working in the fields of social welfare, health promotion, homelessness, the provision of social housing, rural poverty and urban deprivation.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Unemployment Statistics

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the latest unemployment figures for Scotland. [81012]

Mr. Macdonald: ILO unemployment (not seasonally adjusted) in Scotland fell by 5,000 over the year to December 1998-February 1999 to 179,000. The rate of ILO unemployment fell by 0.1 percentage points to 7.2 per cent.

Kvaerner Group

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he is taking to protect the jobs of those currently employed in the Kvaerner group in Scotland. [81015]

Mr. Macdonald: A Task Force has been established to identify potential purchasers of the shipyard at Govan, the engineering works at Clydebank and any other Scottish business affected by the Kvaerner announcement and to report its findings to the Scottish Office.

Sir Gavin Laird is chairing the Task Force. Other members are Mr. David Smith, former Commercial Director of the Govan shipyard, Mr. Malcolm Clark, former President of Keystone International in the USA, and Mr. Bill Scott, former Director of Ferguson Shipbuilders Ltd. The work of the Task Force will be given the full support of the Scottish Office and it will be able to call on whatever additional and specialist support it requires. Kvaerner has given a commitment to give the Task Force its wholehearted support.

Women's Refuges

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money he has allocated to the provision of women's refuges over the past three years. [80997]

Mrs. Liddell: Local authorities are responsible for the financial support of women's refuges as they are best placed to consider the priorities and care needs of the population within their area. The Government have provided substantial resources to enable authorities to meet their social work and housing responsibilities. In addition, we have provided £200,000 under the Urban Programme (now the Social Inclusion Partnership Fund) in the three years to March 1998 specifically for Council support of women's refuges.

In the three years to March 1999, the Scottish Office provided grants of over £664,000 to Scottish Women's Aid, the national voluntary organisation to which the majority of local women's aid refuges are affiliated. We provided an additional £150,000 earlier this year following the public response to the recent domestic abuse advertising campaign.

From 1 July 1999, these matters will be for the Scottish Parliament.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Lockerbie

33. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list his responsibilities in relation to the trial of the Lockerbie suspects in the Netherlands following the transfer of powers to the Scottish Parliament. [81023]

Mr. Hoon: I have no responsibilities in relation to the Lockerbie trial. The transfer of powers to the Scottish Parliament will not affect that position.

Judicial Review (Hearings)

34. Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the Government's proposals to enable judicial review hearings to be heard in regional centres outside London. [81024]

Mr. Hoon: As of 1 July, judicial review cases involving Welsh devolution issues could be initiated and heard in Wales. On 22 March the Lord Chancellor announced a Review of whether judicial review cases should be heard in regional centres outside London.

Shrievalty (Reform)

35. Mr. David Heath: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to reform the shrievalty. [81025]

Mr. Hoon: Sheriffs have a role in the enforcement of High Court judgments. A review of enforcement is currently being undertaken by this Department, which will examine that role in some detail, particularly during the Review's second stage, starting in June 2000 Any proposals affecting the Sheriffs will be subject to public consultation.

Small Claims Court

36. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of small claims court procedures. [81027]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor's Department commissioned research into the small claims procedure from Professor John Baldwin. This was published in December 1997. Professor Baldwin found that at least three quarters of the litigants interviewed, who had been involved in small claims, were content with the way their cases had been handled in court. This included some who had lost their cases as well as those who had won.

Queen's Counsel (Appointments)

39. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the shortest time a barrister has spent in practice before being appointed a QC since 1969. [81031]

Mr. Hoon: According to available departmental records, the shortest period that has elapsed, since 1969, between the date to call to the Bar of England and Wales and the award of Queen's Counsel is six years. This applicant, however, had previously spent many years in practice in another jurisdiction.

Personal Injury Cases

40. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what action the Government are taking to ensure adequate insurance cover for fees to undertake personal injury cases. [81032]

Mr. Hoon: Insurance products have been available for almost four years and at least 55,000 policies have been issued in that period. In the last 18 months more products have emerged, including one by a major insurers in the last month.

I and my officials continue to hold discussions with the insurance industry to enable them to take decisions about whether to create newer, even better products. I am satisfied that people with good personal injury claims will be able to secure insurance to underpin a conditional fee agreement offered by their lawyer.

Judiciary (Interests)

41. Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will introduce a register of interests for the judiciary. [81033]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor has no present plans to introduce a register of interests for the judiciary.

Court Proceedings

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he is taking to make court proceedings less formal. [81028]

Mr. Hoon: The Government are aiming to create an open, fair and accessible justice system. In civil proceedings, the civil justice reforms, introduced yesterday, will provide rules in plain English; extend the simple and informal small claims procedure, and encourage greater use of alternative dispute resolution.

In criminal proceedings, the Government are considering ways to help change the culture in the youth courts, to make them less adversarial and more understandable for those involved. The Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Bill contains a number of measures directed at enabling vulnerable or intimidated witnesses to give their best evidence. These include the power to order the removal of wigs and gowns where appropriate.

Legal Aid

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the proportion of the legal aid budget in 1998–99 spent on individual cases of exceptionally high cost. [81030]

Mr. Hoon: Assessing the proportion of the legal aid budget spent during any particular financial year on individual cases of exceptionally high costs would not provide any useful analysis, since payments are spread over the lifetime of a case, which may extend to a number of years. Additionally, a civil case may not result in any cost to the Fund if, at the end of the case, all costs and damages are recovered.

Monmouth County Court

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what proposals he has to close Monmouth County Court; and what representations he has received opposing these proposals. [81856]

Mr. Hoon: On 8 March 1999, the Lord Chancellor granted permission to open public consultation, over a two month period, on a proposal to close Monmouth County Court. As at 21 April, 4 representations had been received, 3 of which oppose the proposal to close.

Judges' Council

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department from what funds the (a) costs of administration and (b) expenses of members the Judges' Council are met; and, for each of its last three years, what was the total cost of the Judges' Council. [82340]

Mr. Hoon: The secretariat for the Judges' Council is provided by the Lord Chief Justice's Private Office as a small part of its regular duties. The costs are not identifiable separately. No expenses are payable to members of the Judges' Council.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) if he will make a statement on the process of appointments of members of the Judges' Council; [82338]

(2) if he will list the members of the Judges' Council, indicating their positions; [82337]

(3) to whom the Judges' Council is accountable; and if he will make a statement. [82350]

Mr. Hoon: The Judges' Council is an independent body without a formal constitution. It has no statutory basis, exercises no executive functions and controls no public expenditure. It meets to discuss issues of concern to the senior judiciary and to represent the views of the senior judiciary to the Lord Chancellor and other individuals and bodies. It is wholly independent of Government and is accountable only to those whose views it represents. Its membership is a matter for the Council itself and those whose views it represents.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what (a) instructions and (b) advice has been issued by the Judge's Council concerning membership of pressure groups as a disqualification from sitting as a judge; what pressure groups have been identified by the Judges' Council in such instructions and advice; and if he will make a statement. [R] [82339]

Mr. Hoon: The Judges' Council does not issue instructions to anyone. I understand that it has recently, on request, given advice to individual part-time judges about declaring their membership of particular professional organisations, in any case where such membership might give rise to a potential conflict of interest. The Council is wholly independent of Government and any advice it may offer to others is not a matter for the Lord Chancellor's Department.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Kosovo

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what has been the value of humanitarian aid provided to Kosovan refugees organised or administered by her Department (a) from October 1998 to 23 March and (b) since 23 March; and what plans she has to increase the scope of humanitarian assistance. [81943]

Mr. Foulkes: We committed £3 million for the period June 1998 to March 1999 for programmes of humanitarian assistance to displaced persons and refugees affected by the conflict in Kosovo. No additional allocations were made between October 1998 and 23 March 1999. Since March 23, the Government have committed a further £20 million for assistance to the Kosovo refugees.

Our field offices in Tirana and Skopje are currently identifying priorities for future assistance. We are also ready to provide help for those in need within Kosovo as soon as secure access can be guaranteed.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimate her Department has made of the number of refugees who (a) left Kosovo up to 24 March and (b) have left Kosovo since 24 March; and what sources it uses to make such estimates. [81920]

Mr. Foulkes: Our primary source for estimates of refugee numbers is the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. It estimates that 69,500 refugees left Kosovo for neighbouring states as a result of internal conflict up to 24 March 1999: and that a further 530,500 have left since 24 March, as at 26 April.

Zimbabwe (AIDS)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance she is giving to the Government of Zimbabwe to help them to combat AIDS. [81858]

Mr. Foulkes: Our programme in Zimbabwe includes major projects for the supply and social marketing of male and female condoms, and training health workers in treatment and prevention of sexually transmitted diseases. We are also supporting a community-based AIDS awareness programme known as "Stepping Stones". We welcome President Mugabe's recognition of the AIDS issues in his Independence Day speech, and the establishment of a National AIDS Coordinating Council. This will provide a basis for discussions of further support, consistent with our new Country Strategy Paper.

Departmental Legal Business

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her Department's policy when (a) conducting legal proceedings and (b) seeking legal advice as to the circumstances in which Queen's Counsel should be instructed; and for each of the last three years (i) on how many occasions her Department instructed Queen's Counsel and (ii) what was the total cost of instructing Queen's Counsel. [81768]

Mr. Foulkes: The Crown Prosecution Service, the Treasury Solicitor's Department, the Serious Fraud Office and the Legal Secretariat to the Law Office predominantly use Junior Counsel when it is necessary to instruct counsel to provide legal advice or to conduct legal proceedings.

In civil cases, the two First Treasury Counsel are both Junior Counsel and they will advise and represent the Government without a Queen's Counsel in many of their important cases. In addition, the Attorney-General maintains four panels of Junior Counsel whom departments are expected to use for the majority of the government's civil litigation. The Attorney-General's, or Solicitor-General's, approval is required before a Queen's Counsel can be instructed to appear for any Government Department in civil litigation.

A panel of Senior Treasury Counsel and the Junior Treasury Counsel, who are all Junior Counsel, exists in London to provide advice in more significant criminal case work, and to handle most serious and complex work at the Central Criminal Court. More generally, the Crown Prosecution Service maintains circuit-based lists of Junior Counsel to conduct almost all its criminal casework in the Crown Court in England and Wales. Outside London, Queen's Counsel are instructed in all contested murder cases, and occasionally in other very serious or complex casework prosecuted by the Crown.

In determining the level of counsel to use, the Department will consider the individual circumstances of each case. It will take into account, inter alia, the importance and sensitivity of the case, and the complexity of the law, the weight and complexity of the evidence, and the degree or experience and expertise required before deciding whether to instruct Queen's Counsel or Junior Counsel.

The number of occasions on which the Department for International Development has instructed Queen's Counsel in the last three years, and the cost of doing so, cannot be given without incurring disproportionate cost.

Organ Transplants (Living Donors)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps she is taking to prevent the sale of human body parts from living donors; and what assessment she has made of the prevalence of this practice. [81859]

Mr. Foulkes: The World Health Organisation regulates the use of human organs for transplantation. The Department has no information on the prevalence of the practice of selling human body parts from living donors.

Overseas Debt

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much debt was owed to her Department by each individual debtor country at 31 December 1998. [82006]

Mr. Foulkes: The debts outstanding to the Department for International Development as of 31 December 1998 are as follows:

Country	Principal	Interest	Total
Antigua and Barbuda	1,687	—	1,687
Belize	11,928	—	11,928
Brazil	1,692	382	2,074
Cameroon	67	—	67
Cayman Islands	188	—	188
Colombia	170	—	170
Costa Rica	766	93	859
Cyprus	131	—	131
Ecuador	7,783	3,935	11,718
India	5,806	—	5,806
Jamaica	29,133	10,576	39,709
Liberia	77	1	78
Malaysia	2,903	282	3,185
Nigeria	4,907	24	4,931
Paraguary	1,874	—	1,874
Phillipines	2,702	145	2,847
Seychelles	7,886	824	8,710
St. Kitts	2,303	—	2,303
St. Vincent	3,421	—	3,421
Swaziland	1,538	—	1,538
Turkey	24,016	4,771	28,787
Zimbabwe	11,334	557	11,891
Total	122,312	21,590	143,902

Our Department has cancelled the debts of over 30 countries, worth over £1.2 billion since 1978. In September 1997, we launched the Commonwealth Debt Initiative, announcing that we were willing to cancel the remaining aid debt due to the UK from lower income Commonwealth countries to those countries which are committed to the International Development Goals and are following sound economic policies which benefit the poor, and which promote responsive and accountable government, encourage transparency and bear down on corruption.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 28 April 1999

PRIME MINISTER

Arms Ban (Yugoslavia)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on UK participation in the enforcement of the arms ban on the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, set out in UN Security Council Resolution 1160. [82294]

The Prime Minister: The United Kingdom fully supports the UN arms embargo on the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, which was imposed by UNSCR 1160. The embargo is implemented in the UK by means of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (United Nations Sanctions) Order 1998 and is rigorously enforced.

In addition, the UK participates in international monitoring of the arms embargo through the European Community Monitoring Mission (ECMM).

Al Shifa Factory

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place in the Library his answer to the letter from Mr. Tim Pendry of 29 March concerning the Al Shifa factory. [81906]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 26 April 1999]: I have asked the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to reply on my behalf. A copy of Mr. Fatchett's reply will be placed in the Library in due course.

European Council (Accountability)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister what is his (a) policy towards and (b) definition of full accountability and absolute transparency in the European Commission, as set out as future Commission policy by President-nominate Prodi; and what representations he has made on the subject. [82478]

The Prime Minister: The Government agree with Mr. Prodi that the European Commission should be made more accountable, more transparent and more efficient. Achieving this will require a fundamental overhaul of the commission's financial control systems, as well as reform of its personnel policies and its management structures.

We have already shared specific reform ideas with partners. Heads of State and Government discussed plans for reform with Mr. Prodi on 14 April. They will continue their discussions on the basis of proposals put forward by Mr. Prodi at the Cologne European Council in June.

Europe Day

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister what activities are planned by (a) the Government and (b) the European Commission in the United Kingdom to mark Europe Day. [82476]

The Prime Minister: On Europe Day, 9 May, the European flag will fly alongside the Union Jack from Government buildings and in Parliament Square.

As on Europe Day every year, the European Commission Representation in the United Kingdom will be holding a reception.

NATO

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his statement of 26 April 1999, Official Report, columns 21–36, what are the elements of the new membership action plan for aspiring members of NATO. [82627]

The Prime Minister: The elements of the Membership Action Plan are set out in NATO Press Communique NAC-S(99)66, which was deposited in the Library of the House on 26 April.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Wednesday 28 April. [82048]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with Ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I will have further such meetings later today.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Department Legal Business

Mr. Dismore: To ask the President of the Council if she will make a statement on her Department's policy when (a) conducting legal proceedings and (b) seeking legal advice as to the circumstances in which Queen's Counsel should be instructed; and for each of the last three years (i) on how many occasions his Department instructed Queen's Counsel and (ii) what was the total cost of instructing Queen's Counsel. [81763]

Mrs. Beckett: The Privy Council Office rarely, if ever, institutes legal proceedings, but is from time to time required to respond to proceedings initiated by third parties. In such cases the Department would be advised by the Treasury Solicitor's Department on the need to instruct counsel. However, there have been no recent instances (and none within the last three years) when it has been necessary to instruct counsel on behalf of my Department.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Digital Television

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate he has made of when digital terrestrial television will reach (a) 70 per cent., (b) 80 per cent. and (c) 90 per cent. of the population. [82150]

Janet Anderson: Responsibility for the delivery of digital terrestrial television (DTT) services in the UK rests with the BBC and ITC. The Launch phase for DTT, which comprises 81 transmitters, is expected to be rolled out by the year 2000. The table gives the existing and final predicted coverage for each multiplex.

		Percentage
Multiplex	Existing coverage	Final predicted coverage
BBC Multiplex	75.6	90
Digital Channels 3 and 4	75.5	89
SDN and Channel 5	75.0	88
ONdigital (Mux B)	74.2	86
ONdigital (Mux C)	65.7	77
ONdigital (Mux D)	62.2	73

Cable Television

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what percentage of the land area of urban England is cabled. [82151]

Janet Anderson: I understand from the Independent Television Commission that over 53 per cent. of all homes in England now have cable available to them. This represents 57 per cent. of homes in urban England.

Millennium Company (Sponsorship)

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is the total amount of cash receipts in sponsorship received by the Millennium Company up to 31 March. [81744]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 26 April 1999]: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for East Surrey (Mr. Ainsworth) on 21 April 1999, Official Report, columns 577–78.

BBC (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to set targets for the BBC in relation to the employment of Black and Asian people. [82325]

Janet Anderson: We have no such plans. The BBC is required to comply with employment and equal opportunities law and to report annually, in its Annual Report and Accounts, on compliance with the legal requirements. The Annual Report also provides details of progress towards meeting the ethnic targets set by the BBC's Board of Governors and on the proportion of ethnic minorities in management.

Chelsea Football Club

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what meetings the Minister for Sport has had since May 1997 with officials of Chelsea Football Club in his official capacity; and if he will list them. [81802]

Mr. Banks: As Minister for Sport, I have attended a number of events where Chelsea officials were present, and I have met officials from the club on the following occasions.

8 July 1997:

Meeting with David Blunkett to discuss a Study Centre linked to the Premier League (also in attendance was the President of Brazil and the then Brazilian Sports Minister, Pele). Representatives from many of the Premiership Clubs were in attendance, including Ken Bates, Chairman of Chelsea Football Club.

8 September 1997:

Meeting with Steve Keen, Lee Deegan, Leslie Smith and Colin Moore to discuss Chelsea Disabled Football Club.

I have very good relations with Mr. Bates and frequent discussions with him. In his role as an FA representative, he was involved in the discussions this Department had about the development of Wembley Stadium.

As part of the FA's Campaign to secure the 2006 World Cup, I have met with a number of FIFA Executive Committee members in this country and have accompanied some of them to Chelsea Football Club to tour the ground and view the impressive facilities there and at Chelsea Village.

World Cup

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with FIFA about the suitability of English stadiums for the World Cup 2006 bid. [81804]

Mr. Banks: None. FIFA has well-established criteria for World Cup host venues.

As the hon. Member may be aware, the Football Association is required to nominate between eight and 12 stadiums as host venues in the bid document, which it will be submitting to FIFA in July. These stadiums will be subject to inspection by a FIFA Inspection Committee at the end of this year.

I understand that, following a detailed survey of potential venues, the Football Association has identified 15 stadiums which fulfil the FIFA criteria for World Cup venues and a further five that have the potential to be redeveloped in the run-up to the staging of the 2006 World Cup to meet the criteria.

The FA are, therefore, well placed to meet FIFA's stadium requirements. This bears testimony to the £565 million which football clubs in this country have spent on the redevelopment of their grounds over the past ten years, helped by £160 million from the Football Trust as a result of the reduction in Pool Betting Duty concession.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Herbicide-resistant Crops

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the effects of the introduction of herbicide-resistant crops on vulnerable species of birds. [80792]

Mr. Meacher: I am aware that many species of farmland bird are in decline in Britain and so I take very seriously the potential effect that the introduction of herbicide-resistant crops might have on these vulnerable species.

The Government have undertaken to fund a four year research programme into the effect of the management of genetically modified herbicide-resistant crops on farmland wildlife as announced in my answer on 15 April 1999, Official Report, columns 301–02. These farm-scale evaluations will begin in spring 1999 and will consider spring and winter-sown oil seed rape and maize. The research programme will concentrate on monitoring the diversity and abundance of plants and invertebrates in GM herbicide-resistant crops compared with conventionally managed non-GM equivalents. It is not planned that birds will be included in the monitoring programme. However, existing research has been able to demonstrate connections between some bird populations and, for example, weed and insect abundance in crops. In this way, the results of the plant and invertebrate monitoring will be used to predict whether an adverse affect on bird populations is likely to occur.

Charities (Postal Costs)

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will pay the postal costs of voluntary bodies and registered charities requested to respond to Government consultation documents; and if he will make a statement. [80920]

Mr. Meale: Numerous responses have been received to my Department's consultation documents and we are grateful to the many organisations and individuals who have taken the time to let us have their views. My Department has no plans to pay postal costs incurred by organisations that responded.

Departmental Legal Business

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his Department's policy when (a) conducting legal proceedings and (b) seeking legal advice as to the circumstances in which Queen's Counsel should be instructed; and for each of the last three years (i) on how many occasions his Department instructed Queen's Counsel and (ii) what was the total cost of instructing Queen's Counsel. [81770]

Mr. Meale: The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions predominately uses junior counsel when it is necessary to instruct counsel to provide legal advice, as does the Treasury Solicitor when instructing counsel in court proceedings involving the Department.

The two First Treasury Counsel are both junior counsel and they will advise and represent the government without a Queen's Counsel in many of its important civil cases. In addition, the Attorney-General maintains four panels of junior Counsel whom departments are expected to use for the majority of the government's civil litigation. The approval of the Attorney-General or the Solicitor-General is required before a Queen's Counsel can be instructed to appear for any government department in civil litigation.

In determining the level of counsel to use (whether in connection with civil or criminal proceedings, or the provision of legal advice), the department will consider the individual circumstances of each case. It will take into account, amongst other things, the importance and sensitivity of the case, the complexity of the law, the weight and complexity of the evidence, and the degree of experience and expertise required before deciding whether to instruct Queen's Counsel or junior counsel.

The information as to cost is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

M4 (A38 Bridge)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will investigate the quality of repairs undertaken by the Highways Agency to the A38 Bridge over the M4 at Almondsbury in 1998; and if he will make a statement. [81956]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The repairs carried out in 1998 to the A38 bridge over the M4 at Almondsbury included road resurfacing and strengthening works necessary to ensure that the structure remained safe for future use.

The Highways Agency was not satisfied with the surfacing laid by the contractor and negotiations have led to that surface being replaced at no expense to the taxpayer. The repair work began on 19 April and subject to weather conditions should be completed within 2 weeks.

Congestion Charging

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he last met representatives of the RAC to discuss congestion charging. [82255]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Ministers from the Department meet representatives of the Royal Automobile Club from time to time to discuss matters arising out of the Integrated Transport White Paper. The last such meeting, which was attended by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Transport, was on 19 January 1999.

Road Stress Maps

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans the Highways Agency has to update the existing motorway and trunk road stress maps. [82258]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Highways Agency intends to publish in its 1998–99 Annual Report a map derived from Trafficmaster data showing congested sections of its network.

New stress maps for the motorway and trunk road network based upon a calculation of traffic flow and capacity will be published when the data for 1998 are available later this year.

A13

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what monitoring of air quality has been conducted, and what were the results thereof, in relation to the A13 and abutting residential areas, from the vicinity of Dagenham Dock to Central London; and if he will make a statement. [82034]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 26 April 1999]: Local air quality studies of the existing levels of pollutants were undertaken by the Highways Agency in 1992 and in 1998 in order to assess the potential effect of the proposed junction improvement schemes for this section of the A13. The most recent monitoring data were gathered in the vicinity of the A13/A112 Prince Regent Lane junction for the period January to May 1998. The pollutants monitored were Carbon Monoxide, PM10, Nitrogen Dioxide, Benzene and 1–3 Butadiene.

When compared with National Air Quality Strategy (NAQS) objectives, to be achieved in 2005, the monitoring data indicate that the objective for PM10 (50 microgrammes per cubic metre as a running 24 hour mean) is currently exceeded. However, as a non-standard measuring method was used, the scale of this likely exceedence cannot be certain. The 99 percentile of a running 24 hour mean over the monitoring period was 113 microgrammes per cubic metre at the roadside. Mean Nitrogen Dioxide measurements exceeded the value of the NAQS annual mean objective (21 ppb) and were made using the standard method. The mean roadside concentration was 38 ppb. It is therefore possible that the 2005 objective is currently exceeded but a longer period of monitoring would be needed to confirm this. Monitoring of the other pollutants indicated current levels below the 2005 objectives.

Local authorities are currently monitoring air quality more generally in their areas as part of the local air quality management process, with the aim of achieving the objectives of the NAQS by the year 2005. Where a local authority's review and assessment of local air quality indicates that air quality objectives are not likely to be met, then local authorities must declare Air Quality Management Areas. For each Air Quality Management Area, the local authority must draw up an action plan, setting out measures through which the objectives may be achieved.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what information he has obtained about the speed of traffic movements, congestion and impediments to mobility at peak times on the A13 from the vicinity of Dagenham Dock to Central London; and if he will make a statement; [82033]

(2) if he will convene a meeting of representatives of the Highways Agency, the London boroughs and the Traffic Section of the Metropolitan Police to examine what interim measures could be introduced to minimise traffic congestion and to maximise mobility in the westbound section of the A13 from the vicinity of Dagenham Dock to Central London; and if he will make a statement; [82031]

(3) what assessment his Department has made of the frequency and scale of congestion on the westbound A13 section from the vicinity of Dagenham Dock to Central London; and if he will make a statement. [82032]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 26 April 1999]: As these questions relate to operational matters, I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Lawrie Haynes, to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Andrew Mackinley, dated April 1999:

Thank you for the Parliamentary Questions that you have tabled on the subjects of congestion, traffic speeds, and mobility on the A13 from Dagenham Dock to Central London. As these are operational matters they have been passed to the Highways Agency for me to reply.

Traffic congestion on the A13, particularly during peak periods, is undoubtedly a problem. The Highways Agency employs a number of methods to monitor congestion on trunk roads such as the A13. These include the formulation of traffic stress maps (Narnas) which were reproduced in the Roads Review report "A New Deal for Trunk Roads in England". A copy of this document has been placed in the House of Commons library and I enclose copies of the London maps for your information. We are developing various ways of monitoring congestion from day to day including analysing data from traffic loops installed in the road and data supplied by Trafficmaster. However, none of these newer systems is yet in operation on the A13.

Traffic speed on the A13 is also an issue. Traffic speeds are monitored by DETR in a programme of speed surveys. Surveys of traffic speeds on the A13 were last carried out in 1995 and 1998. Although the 1998 survey results have not yet been published, provisional indications are that there has been a substantial fall in average speeds during peak times on the A13 between these two dates. This suggests that journey times are getting worse and congestion is increasing on the A13.

We hold regular meetings with representatives of the relevant London Boroughs to discuss the operation, maintenance and management of the A13 with the aim of making the best use of the available road space, to minimise congestion and maximise mobility. This is achieved by implementing a number of policies including ensuring that maintenance is carried out at off-peak times, undertaking small improvement schemes at junctions and optimising traffic signal timings. Acting as our maintaining agents the Boroughs also regularly meet officers from the Metropolitan Police to discuss these issues.

Demand for road space on the A13 does exceed capacity, particularly at peak times. We have nearly completed the construction of a major new route for the A13 extending from Dagenham Dock out to the M25 which will be fully open to traffic later this year. In addition tenders are being assessed for the A13 Thames Gateway Design, Build, Finance, and Operate (DBFO) project as part of the Government's roads programme. This project includes major junction reconstruction schemes at Movers Lane, the A117 near Beckton Alps and Ironbridge to Canning Town, which have been designed to ease congestion and reduce accidents on the A13 between Dagenham Dock and Central London. Subject to a satisfactory tender being accepted they are likely to be completed within five years of the letting of the DBFO contract, due to incentives provided to the DBFO company to programme the schemes early in their contract.

I hope that I have answered your questions to your satisfaction.

Landing Rights

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will make a statement on bilateral discussions on landing rights between India and the UK; [82285]

(2) what representations he has received concerning landing rights for British airlines in India. [82284]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Representations have been received from UK scheduled and charter airlines and passengers concerning the restrictive nature of the air services arrangements between the United Kingdom and India. British Airways wishes to operate additional services to India and Virgin Atlantic also wishes to enter the UK-India market but neither can do so because there is insufficient capacity under the UK/India air services arrangements. In addition, we have received reports that there has been overbooking on UK-India services and a significant number of passengers are having to travel by indirect routes.

We have been seeking to liberalise the arrangements. The last round of bilateral discussions took place in December 1996. Talks scheduled for September 1997 were postponed at the request of the Indian authorities. Despite repeated representations from the UK Government, no dates have been agreed for the next round of bilateral discussions.

SSSIs

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the sites of special scientific interest that have been subject to inappropriate development since May 1997. [82495]

Mr. Meale: The English Nature Annual Report includes lists of all SSSIs damaged by development. Copies are available in the Library of the House covering the period up to 31 March 1998. Full information for the last financial year is not yet available.

Not all development on a site should be classed as inappropriate. English Nature will provide advice to local authorities on moving harmful development away from sensitive locations or imposing conditions on planning applications to remove or reduce adverse effects on SSSIs, in order to safeguard the special interest.

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will issue guidance to local authorities on their powers in relation to the holding of major sports events in areas of special scientific interest. [82354]

Mr. Raynsford: Once a Site of Special Scientific Interest is notified, the land manager must consult English Nature on any activity likely to damage the features of special interest. For those activities requiring planning permission, guidance is provided for local planning authorities in Planning Policy Guidance Note 9, in relation to SSSIs and to other locally important wildlife sites.

Great Western Trains

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many passengers travelled on the lines currently run by Great Western Trains in each of the last 10 years. [82499]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The figures for passenger miles and passenger journeys for each of the last five years are shown in the table. Figures for the five years before that are not available.

million

Year	Passenger miles	Passenger journeys
1993–94	1,218	14
1994–95	1,139	14
1995–96	1,211.4	14.4
1996–97	1,270	15

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many trains operated by Great Western Trains were cancelled in each of the last two years; and if he will estimate the number of passengers affected by these cancellations. [82493]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Figures in the Franchising Director's Quarterly Bulletin (December 1998)—copies in the House Library—show that for the year ending December 1997 0.6 per cent. of trains were cancelled by Great Western Trains and that for the year ending December 1998 the figure was 1 per cent. It is not possible to estimate the number of passengers affected by these cancellations as these are walk-on services.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the timetable for the Government's negotiations with Great Western Trains for the extension, or termination, of their franchise. [82497]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Great Western Trains Limited franchise agreement is for a period of 10 years from 4 February 1996. We made it clear at the Rail Summit in February that we are prepared to renegotiate existing franchises if operators come forward with proposals which offer substantial benefits for passengers and value for money for the taxpayer. There is no timetable for this either generally or in respect of Great Western Trains specifically.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many staff were employed on the lines currently operated by Great Western Trains in each of the last 10 years. [82494]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The information requested is not available. Under the present franchise agreements, Train Operating Companies' (TOCs) performance is measured on prescribed outputs such as service levels. Inputs such as numbers of staff employed are matters for the TOCs.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proportion of trains operated by Great Western Trains have been more than five minutes late in each of the last two years; and what was the average total delay on those trains. [82496]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The information is not available in the format requested. The Franchising Director was requested to base his assessment of lateness on those applied under British Rail immediately before privatisation. For InterCity trains, such as those operated by Great Western Trains, the definition of lateness was a train that arrived at its destination more than 9 minutes and 59 seconds late.

The figures in the latest issue of the Franchising Director's Quarterly Bulletin (December 1998)—copies in the House Library—show that the proportion of trains recorded as late (against the above definition) for the year ending December 1997 was 13.3 per cent. and for the year ending December 1998 was 15.5 per cent. Figures for average total delay are not recorded.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list (a) the rates of investment in the infrastructure, rolling stock and passenger services on the lines currently run by Great Western Trains in each of the last 10 years and (b) the planned investment for each of the next 10 years. [82498]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This information is not available.

Motor Events

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will take steps to require environmental impact assessments to be undertaken before motorised sporting events and rallies may take place in the countryside. [82353]

Mr. Raynsford: There are no provisions in the regulations implementing Directive 85/337/EEC (as amended by Directive 97/11/EC) on the assessment of the effects of certain public and private projects on the environment to carry out an assessment of these events and rallies, and there are no plans to introduce such regulations.

Genetically Modified Crops

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the report leaked from his Department on the impact of genetically modified crops on wildlife and the environment; and if he will make a statement. [72759]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 25 February 1999]: The discussion paper "The Commercial use of Genetically Modified Crops in the United Kingdom: the Potential Wider Impact on Farmland Wildlife" prepared by the Secretariat for the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment (ACRE) was published on 18 February 1999. The paper may be found on ACRE's website (www.environment.detr.gov.uk/acre/wildlife/index.htm) or in ACRE's latest Annual Report, a copy of which is in the Library.

The leaked report was an early draft of the one published. This early draft had served as a basis for a meeting I chaired in June last year to advise me on the possible wider indirect effects of the use of GM crops on wildlife. I invited a number of experts, including English Nature, the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds and the chairman of ACRE, to inform me of the issues to enable us to get an initiative started to address concerns about wider impacts on biodiversity from the use of genetically modified crops.

My officials then developed the paper with ACRE. The key conclusion of the paper is that there have been serious declines in farmland wildlife, and we need to ensure that the widespread introduction of GM crops does not prejudice Government objectives to halt and where possible reverse these wildlife declines. To this end, it is important to have the capability to identify whether and how GM crops are likely to change agricultural practices which could result in indirect, delayed and long term adverse effects on farmland wildlife. I have already taken steps to address this.

Before this paper was published, I requested that the remit of ACRE be extended to consider the potential wider implications of the use of GMOs, especially when the committee is requested to give advice on applications to place GM crops on the market. ACRE has set up a Sub-group on Wider Biodiversity Issues to consider the issues raised the paper in more detail. The first meeting of this Sub-group was held on 15 March. The farm-scale evaluations into the ecological effects of genetically modified crops being set up by my Department, MAFF and Scottish Office will also assist in providing baseline data on farmland wildlife in order to underpin the consideration of wider biodiversity issues on a more detailed level.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Kosovar Refugees

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what information she has obtained regarding the numbers of refugees from Kosovo who are to be offered protection in other EU countries. [81996]

Mr. Foulkes: The latest figures we have received from the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on offers of temporary protection by other EU countries are as follows:

Austria: up to 5,000
Belgium: up to 1,200
Denmark: initially 1,500
Finland: 1,000
France: no figure stated (so far over 770 accepted)
Germany: 10,000
Greece: 5,000
Ireland: initially 1,000
Netherlands: 2,000
Portugal: 1,500
Spain: some thousands
Sweden: 5,600.

TREASURY

Personal Taxation

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to publish estimates of the total amounts of (a) income tax, (b) VAT, (c) national insurance contributions, (d) other indirect taxes and (e) local taxes currently paid by typical families at varying multiples of average earnings in the format used on 3 December 1981, Official Report, column 188; and if he will make a statement. [78055]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 22 March 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Bognor Regis and Littlehampton (Mr. Gibb) on 16 April 1999, Official Report, columns 387–90.

Tax Avoidance

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of (a) annual tax loss as a result of tax avoidance in the area of personnel services covered by IR 35 and (b) the value in 1998 of Government contracts with IT and other companies providing personnel services which will be affected by IR 35. [81329]

Dawn Primarolo: It is always difficult to measure the extent of tax and national insurance contributions (NICs) avoidance. The measures covered by IR 35 are forecast to raise £475 million in 2000–01 and £375 million in 2001–02.

No information is collected from contractors which allows an assessment to be made of the number or value of Government contracts awarded to companies involved in tax and NICs avoidance.

Finance Acts (Human Rights)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to review the compatibility of the provisions of the Finance Acts passed since May 1997 with the Human Rights Act 1998. [81701]

Dawn Primarolo: In line with other Government Departments, the Chancellor's Departments are reviewing their legislation and procedures in the light of the Human Rights Act 1998.

Health Insurance

Mr. Efford: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will review the powers under the Insurance Companies Act 1982 of permanent health insurance companies to deduct state benefits from payments to claimants. [82168]

Ms Hewitt: No. It is for insurers to decide on what terms to offer insurance policies to customers.

Marginal Income Tax

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of people with a marginal income tax rate on their earnings and pension income of 10 per cent. who also have savings income. [82192]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 26 April 1999]: In 1999–2000 there are estimated to be around 1.4 million taxpayers with a marginal rate of 10 per cent. on their earnings and pension income and some taxable savings income.

DEFENCE

Low Flying

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the pattern of military low flying activity in the United Kingdom during 1998. [82470]

Mr. Spellar: The amount of low flying training carried out in the UK Low Flying System during 1998 was some 16 per cent less than for 1997. This reduction was due, in part, to the number of aircraft and aircrew deployed on activities overseas. The distribution of low flying training across the UK has not changed significantly. I have today placed in the Library of the House a paper giving a detailed account of low flying training in the UK Low Flying System for 1998. Further copies can be obtained from the following address:

Secretariat (Air Staff) 2
Ministry of Defence

Service Personnel (Suspensions)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel in (a) the Army, (b) the RAF and (c) the Royal Navy have been suspended from duty due to allegations as to their conduct for (i) up to three months, (ii) up to six months, (iii) up to nine months, (iv) up to 12 months, (v) up to 15 months and (vi) over 15 months at the latest date for which figures are available. [69384]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Services do not, at present, collate statistics which relate to suspensions as a result of unproven allegations. This information is held on personal records and could be provided only at disproportionate cost, but will in future be recorded centrally.

The position on suspensions in each Service is as follows:

Naval Service

The Royal Navy and Royal Marines do not use suspension from duty when personnel are subject to investigations of alleged misconduct. If appropriate, Officers are re-appointed and Ratings are drafted to another job.

Army

Army officers may be suspended from duty due to allegations of misconduct in accordance with Queen's Regulations (Army) 6.015. There is no similar mechanism for suspending soldiers from duty. In such circumstances, soldiers are dealt with by their chain of command and should there be a pressing Service need administrative action may be taken to move them to another unit while investigations take place.

RAF

The RAF may suspend officers from duty due to misconduct in accordance with Queen's Regulations (RAF) 1009. There is no formal system in place by which an airman or woman can be suspended. It is extremely rare for an officer to be suspended, or for an airman or airwoman to be removed from all Air Force duties. In such cases, it is likely that the individual would be taken from specific duties and employed on other duties until the allegation of misconduct had been resolved. If an individual is facing charges of such severity that their continued presence on a unit would prejudice good order and discipline, or where welfare considerations dictate, an individual may be moved to another unit.

Military Training

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the countries from which military officers (a) have visited the United Kingdom and (b) have been visited by United Kingdom military personnel to receive training or other military assistance under the Defence Military Assistance Fund since 1 April 1997. [81379]

Mr. Doug Henderson: (a) The countries from which military officers have visited the United Kingdom to receive training or other military assistance under the Defence Military Assistance Fund (DMAF) since 1 April 1997 are:

Albania
Argentina
Austria
Bahrain
Bangladesh
Belize
Bosnia-Herzegovina
Brazil

Brunei
Bulgaria
Chile
Czech Republic
Egypt
Estonia
Ethiopia
Finland
Georgia
Greece
Hungary
India
Indonesia
Jamaica
Jordan
Kenya
Kuwait
Latvia
Lithuania
Macedonia
Malaysia
Morocco
Moldova
Nepal
New Zealand
Nigeria
Oman
Pakistan
Philippines
Poland
Portugal
Qatar
Republic of Ireland
Romania
Russia
Saudi Arabia
Slovakia
Slovenia
South Africa
South Korea
Spain
Sweden
Thailand
Turkey
Ukraine
United Arab Emirates
Uruguay
Uzbekistan
Yemen.

(b) The countries which have been visited by United Kingdom military personnel to receive training or other military assistance under the Defence Military Assistance Fund (DMAF) since 1 April 1997 are:

Albania
Argentina
Austria
Australia
Bahrain
Bangladesh
Belize
Botswana
Brazil
Brunei
Bulgaria
Chile
China
Czech Republic
Estonia
Finland
Georgia
Ghana
Greece
Hungary
India
Indonesia
Japan
Jordan
Kenya
Korea
Kuwait
Malaysia
Latvia
Lithuania
Macedonia
Oman
Pakistan
Philippines
Poland
Qatar
Republic of Ireland
Romania
Russia
Saudi Arabia
Sierra Leone
Singapore
Slovakia
Slovenia
South Africa
Tanzania
Thailand
Turkey
Ukraine
United Arab Emirates
USA
Venezuela
Zimbabwe.

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British military personnel have assisted United States military personnel in providing military training to, or in conducting joint training exercises with, members of the Colombian (a) armed forces and (b) police in (i) the United States and (ii) Colombia in each of the last eight years. [81374]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We have no records of British military personnel having assisted US military personnel with the provision of military training to, or the conduct of joint training exercises with, the Colombian armed forces or police during the last eight years.

Pay and Conditions

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will ensure that the pay and conditions of service of service men and women serving in Macedonia are comparable with those service men and women of other NATO countries. [82228]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The pay and conditions of service of personnel serving in the armed forces of NATO are governed by the needs and circumstances of individual member states and reflect the composition and role of their armed services. In the case of the UK, the pay and conditions of service package, which is recommended by the independent Armed Forces Pay Review Body, reflects the fully professional status of our armed forces and their expectation of unlimited liability for world-wide deployment throughout a career.

Basic pay includes a component known as the X Factor, currently 12 per cent. for regulars, which recognises, among other things, the need to serve sometimes in difficult and dangerous situations. Unlike special operational allowances which may be paid to other countries' armed forces when on deployment, the X Factor is paid through a whole UK Service career and is pensionable. Other career benefits include, subsidised food and accommodation, assisted house purchase schemes and—while away on operations—a special allowance to compensate for longer periods of separation known as Longer Separated Service Allowance which is payable after three years' total service. In addition, special arrangements have been made to provide our Service men and women with a wide range of supportive and welfare measures while they are deployed to the Balkans. These include the availability of 10 minutes of free telephone calls per week, return flights for rest and recreation in UK for those deployed in excess of 4 months and some free mail facilities.

Overall, it is difficult and misleading to attempt to draw precise comparisons between the different nations' armed forces serving in Macedonia based on a single aspect such as pay. A full comparison of terms and conditions of service, or the spectrum of welfare provision and facilities, is necessary.

Parachute Battalions

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the (a) manpower establishments and (b) actual manning levels for each of the three regular parachute battalions. [82344]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 27 April 1999]: The establishments and actual staffing levels for each of the three regular parachute battalions, as at 1 March 1999, are shown in the table. The figures are for UK Trained Army Personnel only, and exclude Locally Employed personnel, Royal Irish (Home Service) personnel, Reservists mobilised for duties associated with Bosnia, Full Time Reserve Service personnel, and Gurkhas (excepting the Gurkha Reinforcement Company presently attached to 2 Para).

	1 Para		2 Para		3 Para
	Estb	Str	Estb	Str	Estb	Str
Infantry:	576	—	574	—	550	—
Parachute Regiment	—	457	—	536	—	443
Gurkha Reinforcement Company	—	—	—	106	—	—
Other Infantry Cap Badges[1]	—	2	—	2	—	3
Royal Armoured Corps[2]	—	—	—	1	—	—
Royal Logistics Corps	23	19	23	26	23	22
Royal Army Medical Corps	2	5	2	2	2	3
Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers	14	13	14	14	11	23
Adjutant General's Corps (Staff and Personnel Support)	21	23	21	22	21	23
Army Physical Training Corps	1	1	1	1	1	1
Total	637	520	635	710	608	518

[1] The strength figures for 2 Para include 106 Gurkhas in the Gurkha Reinforcement Company: these Officers and Soldiers are not counted in United Kingdom Trained Army Personnel figures

[2] Officers and Other Ranks on attachment to Parachute Regiment

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date are 10 and 4 (TA) parachute battalions are due to be merged and reduced; what was their old manpower establishment; and what is their planned amalgamated manpower establishment. [82346]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 27 April 1999]: The TA parachute battalions, 4 Para (V) and 10 Para (V), are to be merged and reduced in size with effect from 1 July 1999. 4 Para (V) was established for 531 all ranks and 10 Para (V) was established for 530 all ranks. After 1 July 1999 the new battalion, to be called 4 Para (V), will be established for 324 all ranks.

Dunkirk Anniversary

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans his Department has to commemorate the 60th anniversary of Dunkirk and to mark the final pilgrimage of the Dunkirk Veterans Association. [75912]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I understand that the Dunkirk Veterans Association is planning to hold its final pilgrimage to Dunkirk in June 2000, to commemorate the 60th anniversary of the evacuation of the British Expeditionary Force from Dunkirk.

Armed Forces (Ethnic Origin)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide a breakdown by ethnic origin and grade of members of the (a) Army, (b) Royal Navy and (c) Royal Air Force. [79051]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will publish the figures for the end of the year 1998–99 shortly.

Non-statutory Liabilities

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out the basis on which some non-statutory liabilities are described as unquantifiable at page 23 of his Department's expenditure plans 1999–2000 to 2001–02, Cm 4208. [81576]

Mr. George Robertson: Because of the nature of the liabilities involved, it is not always possible to quantify accurately the potential contingent liability or to provide a realistic estimate of the likely charge that would result if the liabilities were to mature. In these cases, the term "unquantifiable" is used to describe the liabilities in question. If the indemnities were to be called upon, provision for any payment would be sought through the Supply procedure.

Small Arms Trainer Systems

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many small arms trainer ranges were available for armed forces use in 1997; and how many are currently available. [81777]

Mr. Doug Henderson: As at 31 December 1997, there were 158 small arms trainer (SAT) systems available to the Armed Forces. Since then, three further systems have been procured, two of which are now fully operational.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the (a) condition, (b) availability and (c) future use of the small arms trainer range at Chelsea Barracks. [81778]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The small arms trainer at Chelsea Barracks has been moved to Cavalry Barracks, Hounslow. Units that previously used the small arms trainer at Chelsea Barracks are now able to use the alternative facility at Wellington Barracks.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact on the Falkland Island garrison of the withdrawal of diversion rights for RAF Tristars by Uruguay and Brazil; and if he will make a statement. [81868]

Mr. Doug Henderson: There has been no withdrawal of diversion rights for RAF aircraft by Uruguay or Brazil.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his Department's timescale in the delivery of a 20mm calibre gun to the Falkland Islands Fisheries Department for the arming of a fishery protection vessel. [82059]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Following Government approval in January 1999 to procure a 20mm Oerlikon cannon, a formal order was received from the Falkland Islands Government on 2 February. Considerable work was subsequently necessary to clarify the requirements for spares, fittings and ammunition, and the order for this support material was not received until 15 April. The cannon and associated support stores have now been prepared for dispatch and, on current plans, will be sent out at the next practical opportunity in early May.

RAF Pensions

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to extend the provision of RAF pensions to surviving spouses of service personnel; and if he will make a statement. [82042]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 26 April 1999]: Surviving spouses of members of the RAF, like those of other Service personnel, are generally entitled to receive a widow's pension. There are two exceptions: pensions are not paid to widows or widowers who married their partner before 1978 but after their partner had left the armed forces; and pensions are withdrawn from widows and widowers who remarry (although they may be restored if their second spouse subsequently dies). From time to time we receive representations to extend entitlements to these groups, and we shall examine them again as part of the current review of the Armed Forces Pension Scheme.

Air Brigades

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date 16 Air Assault Brigade will become operationally effective. [82342]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 27 April 1999]: 24 Airmobile Brigade is due to be re-named 16 Air Assault Brigade on 1 September 1999 when it will take over command of the very high readiness Airborne Battle Group from 5 Airborne Brigade. 16 Air Assault Brigade will remain operationally effective in the Airmobile role and the Airborne Battle Group will continue to be operationally effective throughout. 16 Air Assault Brigade will not be fully operationally effective in the Air Assault role until the new Westland Attack Helicopter is brought into service. The Brigade's Attack Helicopter Regiments should all be operationally effective by mid-2004.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date 5 Airborne Brigade Headquarters will cease to be an airborne headquarters. [82341]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 27 April 1999]: It is currently planned that 5 Airborne Brigade Headquarters will cease to be an airborne headquarters on 1 September 1999 and it will be re-named Headquarters 12 Mechanised Brigade and start training in this new role.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date the Paralogistic Battalion is due to disband; and what logistic unit will replace it. [82343]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 27 April 1999]: 5 Airborne Brigade's Paralogistic Battalion is due to disband on 1 September 1999. Some parachute trained personnel will transfer on this date to 16 Air Assault Brigade's Logistic Regiment and Field Workshop to support 16 Air Assault Brigade's very high readiness Airborne Battle Group. The remainder will form the nucleus of the new 12 Mechanised Brigade's Logistic Squadrons and Equipment Support Companies.

Armed Forces (Balkans)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the units of the armed forces deployed to the South-East Balkans are under strength; and by what means it is intended to bring these units up to full strength. [82049]

Mr. George Robertson: None of the units of the armed forces deployed to the South-East Balkans is under strength.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to draw on Territorial Army units to make up shortfalls in manning levels of the armed forces in the South-East Balkans. [82050]

Mr. George Robertson: There are currently no plans to deploy formed Territorial Army (TA) units to the Balkans. Individual members of the TA are already serving in the Balkans with regular units on a volunteer basis, and this will continue for the foreseeable future.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what units of the armed services have been deployed to the South-East Balkans. [82074]

Mr. George Robertson: I refer the right hon. and learned Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Hereford (Mr. Keetch) on 26 April 1999, Official Report, columns 10–11.

Indonesia

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Indonesian military officers are currently training in the UK. [82464]

Mr. Doug Henderson: There are currently eight Indonesian military personnel attending training courses in the UK.

Hercules Fleet

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) proportion and (b) number of the Hercules fleet is currently airworthy. [82348]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 27 April 1999]: The Royal Air Force operates a fleet of fifty-five Hercules aircraft. Currently, all aircraft in the fleet are airworthy.

Kosovo

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what advice he received concerning the efficacy of air strikes alone in achieving the objectives of the United Kingdom and its NATO allies in Serbia and Kosovo. [82165]

Mr. George Robertson: NATO's military objectives, in support of the political aims of the international community, are to disrupt Milosevic's repressive operations and weaken his forces. A phased air campaign was chosen, on the basis of full and comprehensive military advice, as the best way of achieving those objectives.

HEALTH

NHS Appointments

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the NHS trust and health authority appointments which were not made by the due date and which remained outstanding on 1 April. [81391]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 19 April 1999]: All health authority appointments due on 1 April 1999 were completed on time. A small number of appointments (18) to National Health Service trusts and health authorities which expired in 1998 remain vacant. These vacancies are listed in the table.

List of health authority and national health service trust appointments which expired in 1998 and for which no appointment had been made by 1 April 1999

Eastbourne District General Hospital

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will initiate an urgent inquiry into the levels of nursing staff at the Eastbourne District General Hospital and their effect on standards of patient care; and if he will make a statement. [81657]

Mr. Hutton: The East Sussex, Brighton and Hove Health Authority has a duty to ensure that the quality of care for those living in Eastbourne is satisfactory. The health authority and Eastbourne Hospitals National Health Service Trust are conducting a joint analysis of current needs regarding nursing staff levels at the hospital, and expect to conclude this work by June for consideration by the local Primary Care Group.

We have also asked officials of the National Health Service Executive to discuss nursing levels at the trust with the Chief Executive and Director of Nursing of the NHS trust.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cash increase represented by the expenditure of an additional 3 per cent. of GDP on the NHS in 1999–2000. [81985]

Mr. Denham: The latest available data on the Gross Domestic Product in cash terms are for the year 1997–98 and the amount is £811,849 million. Three per cent. of this is £24,355 million. Planned total expenditure for the National Health Service in England in 1999–2000 is £39,703 million.

Investing in Dentistry

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by health authority the numbers of successful applications under the Investing in Dentistry initiative. [82186]

Mr. Denham: The number of investing in dentistry applications which have been approved up to 26 April 1999 are shown by health authority in the table.

Insulin Pen Needles

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on Government proposals on pen needles and insulin injection pens; and if he will make a statement. [82012]

Mr. Denham: We have received representations from most of the organisations consulted. We are considering them, and are seeking clarification on certain points before we make our final decisions.

Operating Department Practitioners

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what advice his Department has given to NHS trusts on the procedures they should adopt for checking the qualifications of those who apply for posts as operating department practitioners; [82078]

(2) how many cases of misconduct by operating department practitioners have been reported to his Department in each of the past five years; [82080]

(3) what research his Department has undertaken into the ability of operating department practitioners to provide care in areas other than the operating theatre, with particular reference to (a) accident and emergency, (b) cardio-pulmonary resuscitation and (c) intensive care units; [82075]

(4) what advice his Department has given to NHS trusts on whom they should notify if an operating department practitioner is dismissed for misconduct or incapability. [82079]

Mr. Hutton: The Department has not undertaken any research on the ability of operating department practitioners to provide care in other areas. Guidance has been issued on good recruitment practice which applies to all National Health Service staff. All NHS employers have a "duty of care" to ensure that all their employees are qualified and competent to perform the duties for which they are employed. This duty includes ensuring that high standards of patient care are maintained at all times.

Responsibility for dealing with issues of misconduct and incapability are a matter for NHS trusts. The Department does not collect information on the numbers of cases of misconduct by operating department practitioners.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about the establishment of a statutory regulation scheme for operating department practitioners; and if he will make a statement. [82076]

Mr. Denham: Since 1 May 1997, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received eight representations about regulation of operating department practitioners.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of operating department practitioners in the NHS who work in areas other than operating theatres. [82077]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not available centrally. Planning the number of operating department practitioners is a matter for local employers to determine in the light of local needs and priorities.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Home Detention Curfew

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders convicted of (a) sexual offences and (b) violent offences have been released on home detention curfew on or since 28 January. [81947]

Mr. George Howarth: No prisoner has been placed on home detention curfew who has been convicted of an offence to which part I of the Sexual Offenders Act 1997 applies. One offender has been placed on home detention curfew whose current sentence is for bigamy but this is not an offence to which part I of the Sexual Offences Act 1997 applies.

Of the 3,730 offenders who have been placed on home detention curfew up to Monday 19 April, 617 offenders have a current conviction for an offence of violence.

Only prisoners serving less than four years are eligible for consideration for home detention curfew. All eligible prisoners must pass a risk assessment before they can be placed on home detention curfew. Prisoners who either pose a risk to the public or a risk of re-offending during the home detention curfew period, or are unlikely to comply with terms of curfew, will not be granted home detention curfew.

Racial Assaults

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many racially-motivated assaults have been recorded in each of the last three years at (a) Tooting and (b) Wandsworth police stations. [81890]

Kate Hoey: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis tells me that Wandsworth and Tooting police stations are part of Wandsworth Division and it is not possible to break down the figures below divisional level. He has provided the following information:

Financial year	Racial assaults
1998–99	66

It is not possible to provide figures for the financial year 1996–97 as the Metropolitan police's system did not then separate racial assaults from all other assaults.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of incitement to racial hatred were (a) reported, (b) investigated and (c) the subject of arrest, in (i) Tooting and (ii) Wandsworth police stations in the last three years. [81888]

Kate Hoey: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis tells me that Wandsworth and Tooting police stations are part of Wandsworth Division and it is not possible to break down the figures below divisional level. He has provided the following information for incidents reported under section 19 of the Public Order Act 1986 in Wandsworth Division:

Financial year	Reported	Investigated	Arrested
1997–98	4	4	0
1998–99	2	2	0

Refugees (Yugoslavia)

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has given to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees of the number of refugees from Kosovo who will be offered protection in the United Kingdom. [81998]

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many refugees from the Kosovan conflict the Government have agreed to accept into the United Kingdom. [82226]

Mr. Straw: I refer to my hon. Friend and the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 26 April 1999, Official Report, columns 6–9, to the hon. Member for Ruislip-Northwood (Mr. Wilkinson).

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has made to his European Union counterparts to coordinate the emergency admission of refugees from the Kosovo conflict. [82225]

Kate Hoey: An emergency meeting of the Justice and Home Affairs Council was held on 7 April. The Council agreed that the first priority was to seek to protect refugees in the region. It was also agreed that the emergency relocation of refugees from the region should be co-ordinated by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provisions he has made to accept refugees from the conflict in former Yugoslavia to the United Kingdom. [82224]

Mr. Straw: We have always made it clear that the United Kingdom stands ready to receive some thousands of refugees from that region on criteria agreed with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) who gives priority to relieving pressure on the camps by giving priority to the most vulnerable and those with family links in the United Kingdom.

Under these arrangements, the first arrivals—161 refugees, mainly women and children—came to the United Kingdom on Sunday and are being looked after in Leeds. Reception centres are being staffed by the Refugee Council which is taking the lead in establishing a special reception service for Kosovan refugees arriving in the United Kingdom.

On arrival, the refugees were given a basic health check to determine if anyone needed immediate medical attention; none of the refugees needed immediate hospital treatment. At the reception centres, each refugee will be given a more thorough health check and be assigned a General Practitioner; children of school age will be assigned to a local school and refugees will be put in touch with any known relatives or friends.

People arriving under the UNHCR programme will be granted permission to enter in line with close family members already settled in the United Kingdom or 12 months' exceptional leave to enter to provide for their protection as requested by UNHCR. They will have access to the benefits system, NHS medical treatment and will be entitled to work. Other refugees arriving independently will be eligible to apply for asylum in the usual way.

Televisions (Prisons)

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each of the last five years the number of television sets with stand-by units in prisons in (a) England, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales. [81983]

Mr. George Howarth: The information requested on the numbers of television sets with stand-by units for prisoners' use in England and Wales is not available in the form requested. The number of television sets with stand-by units in prisons in Scotland is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

My hon. Friend, the then Minister for Prisons and Probation (Ms Quin), announced our intention to extend the availability of in-cell television as part of the incentives and earned privileges scheme in a reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Newark (Mrs. Jones) on 1 June 1998, Official Report, columns 50–51. Figures for television sets with stand-by facilities installed since then in 1998 and 1999 to the end of April, are as follows:

Year	England	Wales
1999	4,526	412

These figures do not include television sets used in association and communal rooms for which information is not kept centrally.

Private Prisons

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the total number of (a) fines and (b) contract payments which have been reduced to reflect the performance against the contract at (1) HMP Parc, (2) HMP Lowdham Grange, (3) HMP Altcourse, (4) HMP Wolds, (5) HMP Buckley Hall and (6) HMP Doncaster; and if he will state the reasons for each fine and reduced payment. [82446]

Mr. George Howarth: As shown in the table, there have been thirteen occasions on which a payment to a contractor managing a prison has been reduced. The table includes Blakenhurst prison which is also managed by a contractor. There is no distinction between a fine and a reduction in payment because a fine is made by being deducted from a due payment.

Payment reductions to private contractors managing prisons

Prison	Date	Amount (£)	Reason
Altcourse	May 1998	28,089	Failure to meet performance standards
Blakenhurst	February 1994	41,167	Temporary reduction in cell availability

	February 1999	6,334	Failure to meet performance standards
Parc	March 1998	54,782	Failure to meet to standard requirements
	May 1998	1,309	Failure to meet performance standards
	July 1998	298	Doubling cell occupation beyond permitted level
	October 1998	306,747	Failure to meet performance standards
Wolds	September 1998	23,855	Reduction in service

Prisoners (Drugs)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inmates in prisons in England and Wales have a record of illegal drug taking. [82289]

Mr. George Howarth: Between 1 January 1998 and 31 December 1998, 88,304 mandatory drug tests were conducted on prisoners, of which 20,152 tested positive for drugs. The figures include some prisoners who will have been tested more than once. Implementation of the Prison Service drug strategy over the next three years will include provision of information about new prisoners' histories of drug misuse prior to arrival in prison.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisons in England and Wales have drug treatment facilities; and how many prisoners were undertaking such treatment on 1 April. [82290]

Mr. George Howarth: Systematic data about existing programmes and the number of participating prisoners is not yet collected centrally. The table gives the best available information about the current situation and the proposed outcome of implementation of the Prison Service's drug strategy.

Prison drug treatment and programmes

Service provision	Current situation	After drug strategy implementation
CARATs[1]	43	all establishments
Detoxification[2]	10	35
Rehabilitation programmes	24	60
Therapeutic communities	4	8
Voluntary testing	46	all establishments

Prisoners (MPs' Visits)

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what guidance is given by his Department to Her Majesty's prisons on the arrangements to be made to respond to requests by hon. Members to visit a prisoner; [82323]

(2) what arrangements there are for visits to prisoners in Her Majesty's prisons by hon. Members. [82324]

Mr. George Howarth: The arrangements are set out in Prison Standing Order 5D. Prisoners can request or consent to a visit from a Member of Parliament, upon which the Governor will produce a valid special visiting order. The Governor will also ensure that the visit does not take place within the hearing of prison staff, unless either party or security considerations demand otherwise. The Governor can also permit the Member to tape record any conversation which takes place during the visit. This, along with other special visits, including those from legal advisers and priests or ministers, does not normally count against the prisoner's allowance for visits.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of persons held on remand were found guilty when brought to trial in the last year for which figures are available. [82459]

Mr. George Howarth: Seventy-two per cent. of persons held on remand in England and Wales in 1997 were found guilty when brought to trial.

Police Officers (Retirement)

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by police authority (a) the number of officers who have retired and (b) the estimated cost of paying the pensions of retired officers in each of the last five years. [82492]

Mr. George Howarth: Information on the number of officers retiring is set out in the table. For information on the cost of police pensions I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Home Office, to the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed (Mr. Beith) on 23 March 1999, Official Report, columns 164–72.

Surrey Constabulary

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in the negotiations between the Metropolitan Police and the Surrey Constabulary to effect the transfer of responsibility for policing parts of Surrey. [81624]

Kate Hoey: I understand that the negotiations between the Metropolitan police and Surrey police have made good progress on the wide range of detailed issues which need to be resolved in order to ensure a smooth transfer of responsibility on 1 April 2000. These negotiations take place bilaterally or, where appropriate, in a wider forum involving Essex police and Hertfordshire Constabulary, the other two forces affected by the change to the Metropolitan police district boundary. All four forces are represented on the central consultative group which the Home Office has set up to bring together all interested parties. There has been an excellent spirit of co-operation throughout.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensioner Income

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are (a) the total income of a single man aged 65 years who has no savings or resources, taking account of guaranteed minimum pension, housing benefit and council tax benefit, (b) the retirement pension payable to a single man aged 65 years who has savings above the means-testing limits, (c) the difference per annum between (a) and (b), and (d) the amount of money which would be required to purchase an annuity to fund (c). [81913]

Mr. Timms: The amounts of Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit that a person receives depends on local factors as well as personal circumstances. This individual is assumed to have no pension above the basic pension and no savings and so is eligible for £75 Minimum Income Guarantee. This hypothetical individual with the average amount of Housing Benefit and the average amount of Council Tax Benefit received by those on Income Support aged 60 or over would receive £127 a week in Income Support, Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit.

Retirement Pension consists of two main components, the basic State pension and additional pension, also known as SERPS. This individual is assumed to be a recently retired man who has at least £16,000 capital and who receives no income from his capital. This hypothetical individual with the average basic State pension and the average gross SERPS would receive £108 a week.

The difference in income is £19 a week.

At March 1999 annuity rates, a lump sum of £14,000 would be required for a single 65 year old man to purchase an annuity that provides this level of weekly income. This is less than the £16,000 capital limit for income related benefits.

Note:

1. Weekly income figures are rounded to the nearest pound and the lump sum figure is rounded to the nearest thousand pounds.

Occupational Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Kettering (Mr. Sawford) of 19 April 1999, Official Report, column 465, on occupational pensions, what assessment he has made of the reasons for the reported rise in occupational pension coverage. [82061]

Mr. Timms: A number of factors are likely to have contributed to the rise in take up. Increased awareness of pensions generally in the light of the public debate generated by the pensions review, launched in July 1997; improvements in the quality of information about pensions; and increased awareness of the value of occupational pensions in the light of mis-selling problems associated with personal pensions.

State Pension

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the categories of people who can be credited entitlement to (a) the basic state pension, (b) SERPS and (c) the proposed second state pension; and if he will make a statement on the reason for the differences in the crediting arrangements for each. [81991]

Mr. Timms: The categories of people who can be credited with National Insurance contributions to assist them to satisfy the second contribution condition for basic State pension are:

Young people for the tax years containing their 16th, 17th and 18th birthdays;

Men for the tax years containing their 60th birthday and the four succeeding years, provided they have no liability for Class 1 or 2 National Insurance contributions;

Persons undergoing courses of full time approved training;

Invalid Care Allowance recipients;

Family Credit recipients;

Disability Working Allowance recipients;

Persons who are either in receipt of Jobseeker's Allowance or unemployed and satisfy specified conditions which include that they are available for and actively seeking paid employment;

Persons incapable of work through illness or disability;

Statutory Maternity Pay recipients.

There are no arrangements for crediting people with entitlement to SERPS.

It is proposed that carers and long-term disabled people with broken work records will be credited with entitlement to the State Second Pension. In addition, those earning between the Lower Earnings Level and £9,000 will receive a boost to their State Second Pension by being treated as if they had had earnings at that level.

The main reason for crediting entitlement to the basic pension is the recognition that it would be unreasonable to allow the future entitlement of people who are involuntarily out of work through unemployment or sickness or whose earning power in work is seriously depleted by these contingencies, to be jeopardised by deficiencies in their contribution records.

SERPS is purely a contributory earnings-related second pension scheme which does not attract any form of credits. It gives insufficient help to those who need it most. This is why we are proposing the new State Second Pension to replace SERPS.

Income Support

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the (a) numbers and (b) percentages of single parents on income support, who have mortgages, for each of the past 10 years. [82164]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Single parents in receipt of income support who have a mortgage or loan for the accommodation they are living in since 1994

Year	Number of claimants	Percentage of all Single parents on Income Support
1994–95	130,000	14
1995–96	130,000	13
1996–97	150,000	14
1997–98	110,000	11

Notes:
1. Figures are subject to a degree of sampling error.
2. Figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand, percentages to the nearest integer.
3. The estimates are based on sample counts that have been adjusted for non-response using multi-purpose grossing factors that control for region, Council Tax Band and a number of demographic variables. Estimates are subject to sampling error and to variability in non-response.
4. Benefit receipt is based on self-assessment and therefore may be subject to mis-reporting.
5. Income-based Jobseekers' Allowance (introduced in October 1996) has been included in the analysis for the 1997–98 financial year, but not for the 1996–97 year, since it could not be separately identified from Unemployment Benefit.

All Work Test

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what medical conditions permanently exempt a person in receipt of benefits from the all work test. [82152]

Mr. Bayley: Regulations list a number of medical conditions and other circumstances which will result in a person being treated as incapable of work without the need for an assessment under the All Work Test. The relevant conditions, which are not all expressed in terms of specific diseases or disablements, are set out. Many, but not all, of these conditions will be permanent: If there is a possibility of improvement in an individual case the exemption will be reviewed periodically and in some circumstances it may become appropriate to carry out an All Work Test assessment.

Medical conditions qualifying for exemption from the All Work Test (Regulation 10 of the Social Security (Incapacity for Work) (General) Regulations 1995):

(i) tetraplegia;

(ii) persistent vegative state;

(iii) dementia;

(iv) paraplegia or uncontrollable involuntary movements or ataxia which effectively renders the sufferer functionally paraplegic;

(v) a severe learning disability;

(vi) a severe and progressive neurological or muscle wasting disease;

(vii) an active and progressive form of inflammatory polyarthritis;

(viii) a progressive impairment of cardio-respiratory function which severely and persistently limits effort tolerance;

(ix) dense paralysis of the upper limb, trunk and lower limb on one side of the body;

(x) multiple effects of impairment of function of the brain or nervous system causing severe and irreversible motor, sensory and intellectual deficits;

(xi) manifestations of severe and progressive immune deficiency states characterised by the occurrence of severe constitutional disease or opportunistic infections or tumour formation;

(xii) a severe mental illness.

In addition, people will be treated as incapable of work if they are registered blind;

are terminally ill;

have an 80 per cent. disablement assessment;

are receiving the highest rate care component of Disability Living Allowance, or certain allowances payable under the Industrial Injuries and War Pensions schemes for attendance needs.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 21 April 1999, Official Report, column 592, on winter fuel payments, what is the additional cost of paying the winter fuel payment separately from the basic state pension. [82190]

Angela Eagle: To include the full amount of the Winter Fuel Payment with the Retirement Pension of every eligible pensioner would involve using a qualifying week at the end of the previous winter. This is because Retirement Pension order books last for up to 20 weeks and are printed and issued well in advance. As a result, large numbers of people who retire after the qualifying week would not be eligible for a payment the following winter. In addition, allowing such a substantial interval to elapse would mean changes of household circumstances amongst many of those in the eligible population.

It would be possible to make a payment of £50 to every eligible pensioner at the beginning of each winter by including that amount along with their qualifying benefit. However, an exercise would then be necessary, after the qualifying week, to identify those who live alone or those who are the only eligible pensioner in their household, and make an additional £50 payment. This method would correctly deliver £50 payments to about 4.5 million pensioners but require two separate payments to about 5.5 million pensioners every winter.

The administration cost of this option is estimated at around £12.5 million in the first year and £10 million in subsequent years. The cost of the present delivery mechanism is estimated at £11 million each year. Therefore, including the payment along with the qualifying benefit is estimated to cost an additional £1.5 million in the first year, followed by a saving of around £1 million in subsequent years. The method of payment for this winter is designed to give all eligible pensioners a single, well timed payment before Christmas.

Methods of payment for future years will be kept under review.

Miss H. McNulty

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will state the outcome of the home visit made by the Benefits Agency to Miss H. McNulty ref. JP/4L/JKM. [82274]

Angela Eagle: The administration of the Social Fund is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. David Winnick, dated 27 April 1999:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking about the outcome of the visit by an officer of the Benefits Agency to Miss H. McNulty.

The purpose of the visit on 22 March was to obtain the fullest possible details of the need for a mobility scooter before undertaking a review of the decision to refuse a Community Care Grant or Budgeting Loan for the scooter.

On 25 March the reviewing officer, taking full account of the details obtained at the visit, decided that Miss McNulty's application should be treated as having medium priority for either a Community Care Grant or a Budgeting Loan, but because the District budget could only sustain applications with high priority, a payment was again refused.

A request that the application should be looked at by a Social Fund Inspector (SFI) was received from Miss McNulty on 30 March. On 6 April the relevant papers were copied to Miss McNulty to give her the opportunity to comment. Her reply was sent to the SFI dated 8 April. The outcome of the decision of the SFI, issued on 21 April 1999, was that the decision of the reviewing officer to refuse a payment from the Social Fund was correct.

I am sorry I have to give what must be a disappointing reply for Miss McNulty.

Marginal Tax Rates

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people faced marginal tax rates, including social security of over (a) 40 per cent., (b) 50 per cent., (c) 60 per cent., (d) 70 per cent., (e) 80 per cent., (f) 90 per cent. and (g) 100 per cent. in each year since 1996–97; [82237]

(2) how many people will face marginal tax rates including social security of over (a) 40 per cent., (b) 50 per cent., (c) 60 per cent., (d) 70 per cent., (e) 80 per cent., (f) 90 per cent. and (g) 100 per cent. taking account of the introduction of the working family tax credit and the children's tax credit. [82236]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

The data requested are contained in the table. The table illustrates the combined effect of the 1999 Budget and the Government's reforms since the election which will see the numbers of those facing marginal rates of over 70 per cent. reduced by two thirds, significantly relieving the poverty trap.

The increased generosity of the Working Families Tax Credit (WFTC) compared with Family Credit will see an extension of in work support for families with children. Even those whose marginal rate increases as a result of this change will be better off in cash terms and see an increased return to working compared to being on benefit. On average, WFTC will give low earning families an extra £24 per week compared with Family Credit.

Impact of the 1998 and 1999 budgets on the number of families with marginal deduction rates of 40 per cent. or more[1]

Thousand

	Before	After
100 per cent. or more	5	0
90 per cent. or more	115	15
80 per cent. or more	255	175
70 per cent. or more	715	230
60 per cent. or more	730	950
50 per cent. or more	730	1,110
40 per cent. or more	775	1,150

[1] Figures are for families in receipt of income-related benefits or the WFTC where at least one partner works 16 hours or more, and are based on 1998–99 caseload and take-up rates.

Available historical estimates of marginal deduction rates are published in the DSS's annual departmental report, on page 16 of the 1998 report and page 57 of the 1997 report.

SCOTLAND

Scottish Parliament Building

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated cost of the conversion of the Church of Scotland assembly hall and nearby City of Edinburgh Council office buildings, for use as a temporary home of the Scottish Parliament, broken down in to costs in respect of (i) VAT, (ii) fees, (iii) furnishings and fittings, (iv) information technology and TV facilities, (v) returning the Assembly Hall to its original state and (vi) compensating the Church of Scotland for disruption and the hire of the Edinburgh International Conference Centre as its meeting place. [77799]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 25 March 1999]: The cost of converting the Church of Scotland Assembly Hall and refurbishing the nearby former City of Edinburgh Council buildings to house the Scottish Parliament is estimated to be around £7.62 million in total. Of that figure, some £4.5 million is being spent on the principal works programme, and can be broken down as follows:

Conversion/refurbishment works £3.3 million

Fees £0.5 million

VAT £0.7 million.

The cost of the works carried out to install the infrastructure to support the IT and telecoms networks and the TV production facilities are not separately identifiable, but are included in the conversion/refurbishment figure of £3.3 million given.

Fitting out the accommodation is an additional £3.1 million including VAT. The cost of furniture (£0.75 million) and IT equipment (£1.5 million) are included in that figure, and the remainder covers mainly the costs of the provision of telecoms, security systems and office equipment.

The Church of Scotland wishes to retain the new layout prepared for the Debating Chamber. Some readjustment works will be necessary, but it is too early to provide an estimate of the likely costs involved.

The Church of Scotland has neither sought nor been paid any form of compensation for disruption. The cost of hiring the EICC and related expenditure totals just over £140,000 including VAT.

Social Inclusion

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the total of resources to be made available to social inclusion projects under (a) the New Deal and New Futures Fund, (b) new community schools, (c) early intervention schemes, (d) alternatives to exclusion (schools), (e) pre-school education initiatives, (f) new housing partnerships, (g) Rough Sleepers Initiative, (h) Empty Homes Initiative and (i) social inclusion partnerships (1) in Glasgow and (2) in Scotland. [78346]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 31 March 1999]: The Government have already allocated significant resources to these and other initiatives as part of their commitment to promote social inclusion in Scotland. The figures given relate to funding committed or estimated to be spent over the financial years 1999–2000, 2000–01 and 2001–02.

For most of these programmes, some of the committed funds have yet to be allocated to specific areas of Scotland. Where this is the case, the figures given include the total already allocated; the amount already allocated to Glasgow; and the amount which remains to be allocated. Furthermore, some of the figures given are estimated rather than formal allocations.

It is estimated that £290 million will be spent on the New Deals in Scotland in the next three years (1999–2000 to 2001–02). Of this, it is estimated that at least £54 million will be spent in Glasgow (no decision has yet been made on resources available for Glasgow under the New Deal for the Disabled). These figures make no provision for underspends in the period until March 1999.

Of the £2.0 million that has been committed from the New Futures Fund (NFF) for 1999–2000 and 2000–01 a total of £1.1 million has already been allocated to projects in Glasgow. A number of other projects are still under consideration and may receive financial support during this period. Over the next three years it is estimated that a total of £12.4 million will be spent in Scotland on NFF projects.

We plan to invest £26 million to pilot New Community Schools in every education authority over the next 3 years. On this basis, it is estimated that £1 million of the funds will be spent in Glasgow.

Of the £42 million committed to early intervention schemes over the next three years, Glasgow will receive £4.5 million in total.

Of the £24 million committed to alternatives to exclusion from school schemes over the next 3 years, £2.34 million has been allocated to Glasgow.

Of the £111 million committed to pre-school education initiatives in the first of the next three years (1999–2000), Glasgow's provisional allocation is over £12 million. A further £269 million has been committed to Scotland for the 2 subsequent years (£131 million in 2000–01 and £138 million in 2001–02) but estimates of allocations are not available at this stage.

Of the £208 million which has been earmarked to councils to support New Housing Partnerships (NHPs), £32 million has been earmarked for Glasgow. A total of £333 million has been committed to support NHPs in Scotland over the next 3 years. £125 million of that total has been set aside for assistance with debt in connection with whole stock transfers.

Of the £7 million to be spent under the Rough Sleepers Initiative in 1999–2000, £2.4 million has been allocated to Glasgow. A further £14 million has been committed to the initiative in the following 2 years.

£15 million has been committed to the Empty House Initiative over the next 3 years, of which £2.77 million has been allocated to Glasgow.

£137 million has been committed to Social Inclusion Partnerships over the next 3 years, including £48 million for the new Social Inclusion Partnerships designated in Spring 1999. Of the total, £51 million will be spent in Glasgow, of which over £24 million relates to the new Social Inclusion Partnerships.

From 1 July 1999 these programmes, apart from the New Deal, will be matters for the Scottish Parliament.

Statistical Service

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what qualifications and experience will be required of the successful candidate for the position of Head of the Statistical Service in his Department. [81175]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 23 April 1999]: The basic educational qualification required is an Honours degree with a substantial element of statistics and/or an equivalent post-graduate qualification. In addition, since this is a post in the Senior Civil Service, management experience at a senior level is necessary, including experience in the use and/or production of statistical information.

Professional Statisticians

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff by grade are employed as professional statisticians in his Department; how many of these staff have been accepted as fast stream by the Civil Service Selection Board; and how many have been granted chartered statistician status by the Royal Statistical Society. [81208]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 23 April 1999]: Statistical work is undertaken by a range of specialists, including Research Officers, Economists and Statisticians. Since 1996, The Scottish Office has employed statisticians through its own departmental recruitment as well as through the Civil Service Selection Board. This resulted from a rapid growth in statistics posts coupled with a shortfall of recruits from the Civil Service Selection Board source.

Withe my Department there are 36 statisticians recruited through the Civil Service Selection Board: 25 at Band C and 11 at Band B. There are also 13 statisticians at Band B who were directly recruited by the Department. All are managed by a chief professional officer at Senior Civil Service level: at the present time this post is vacant.

Affiliation to the Royal Statistical Society is not mandatory and some members of staff may not have reported acquisition of Chartered Statistician status. There are four statisticians at Band C who are known to hold Chartered Statistician status.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff who have worked as professional statisticians in his Department have left on early retirement in each of the past 10 years. [81188]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 23 April 1999]: Statistical work is undertaken by a range of specialists, including Research Officers, Economists and Statisticians. Since 1996, The Scottish Office has employed statisticians through its own departmental recruitment as well as through the Civil Service Selection Board. This resulted from a rapid growth in statistics posts coupled with a shortfall of recruits from the Civil Service Selection Board source.

The number of professional statisticians who have left on early retirement in the last 10 years is seven. Four of these had transferred into administration at an earlier stage in their career. Details by year are shown in the table.

Job Creation

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in date order since 2 May 1997 each occasion on which Scottish Office ministers have made announcements about the creation or safeguarding of jobs in Scotland indicating (a) the business and the economic sector to which it belongs, (b) its address in Scotland, (c) the number of jobs to be (i) created and (ii) safeguarded, (d) the nature of the assistance offered by the Scottish Office and other Government agencies, (e) the reference number of Scottish Office press notices issued in association with the announcement and (f) the Minister who made the announcement. [82184]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 26 April 1999]: News Releases issued where Ministers have made announcements about creation or safeguarding jobs are available on:

1. The Scottish office website at www.scotland.gov.uk/news/archive.asp for all news releases issued from October 1997.

   All Scottish Office news releases are also available in the House of Commons Library.

2. The Locate in Scotland website www.lis.org.uk/lisnws.cfm for news releases relating to inward investment announcements from September 1997.

   Further information on announcements up to March 1998 is available in the Locate in Scotland Annual Review for 1997–98.

Pollution

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the Scottish Environment Protection Agency will list the worst repeat offenders against pollution legislation in a form similar to that published for England and Wales. [81277]

Mr. Macdonald: The Scottish Environment Protection Agency has no plans to publish a league table of offenders in a similar way to that recently published by the Environment Agency. Information on offences against environmental legislation is published in the Scottish Environment Protection Agency's Annual Reports, copies of which are in the Library. Information on offences in 1998–99 will be included in the report due to be published later this year.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the enforcement regime and level of fines imposed in Scotland against those who transgress pollution standards. [81278]

Mr. Macdonald: The Scottish Environment Protection Agency is the statutory regulator for environmental standards in Scotland. I am satisfied that the Agency is both a firm and fair regulator and is prepared to take enforcement action against those who breach standards or illegally pollute the environment.

In addition to referring cases to the Procurator Fiscal, there are various forms of enforcement action available to the Scottish Environment Protection Agency. These include the issue of improvement and prohibition notices. Enforcement action can lead to adverse publicity and loss of accreditation for those companies which have independent environmental management systems. These factors are often stronger deterrents than fines.

It is for the Procurator Fiscal to decide whether it would be in the public interest to prosecute a case referred to him by the Scottish Environment Protection Agency. The level of fines for pollution offences is entirely a matter for the Sheriff to consider in each case.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Mussel Farming

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will include mussel farming as an approved measure under the agricultural business improvement scheme. [82533]

Mr. Macdonald: The legislation governing the Agricultural Business Improvement Scheme was recently amended following suggestions from industry representatives and detailed negotiations with the European Commission. Mussel farming was not raised in those discussions and there are no plans to include it as an approved measure. The Scheme closes to grant applications on 31 October 1999.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nurse Shortages

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received concerning the shortage of nurses in the United Kingdom. [77837]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We have received no recent representations; however, at the Commonwealth Health Ministers meeting in Barbados in November 1998, the Minister of Health for Jamaica made representations to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health about concerns in the region that there was a drain of trained nurses to the UK. It was agreed that a collaborative approach should be developed.

British Council Libraries

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what guidance is in place for the choice of books that are acquired by the British Council for its overseas libraries; what restrictions are imposed by (a) the UK and (b) other Governments regarding what texts can be supplied in any particular country. [79942]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 14 April 1999]: The Government do not give the Council guidance on books for its libraries, which is an operational matter for the Council's management.

European Commission Staff (Security Clearance)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Commission staff will receive clearance, in accordance with 1999/218/EC (Official Journal L80, 25.3.99), for access to (a) confidential, (b) secret and (c) top secret material; what categories of information are covered; what is his policy thereto; what contribution to screening Government agencies will make, and at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [81043]

Ms Quin: Commission Decision 1999/218/EC extends Decision C(94)3282 of 30 November 1994 on the security vetting of European Commission staff to cover documents relating to the Common Foreign and Security Policy. It does not affect the security clearance of staff already working for the Commission.

There have been no applications to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (which is responsible for the security vetting of all UK nationals directly recruited to work at the Commission) by the European Commission for the security clearance of UK nationals since the publication of Commission Decision 1999/218/EC. It is expected that the numbers of Commission staff cleared by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office each year will remain the same (ie six or seven a year). Similarly, the Commission do not expect the overall number of their staff requiring security clearance to rise significantly.

The vetting procedures set out in Commission Decision 1999/218/EC are applicable to classified information held by the Commission, including that relating to the Common Foreign and Security Policy of the European Union. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office are usually asked to clear Commission staff to see up to and including Secret material. The cost of security vetting is approximately £11 for Confidential clearance and £149 for Secret clearance.

Entry Clearance

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people in (a) Islamabad, (b) Karachi, (c) Bombay, (d) New Delhi, (e) Calcutta, (f) Madras, (g) Colombo, (h) Jamaica, (i) Barbados, (j) Russia, (k) Poland, (l) Zimbabwe, (m) Ghana, (n) Bangladesh, (o) Lagos and (p) Abuja

(i) applied for, (ii) were granted and (iii) were refused entry clearance as visitors in (a) 1998 and (b) 1999 to the latest date for which figures are available. [81686]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The figures requested are as follows:

Falkland Islands (Fisheries)

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if it is his policy to assist the Falkland Islands Fisheries Department to prevent illegal fishing within the Falkland Islands Fisheries Protection Zone; and if he will make a statement; [81879]

(2) if approval has been given for the Falkland Islands Fisheries Department to (a) arm and (b) use a 0.50 inch calibre gun, on one of its fisheries protection vessels. [81876]

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what steps he is taking to prevent illegal fishing in Falkland Islands waters; [81963]

(2) what assessment he has made of the extent of illegal fishing in Falkland Islands waters; and if he will make a statement; [81961]

(3) what representations he has received about illegal fishing in Falkland Islands waters; and if he will make a statement. [81962]

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will approve the application of the Falkland Islands Government to utilise a 0.50 inch calibre gun for fisheries protection purposes. [82217]

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on the timescale in granting permission for the arming of a Falkland Islands fishery protection vessel with a 0.50 inch calibre gun; [82058]

(2) if he will make a statement on the timescale in the arming of a Falkland Islands fishery protection vessel; [82060]

(3) what assessment he has made of the level of illegal fishing being carried out in the water around the Falkland Islands; and if he will make a statement. [82057]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We take the matter of illegal fishing in the Falkland Islands seriously and it is our shared objective with the Falkland Islands Government to combat the problem. Illegal fishing has the potential to undermine the Falklands economy and attempts to conserve fish stocks. Recently, there have been up to an estimated 50 unlicensed vessels in Falklands waters and we assume that all were engaged in illegal fishing activities. The number of vessels now appears to be declining.

In January this year, we authorised the arming of a Fisheries Protection Vessel (FPV) with a 20mm Oerlikon cannon, which is the best weapon for the task of deterring illegal fishing and dealing with it, if necessary. The Falkland Islands Government (FIG) are responsible for the procurement and shipment of the cannon. This process has taken longer than anticipated. We have tried to help FIG speed up the shipment of the consignment but it cannot be carried on a passenger aircraft together with the ammunition needed. Accordingly, the Ministry of Defence has agreed to fly the cannon out on the next freight flight on 6 May.

FIG requested approval for temporary use of a smaller, 0.50 inch, machine gun on an FPV, as an interim measure. This request was carefully considered and a decision was made not to give approval. The machine gun is not a good visible deterrent and there are concerns that warning shots, which the FPV would be required to fire to alert a suspected unlicensed vessel, would not be seen or heard.

As a temporary measure, the Ministry of Defence has agreed to our request for one of the Royal Navy vessels stationed in the Falklands to accompany an FPV on its patrols. We have also made representations to the Taiwanese authorities in London and Taipei, as the majority of unlicensed vessels in Falklands waters are theirs. We shall continue to urge the Taiwanese authorities to bring their fleet under control.

We have received representations on this issue from FIG and its Fisheries Department, several MPs and from members of the public. Commercial operators who are licence-holders have made indirect representations.

We shall continue to support FIG in its attempts to combat illegal fishing.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the application of the provisions of the White Paper, Partnership for Progress and Prosperity, concerning environmental protection to the waters within the Falkland Islands Fisheries Protection Zone; and what plans he has to ensure that the Falkland Fisheries Department is equipped to implement that policy. [81878]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Our stated objective in the White Paper: Partnership for Progress and Prosperity is to use the environment of Overseas Territories to provide benefits to the people in them, and to conserve our global heritage by managing sustainably all the Overseas Territories' natural resources. The Falkland Islands

Government administer the fisheries within their waters and the revenue from fishing licences is the mainstay of the Falklands economy. Effective management of the fishery helps in efforts to conserve fish stocks. Enforcement of the licensing regime is the responsibility of the Falkland Islands Fisheries Department which have two Fisheries Protection Vessels at their disposal. Ministers have authorised the Falkland Islands Government to purchase a 20mm Oerlikon Mk7A cannon for installation on one of the vessels to help deter unlicensed vessels from fishing in Falklands waters. There are no further plans at present.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to assist the Falklands Islands Government to meet its international obligations in terms of conserving living resources around its coastline, as set out in the White Paper, Partnership for Progress and Prosperity; and if he will make a statement. [81877]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: As stated in the White Paper: Partnership for Progress and Prosperity, British accession to the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS) was extended to the Overseas Territories including the Falkland Islands. Article 61 of UNCLOS requires States to take measures to conserve living marine resources in their exclusive economic zones (EEZs). In the Falkland Islands, the requirement is met through the administration of its fishery. The Falkland Islands has no EEZ, nor does it have to declare one.

Article 61 also requires the Falkland Islands to co-operate within regional fisheries organisations to meet conservation and management aims. To promote such co-operation, Falkland Islands Government officials form part of the British delegation which attends regular meetings of the South Atlantic Fisheries Commission (SAFC) with the Argentines. SAFC is a forum for the exchange of information which assists with the management of fish stocks and in which ways of conserving of commercially important fish stocks in the South Atlantic are discussed. We continue to support the European Union in its efforts to encourage Argentina to help establish a South West Atiantic Multilateral Fisheries Agreement.

Child Soldiers

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy on the use of child soldiers; and if he will make a statement. [82329]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Government are committed to bringing to an end the use of child soldiers in contravention of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child. We urge all Governments and armed groups to adhere to the international humanitarian and human rights standards that protect the rights of children in conflict situations. We support the work of the United Nations to protect those children affected, particularly the work of the UN Special Representative for Children in Armed Conflict. The UK played a leading role in the establishment of the use of child soldiers as a war crime in the statute of the International Criminal Court.

On 2 March 1999, Official Report, column 895, we announced a new UK commitment of £10 million to promote stability in Sierra Leone. A condition of this assistance is that children under 16 must not be used by the Sierra Leone Armed Forces or the Civil Defence Force. We believe that this may be the first time that any Government have made non-use of child soldiers an explicit condition of such assistance.

Senator Pinochet

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who in his Department had access to the Foreign Office report written in Madrid on 16 October 1998 pertaining to Senator Pinochet and passed to his Department; at what time of day; and what action was taken as a result. [82408]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave to the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham (Mrs. Gillan) on 10 February 1999, Official Report, columns 293–94, and 16 March 1999, Official Report, column 620.

Victims' Remains (Independent Commission)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the agreement with the Irish Government establishing an independent commission for the location of victims' remains to be signed. [82713]

Ms Quin: The Agreement was signed on 27 April. Copies of the Agreement are available from the Vote Office, have been placed in the Libraries of the Houses of Parliament, and will be published later in the usual way.

Treaty of Amsterdam

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the Treaty of Amsterdam to come into force. [82714]

Ms Quin: The process of ratification of the Treaty of Amsterdam was completed on 30 March, when France deposited its instrument of ratification with the Italian Government.

In accordance with Article 248 of the Treaty on European Union, the Treaty of Amsterdam will come into force on Saturday 1 May 1999.

Falkland Islands

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what exchanges he has had with the Government of Chile over the cancellation of Lan Chile flights to the Falkland Islands. [82659]

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he plans to make to the Government of Chile regarding their decree which prohibits Chilean carriers flying to the Falklands. [82055]

Mr. Robin Cook: Lan Chile have not flown to the Falklands since 31 March, when their contract with the Falkland Islands Development Corporation expired. As the Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd), made clear in his answer to the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham (Mrs. Gillan) on 25 February 1999, Official Report, columns 451–53, the continuation of that contract after that date was a commercial matter for discussion between Lan Chile and the Falkland Islands Development Corporation. On 19 April my hon. Friend reported that the Government of Chile had issued a Decree prohibiting Chilean carriers from flying to the Falklands with effect from 10 April.

I have now spoken to the Chilean Foreign Minister. I told him that we strongly disagree with his Government's Decree. I underlined that there was no justification for the Chilean Government taking such a measure and have urged Senor Insulza to reconsider it. I reminded him of the commercial and social benefits for remote communities, both in the Falklands and in southern Chile, of Lan Chile being allowed to continue flights to the Falklands.

We are in close touch with the Falkland Islands Government on alternative air links.

East Timor

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement concerning the recent violence in East Timor. [82465]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Lichfield (Mr. Fabricant) on 26 April 1999, Official Report, column 31.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received of the killing of refugees at a church in Liquica, East Timor, on 6 April. [82500]

Mr. Fatchett: We have received reports that on 6 April a number of civilians, who had sought refuge in a church in Liquica, East Timor, were killed during a violent clash with a pro-Indonesia militia group. The number of casualties remains unclear, as does the role of the Indonesian security forces in the incident.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Education Expenditure

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list by local education authority the expenditure per pupil at 1998–99 prices from aggregate schools budgets in (a) maintained primary schools and (b) maintained secondary schools in (i) 1996–97, (ii) 1997–98 and (iii) 1998–99, giving the average percentage change from (1) 1996–97 to 1997–98 and (2) from 1997–98 to 1998–99. [81648]

Ms Estelle Morris: I have placed a table in the Library showing, for each local education authority in England for the financial years 1996–97 to 1998–99, the aggregated schools budget for primary and secondary schools giving (a) the aggregated schools budget per pupil, (b) the real terms figure per pupil adjusted for 1998 real terms figures and (c) the percentage change on the previous year.

School Budgets

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of each shire county's education department budget was allocated to school budgets in 1998–99. [82187]

Ms Estelle Morris: The following table shows the proportion of each shire county's education General Schools Budget which was allocated to schools through the Aggregated Schools Budget in 1998–99. Information on local authority education department budgets is not allocated centrally.

1998–99	ASB as percentage of GSB
Bedfordshire	75.6
Buckinghamshire	69.8
Cambridgeshire	64.9
Cheshire	75.6

School Attendance

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has for changing the age at which it is compulsory for children to attend school. [81990]

Ms Estelle Morris: None.

SSAs

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the local education authorities, which at the latest date for which information is available, were not fully passing on to schools any increases in their standard spending assessment in respect of education. [82335]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 27 April 1999]: Budget information for 1999–2000 is currently being collected and checked by the Department. We will publish authoritative data showing the plans of the authorities, including the amounts to be held back centrally, in June.

Physical Education

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his estimate of the (a) number and (b) percentage of total school hours that is spent on physical education in (i) primary and (ii) secondary schools in the last year for which figures are available. [81806]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The number of school hours spent on physical education varies from school to school. Evidence from Ofsted inspections during 1998 of the average number of hours per week primary and secondary schools currently spend teaching National Curriculum PE is given.

	Average hours of PE per week (approximately)
Key Stage 1 (ages 5–7)	1 hour 20 minutes
Key Stage 2 (ages 7–11)	1 hour 35 minutes
Key Stage 3 (ages 11–14)	2 hours
Key Stage 4 (ages 14–16)	1 hour 15 minutes

As a percentage of teaching time, these times are approximately: Key Stage 1—6.3 per cent.; Key Stage 2—6.8 per cent.; Key Stage 3—8.3 per cent. and Key Stage 4—5.2 per cent. These figures do not account for travelling and changing time incurred in the provision of swimming tuition. At Key Stage 4, the figure relates to the time allowed for the National Curriculum compulsory component of PE. Pupils studying for GCSE normally have between 8 per cent. and 12 per cent. extra time for the examination course.

Laboratories (Schools)

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to improve the standards of science laboratory furbishment in schools. [82491]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Decisions on how best to refurbish science laboratories in schools rest with individual local education authorities and governing bodies. Since the Election, we have provided an additional £680 million for specific improvements to school buildings through the New Deal for Schools programme. £9.5 million of the £340 million allocated through the New Deal for Schools in March 1999 was for improvements to science laboratories. The Department provides guidance in its 1995 publication, 'Science Accommodation in Secondary Schools: A Design Guide'. This is currently being updated.

New Deal (Young People)

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many of those invited to join the New Deal for Young People in January 1998 had found unsubsidised employment lasting for more than 13 weeks by the end of January 1999. [82163]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Of the 6,826 young people who were invited to join New Deal for 18 to 24 year olds in January 1998, 2,065 had found sustained unsubsidised employment without returning to JSA within 13 weeks by January 1999. A further 2,366 of the invitees are still taking part in the New Deal.

New Deal (Schools)

Mr. Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of schools which will benefit from the New Deal for Schools. [81861]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Since the introduction of the New Deal for Schools programme, we have approved funding of £680 million for work at some 11,000 schools in England.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Greenhouse Gas Emissions

6. Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what contribution to the Government's Kyoto commitments she expects Northern Ireland to make. [81286]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I expect the new Northern Ireland Assembly to play its full part in contributing to the United Kingdom's commitments under the Kyoto Protocol.

May I take this opportunity to tell the House that, in Belfast, 23 schools and colleges have with help from Phoenix Gas, been converted to natural gas which will save 12,000 tons of CO_2 over 3 years. This will help children's health and reduce costs.

Good Friday Agreement

7. Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the progress of inter-party negotiations to establish the Northern Ireland Executive. [81287]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The parties, supported by both Governments, have worked intensively over the last few weeks but have yet to reach a consensus on how to overcome the remaining difficulties preventing the full implementation of the Belfast Agreement. Discussions are continuing to try to achieve the cross-community support necessary for the successful establishment of the Executive.

8. Mrs. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultations she has had with the Northern Ireland parties on implementing the Good Friday Agreement in the last six weeks. [81290]

Marjorie Mowlam: I and my Ministerial colleagues continue to have regular meetings with the Northern Ireland parties concerning the implementation of the Good Friday Agreement.

12. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the implementation of the Good Friday agreement. [81294]

18. Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on progress in implementing the Good Friday agreement. [81300]

21. Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on developments in the Northern Ireland peace process. [81303]

22. Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on progress in implementing the Good Friday agreement. [81304]

23. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made towards establishing an Executive for the Northern Ireland Assembly. [81305]

Marjorie Mowlam: I refer my hon. Friends to the replies I gave to my hon. Friends the Members for Harrow, East (Mr. McNulty) and for Harlow (Mr. Rammell) on 28 April 1999, Official Report, columns 325 and 184.

15. Mr. Savidge: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions she has held with the Irish Government on ways to advance the peace process in the past six months. [81297]

24. Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what meetings she has had with the Irish Government concerning the implementation of the Good Friday agreement. [81306]

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent meetings she has held with representatives of the Irish Government concerning the implementation of the Good Friday Agreement. [81289]

Marjorie Mowlam: I continue to have regular contact with representatives of the Irish Government concerning the implementation of the Good Friday Agreement. Both Governments remain united in their determination to make progress and to ensure that all parties live up to all their commitments under the Agreement.

Prisoner Releases

9. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons convicted of murder have been released under the Good Friday agreement to date. [81291]

Mr. Ingram: To date there have been 82 prisoners, released under the terms of the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998, who were convicted of murder. This is drawn from information current at 16 April 1999.

13. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prisoners have been released under the accelerated release scheme set up by the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998 to date. [81295]

Mr. Ingram: To date there have been 259 prisoners released under the terms of the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998. This is drawn from information current at 16 April 1999.

Public Appointments

10. Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the numbers of public appointments she has made since 1 January. [81292]

Mr. Paul Murphy: There have been 474 public appointments since 1 January.

Decommissioning

11. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement about progress towards the decommissioning of illegally held weapons. [81293]

19. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arms and explosives have been decommissioned; by which groups; and under what circumstances. [81301]

Mr. Ingram: The LVF decommissioning event which took place on 18 December last year was a positive and significant act. The Independent International Commission on Decommissioning verified and destroyed sub-machine guns, rifles, handguns, ammunition, explosive devices and detonators. I urge the LVF to continue and other paramilitary groups to start decommissioning now.

20. Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on progress towards the decommissioning of illegally held arms and explosives. [81302]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Macclesfield (Mr. Winterton) on 28 April 1999, Official Report, column 330.

Security Measures

14. Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the steps being taken towards normalising security procedures. [81296]

Mr. McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on recent steps taken towards scaling down security measures. [81288]

Mr. Ingram: Since July 1997, the Chief Constable has announced a progressive reduction in security measures in the province.

Specific measures include a reduction in troop levels, which now stand at under 15,000, fewer than at any time since 1970, a two-thirds reduction in military patrolling, up to a third reduction in helicopter activity and the closure of 25 military bases and installations.

The security situation continues to be kept under close scrutiny and further progress will depend on the assessment of the terrorist threat.

New Deal

16. Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many companies have signed up to the New Deal initiative in Northern Ireland. [81298]

Mr. McFall: At the end of March 1999, 2,370 Northern Ireland companies had confirmed their support for New Deal by signing an Employer Agreement.

School Links

17. Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps she is taking to encourage links between schools in Great Britain and Northern Ireland. [81299]

Mr. McFall: Seventy six schools from Great Britain are involved with schools from Northern Ireland and other parts of Europe in a curriculum based European Studies project. These schools form cluster groups and work together on common projects to explore relationships within the United Kingdom and also both the Republic of Ireland and the rest of Europe.

The Department of Education Northern Ireland also funds the Warrington Project which has established a series of Northern Ireland/Republic of Ireland/Warrington links at primary school level and which aims to promote a 'whole school' approach to cross community activity through the curriculum.

The development of the National Grid for Learning will also enable all schools to have easier access to one another, through information technology.

Murders

25. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in bringing to justice the murderers of the Reverend Robert Bradford and Mr. Edgar Graham. [81307]

Mr. Ingram: Two persons were arrested for the murders of the Reverend Bradford and Mr. Kenneth Campbell, interviewed and released without charge. Despite an extensive police investigation no persons have to date been made amenable for these crimes.

In respect of Mr. Graham's murder, one person, convicted of making property available and withholding information was sentenced to two years imprisonment suspended for three years. Another was convicted of withholding information and sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment suspended for two years. A number of other persons were arrested and interviewed in relation to this murder.

The RUC review all murder investigations. New or further evidence will be acted upon with diligence.

Tourism

26. Mr. Lock: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment she has made of the impact of the tourism industry on the economy of Northern Ireland. [81308]

Mr. Ingram: During 1998, staying visitors in Northern Ireland contributed £217 million to the Northern Ireland economy, with an additional estimated £57 million from domestic tourism (totalling £274 million). This accounts for approximately 2 per cent. of Northern Ireland's GDP and sustains the equivalent of 14,750 full-time jobs in the industry.

Driving Licences

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when she plans to make Canadian driving licences exchangeable for Northern Ireland driving licences. [81494]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The ability to exchange a Canadian driving licence for a Northern Ireland licence would require new Northern Ireland primary legislation. This will be a matter for the new Assembly to consider, taking account of similar legislation introduced in Great Britain last August.

Parks and Play Areas

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment she has made of the condition of public parks and play areas in Northern Ireland and the impact of social and policing problems related to the conflict of the past 30 years on such facilities. [81626]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Any assessment of the condition of public parks and play areas in Northern Ireland would be a matter for individual district councils. I am not aware that a general survey of these facilities has been carried out. The impact of social and policing problems over the years has not, therefore, been considered by central government.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures the Government plan to take to improve parks and play areas in Northern Ireland. [81625]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The establishment and upkeep of parks and play areas in Northern Ireland are functions of district councils. The Government have no plans to provide financial assistance or to make improvements in these areas.

Political Activity (Staff)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the policy of her Department in respect of members of staff engaged in political activity. [81860]

Mr. Paul Murphy: All civil servants are required to observe rules on engagement in political activities liable to give public expression to political views. The rules are intended to protect the political impartiality of the Civil Service whilst giving individuals the greatest possible freedom to participate in public affairs.

The extent to which a member of staff is permitted to engage in political activity, and whether they are required to seek permission from their department, is determined by reference to the grade of the individual and the nature of their official duties. Even where permission has been granted, the individual is required to observe fully the general rules on conduct and the code of discretion which governs the extent to which a civil servant may express political views.

All staff are barred from any form of political activity whilst on duty or in uniform or on official premises.

The rules on political activity are contained in the Northern Ireland Civil Service Pay and Conditions of Service Code which is available to all staff. Similar rules applying to Home Civil Servants are contained in their Staff Handbook.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action was taken following the investigations into a member of staff from the Department of the Environment-Planning Service who appeared on a public platform at a rally in support of the Spirit of Drumcree Group in November 1995; and if she will place the report of the inquiry in the Library. [81885]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Following an internal investigation, and having considered representations made by him, the Department of the Environment (NI) concluded that the officer concerned had, by his comments and actions in November 1995, breached the Conduct section of the Northern Ireland Civil Service Pay and Conditions of Service Code. The officer consequently received, in December 1998, a formal written reprimand and a warning as to his future conduct.

As disciplinary action involving a civil servant is an internal matter which is dealt with by his/her employing Department in confidence, and in strict accordance with established procedures, it is not appropriate for any papers relating to this internal investigation to be placed in the Library. The officer concerned has, in any case, indicated his intention to appeal against the disciplinary penalty imposed.

Pensioners

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures she is taking to assist pensioners in Northern Ireland. [81282]

Mr. McFall: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bristol, North-West (Dr. Naysmith) on 28 April 1999, Official Report, column 332.

Departmental Legal Business

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on her Department's policy when (a) conducting legal proceedings and (b) seeking legal advice as to the circumstances in which Queen's Counsel should be instructed; and for each of the last three years (i) on how many occasions her Department instructed Queen's Counsel and (ii) what was the total cost of instructing Queen's Counsel. [81766]

The Attorney-General: I have been asked to reply.

I answer this question on behalf of the Northern Ireland Office because as Attorney-General for Northern Ireland I have statutory superintendence of the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland and appoint the Crown Solicitor and Senior and Junior Crown Counsel in Northern Ireland. Senior Crown Counsel is a Queen's Counsel. Both Counsels are retained by the Crown to undertake work on behalf of the Government and Northern Ireland Departments.

In civil cases, in conducting Government work, the most important work would be undertaken by Senior Crown Counsel. In other cases where a Queen's Counsel is required and it is not possible to instruct Crown Counsel, either because of his workload or because of the need for specialist skills, a Queens Counsel is instructed from amongst the Bar of Northern Ireland.

The Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland nominates three counsels, one of whom is a Queen's Counsel, to whom he would first have recourse to prosecute the most serious of prosecutions. Thereafter, in any case requiring a Queen's Counsel he would instruct counsel from the Bar of Northern Ireland.

In determining whether a Queen's Counsel is to be instructed, the Crown Solicitor and the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland will consider the individual circumstances in each case. They will take into account, inter alia, the weight and complexity of the evidence and the degree of experience and expertise required before deciding whether Queen's Counsel should be instructed.

It should be understood that Northern Ireland is a separate jurisdiction with its own laws, courts and independent Bar. The role of counsel also differs from that of counsel in England and Wales: in particular, in criminal cases, in relation to the contact counsel in Northern Ireland has with witnesses and victims. The consideration given to the instruction of counsel by the Crown Solicitor and Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland will be made in the light of the particular circumstances of the separate jurisdiction of Northern Ireland.

Records are not maintained in a form which would enable the number of occasions on which the Crown Solicitor and the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland have instructed Queen's Counsel in the last three years, and the cost of doing so, to be given without incurring disproportionate cost.

The Compensation Agency for Northern Ireland and the Departmental Solicitor's Office will both, on occasions, instruct Queen's Counsel on the same basis as the Crown Solicitor and the Director of Public Prosecutions of Northern Ireland.

WALES

Environmental Research

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to paragraph 4.85 of his Department's Annual Report, Cm 4216, what are (a) the cost of the environmental research programme and (b) the names of each of the studies completed or in progress; and if he will place copies of each of these studies in the Library. [81941]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Welsh Office expenditure on the programme in 1998–99 was £320,000.

Projects in progress in 1998–99 were:

Air Quality Monitoring Database for Wales

Rural Sulphur Dioxide Monitoring in Wales

Poly Aromatic Hydrocarbons (PAH) Monitoring

Welsh Acid Waters Survey Database

Nitrogen Deposition—Impacts on Upland Acid Grassland

Biogeochemical Consequences of Climate Change on Upland Acid Grassland

Environmental Change Network—Snowdonia

UK Greenhouse Gas Emissions—Inventory for Wales

Rapid On-Site Analysis of Radioactivity in Wales

Countryside Survey 2000—Land Cover Mapping

Monitoring of Stranded Cetaceans

Macrobenthic Survey in Milford Haven

Monitoring of Sheep Dip Compounds in Private Water Supplies

Effects of Sewage Sludge Applications on Soil Microbial Activity and Fertility.

Completed project reports in 1998–99 were:

The Application of Mineral Processing Technology to the Decontamination of Metalliferous Mine Spoil

River Rhymney Minewater Study—Review of Remedial Options

Scoping Study for an INTERREG Marine Information System for the Southern Irish Sea

All-Wales Environmental Health Surveillance Project

Air Quality Monitoring Database—Second Annual Report

DETR Report—Rural Sulphur Dioxide Concentrations in the UK: 1996.

I am arranging for copies of the completed reports to be placed in the Library of the House as soon as possible.

Ministerial Meetings (US)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many times ministers in his Department held meetings with members and officials in the US Administration since 1 June 1998, indicating the dates and locations of each meeting, the ministers involved at each meeting and the US Department involved in each meeting. [82253]

Mr. Michael: None.

Housing (Newport)

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on Newport County Borough's plans to demolish its prefabricated housing stock and its impact on housing funding for Newport. [82423]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The council's stock of pre-fabricated bungalows is in very poor structural condition and the authority has engaged in intensive consultation with residents regarding the future of these properties. Any resources it allocates towards their replacement or repair will depend on its local priorities as set out in its Housing Strategy and Operational Plan. The funding of any major redevelopment programme will be a matter for the National Assembly for Wales. I have, however, been able to allocate additional credit approval of £550,000 to support the development of the council's proposals in 1999–2000.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many beds are currently blocked in each of the district hospitals in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [80841]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The latest available information relating to delayed discharges from hospital is shown by NHS Trust in the following table. Information relates to a chosen day in January 1999 (usually 31 January 1999), as reported in local authority responses to the Survey of Delayed Discharges from Hospital. The survey requested information on the numbers of hospital patients known to local authority social services departments, who were medically fit to be discharged, but were still occupying a hospital bed. All patients medically fit to be discharged are counted and may include patients whose delay came within agreed timescales for the discharge process.

NHS Trust	Number of delayed discharges, January 1999
Bridgend and District	5
Cardiff Community Healthcare	8
Carmarthen and District	12

Wrexham Maelor Hospital	9
Total	590

[1] As reported by Caerphilly County Borough Council on post April 1999 Trust basis.

[2] Includes 6 patients with delayed discharges at February 1999.

Following the transfer of functions this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Drug Treatment (Young Adults)

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many young adults started drug treatment in each local authority area in Wales in each of the past 10 years. [81334]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Reliable information on the number of young adults starting drug treatment in Wales is not currently available. Some data are obtained on a voluntary basis by the Welsh Drug and Alcohol Unit although coverage is incomplete. The arrangements for collecting data in this area are currently under review.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Low Birthweight Babies

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of low birthweight babies were born in each (i) local and (ii) health authority area in Wales in each of the past 10 years. [81330]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The information readily available on a comparable basis for the 22 unitary authorities and 5 health authorities in Wales, provided by the Office for National Statistics, is for 1990 to 1997 and is given in the table.

Distribution of low birthweight babies by authority

Health authority/Unitary authority	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996	1997

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Owain Glyndwr Pennal Letter and Seal

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will request the return of the Pennal Letter and Seal of Owain Glyndwr to Wales from France for the opening of the National Assembly for Wales. [82451]

Mr. Michael: The National Library of Wales is already planning a major exhibition about the life of Owain Glyndwr for the year 2000. I have asked the National Library and the National Museums and Galleries of Wales, in co-operation, to explore urgently the practicalities of acquiring the Seal and the Letter on loan. The nature of the artefacts is such that they could be displayed only in the strictly controlled environment that can be provided by the Library and the Museum. I have asked to be informed of the outcome, and will keep my hon. Friend informed.

CABINET OFFICE

Public Bodies

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what upper age limits apply to the membership of public bodies; and what plans he has to review this. [82054]

Mr. Kilfoyle: All public appointments are made on merit. There are no upper age limits which apply to public appointments. I have no plans to review the current position.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Raw Cows' Milk

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 26 February 1999, Official Report, column 469, if he will list the names of the hon. Members who wrote to him in (a) January, (b) February and (c) March regarding the Monopolies and Mergers Commission's inquiry into the supply of raw cows' milk. [82053]

Dr. Howells: I am placing in the Library of the House a list of the hon. Members who wrote to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in January, February and March regarding the Monopolies and Mergers Commission's report into the supply in Great Britain of raw cows' milk.

Insolvency

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place the minutes of the Insolvency Review Working Party in the Library. [82008]

Dr. Howells: No. The Insolvency Regulation Working Party was established by the seven insolvency Recognised Professional Bodies and my Department's Insolvency Service. Its members were the representatives of these bodies. The Working Party was charged with reporting to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and to the Presidents of the professional bodies. The Working Party has completed its task and copies of its report are in the Library of the House.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will require those licensed under the Insolvency Act 1986 to publish information about their affairs and the impact of their actions on stakeholders. [82011]

Dr. Howells: I have no plans to do so.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the insolvency practitioners licensed by his Department. [82141]

Dr. Howells: The following practitioners are authorised by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State:

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals he has to replace the present regulators of the insolvency business with a single independent regulator. [82144]

Dr. Howells: I have no such proposals.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many of the meetings held by the Insolvency Review Working Party have been open to the public. [82009]

Dr. Howells: None. The Insolvency Regulation Working Party met in private but also carried out a wide ranging consultation exercise so that all those with an interest in this field had an opportunity to make their views known.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many complaints relating to insolvency practitioners have been referred to his Department since May 1997. [82010]

Dr. Howells: Sixty-eight complaints about insolvency practitioners authorised by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State have been referred to my Department since May 1997.

Cashmere Wool Industry

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what guidance he has issued to companies operating in the United Kingdom cashmere wool industry regarding the guaranteeing of the bond imposed upon them by the United States of America. [77900]

Mr. Battle: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) on 27 April 1999, Official Report, column 83.

Wealth Warnings (Radio)

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 25 January 1999, Official Report, column 28, if he is now in a position to make an announcement about the removal of wealth warnings from radio advertisements. [81572]

Dr. Howells: Since my reply of 25 January 1999, I have been undertaking further consultations with representatives of the credit industry and consumer bodies. Once these have been concluded, and I have considered their responses, I will make a further announcement.

Royal Mail

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the delivery (a) targets and (b) performance of the Royal Mail letter service for (i) first and (ii) second class mail in each of the last 12 months in the Stoke-on-Trent postal area. [82145]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Responsibility for mail delivery performance rests with Post Office management from whom I understand that Royal Mail's delivery performance for first and second class mail for the Stoke-on-Trent postcode over the last four quarters has been as follows:

	First class (percentage)	Second class (percentage)
Target	94.0	96.9
Actual:
June 1998	92.3	98.4
September 1998	92.4	98.8
December 1998	92.5	99.8
March 1999	90.0	97.7

These figures relate to the percentages of first class mail delivered the next working day after posting and of second class mail delivered within three working days of posting.

Product Liability

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 24 March 1999, Official Report, column 270, on product liability, what plans he has to collate and publish details of cases concerning product safety; and if he will make a statement. [81681]

Dr. Howells: Records of cases kept by the courts do not provide sufficient information to enable a search to be made by reference to the particular legislation under which the actions have been brought. However, when product liability cases brought under Part I of the Consumer Protection Act 1987 raise significant points of law, judgments given in them would be reported in published law reports, and these are monitored by the Department. The Secretary of State made a report to Parliament under section 42 of the 1987 Act on action taken under Part II of the Act (product safety) on 25 November 1998 (ISBN O 10 252299 5).

Auditors

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will require those licensed to act as auditors under the Companies Act 1989 to publish information about their affairs and the impact of their actions on stakeholders. [82007]

Dr. Howells: The Government have no plans to do so. Requiring registered auditors to publish information about their affairs would need primary legislation. The five bodies recognised to register and supervise auditors already submit reports to my Department every six months, covering the monitoring, inspection, supervision and disciplining of company auditors. Their annual reports, which are published by the bodies, are placed in the Library of the House.

Heritage plc

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what investigations he had conducted into the receivership of Heritage plc. [82143]

Dr. Howells: My Department has made no investigations into the receivership of Heritage plc but officials are in touch with the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales concerning a complaint made to the Institute about the conduct of the administrative receivers.

Accountants

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce legislation to prevent accountants acting as reporting accountants from acting as receivers. [82142]

Dr. Howells: This issue has been referred to the joint DTI/Treasury review of corporate rescue procedures. Their final report is expected by the end of 1999 and we will give careful consideration to their recommendations.

Consumer Credit

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of holders of current consumer credit licences are also authorised under the Financial Services Act 1986. [81596]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 20 April 1999]: This information is not available in the form requested and to collate such information would involve disproportionate cost.

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many consumer credit licences have been revoked by the Office of Fair Trading, and for what reasons, in (a) 1997, (b) 1998 and (c) 1999 to date. [81595]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 20 April 1999]: The Director General of Fair Trading revoked 35 licences in 1997 and 17 licences in 1998. 10 licences were revoked during the period 1 January to 19 April 1999.

Generally, a licence is revoked as a result of complaints and/or criminal convictions against the licensee which show that the licensee is no longer a fit person to engage in the activities covered by the licence. The exact reasons for the revocation of a particular licence are placed on the public register which the Director General has a duty to maintain under section 35 of the Consumer Credit Act. This information is available to the general public from:

The Office of Fair Trading
Consumer Credit Licensing Bureau
Craven House
40 Uxbridge Road
Ealing
London W5 2BS
Telephone: 0171 269 8608/8616.

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff were employed by the Office of Fair Trading to carry out its consumer credit, licensing and related regulatory functions during (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000. [81592]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 20 April 1999]: The number of staff units employed by the Office of Fair Trading to carry out these functions were as follows:

Period	Number of staff units
1997–98	85.6

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what requirements have to be met to obtain a consumer credit licence from the Office of Fair Trading. [81594]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 20 April 1999]: The Director General of Fair Trading has to be satisfied that an applicant is fit to engage in all the business activities covered by a licence and that the applicant's name is not misleading or undesirable. In considering whether or not an applicant is a fit person he will have regard to evidence tending to show that an applicant has:

(a) committed any offence involving fraud or other dishonesty, or violence;

(b) contravened any provision made by or under the Consumer Credit Act 1974, or by or under any other enactment regulating the provision of credit or other transactions with individuals;

(c) practised discrimination on grounds of sex, colour, race or ethnic or national origins in, or in connection with, the carrying on of any business; or

(d) engaged in business practices appearing to the Director General to be deceitful or oppressive, or otherwise unfair or improper (whether unlawful or not).

These criteria are set out in full in section 25 of the Consumer Credit Act.

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many current consumer credit licensees are operating (a) in the consumer credit market, (b) in the secured credit market for loans of up to £25,000 and (c) in the secured credit market for loans above £25,000. [81593]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 20 April 1999]: The Director General of Fair Trading collects information to help him assess the fitness of licence holders but does not collate information about their business activity. To collate such information would require disproportionate cost.

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many consumer credit licences issued by the Office of Fair Trading under the Consumer Credit Act 1974 are still current. [81598]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 20 April 1999]: There were 261,075 current licences on 1 April 1999.

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what monitoring the Office of Fair Trading and trading standards officers undertake of individuals granted consumer credit licences under the Consumer Credit Act 1974. [81597]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 20 April 1999]: The Office of Fair Trading generally relies upon local authority trading standards services to monitor licensees. Consumers who have problems with licence holders can complain to their local trading standards services, and details of these complaints are passed to the Office of Fair Trading. Trading standards services also have powers under the Consumer Credit Act 1974 that allow them to enter premises, inspect documents, and to make test purchases. They also prosecute offences under the Act.

The Office of Fair Trading maintains a register of convictions that result from action by trading standards services. The register is used in both assessing the fitness of applicants for licences and monitoring the continuing fitness of licensees.

Export Licences

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those countries for which an export licence for goods with a possible military application is not permitted. [82438]

Dr. Howells: All applications for an individual licence to export arms and other goods entered in Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994 (the so-called Military List) are assessed on a case by case basis using the criteria announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on 28 July 1997, Official Report, columns 26–29, and the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports. Both sets of criteria are also used to assess applications for a licence to export dual-use goods where there are grounds for believing that the end-user would be the armed forces or internal security forces of the recipient country.

As noted in the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. King) by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd), on 28 January 1998, Official Report, columns 273–74, a list of all UK policy commitments, including embargoes, has been placed in the Library of the House and an updated version will be laid annually (or more frequently if policy changes require a revision).

Consultations (Postal Costs)

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will pay the postal costs of voluntary bodies and registered charities requested to respond to Government consultation documents; and if he will make a statement. [80918]

Dr. Howells: We will consider paying these costs where circumstances merit.

Telecommunications Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the outcome of the Telecommunications Council held in Luxembourg on 22 April; and if he will make a statement. [82396]

Mr. Wills: I represented the UK at the Telecommunications Council on 22 April. The Council reached political agreement on a common position in respect of a Directive on a Common Framework for Electronic Signatures. A Council Resolution on the Year 2000 Computer Problem was agreed in principle.

The Council also held a debate on the state of the EU telecommunications market. The Commission presented a Communication on the results of public consultation on the Green Paper on the Convergence of Telecommunications, Media and Information Technology Sectors, on which Council Conclusions were agreed in principle. The Commission also presented its Green Paper on Access to Public Sector Information, and provided an oral update regarding developments on Globalisation and the Information Society, Internet Domain Names, and on the public consultation on the Commission Green Paper on Radio Spectrum Policy.

Miners (Compensation)

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much in total he estimates his Department will pay in compensation as result of miners' (a) vibration white finger injuries and (b) chronic bronchitis and emphysema diseases. [82530]

Mr. Battle: The gross level of provision for the British Coal health liabilities assumed by the Department is:

1999–2000	228.2
2001–02	507.5

Due to a number of uncertainties—not least the number of claims likely to be received and the actual levels of compensation payable in individual cases—it is not possible to say how much will be required to meet the specific cost of miners' health claims for vibration white finger, and chronic bronchitis and emphysema.

The Government have however made it clear that they will provide the funds necessary to meet the cost of legitimate claims.

Right-hand Drive Vehicles

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what powers he has to prevent car manufacturers from refusing to supply right-hand drive vehicles to continental dealers for sale to United Kingdom customers. [81223]

Mr. Byers: EC competition law provides that manufacturers must not restrict the freedom of their dealers to supply right-hand drive motor vehicles to UK customers.

Enforcement of these provisions is a matter for the European Commission. The seriousness with which the Commission views breaches of EC law was demonstrated by its decision to fine Volkswagen £67 million in January 1998 for prohibiting its dealers in Italy from selling cars to foreign buyers.

Forest Products (Trade Liberalisation)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the United Kingdom's policy is on the proposal from the US and other Governments to negotiate a forest products sectoral trade liberalisation agreement before the 1999 WTO ministerial conference in Seattle. [82262]

Mr. Wilson: The possibility of a sectoral liberalisation agreement reducing tariffs on forest products and other limited sectors is being proposed by the US and other members of APEC for agreement at the WTO Ministerial Conference in Seattle. The primary objective of the Conference is to launch a new comprehensive round of trade negotiations, including industrial tariffs, agriculture, services and technical standards and a range of other issues. The UK's priority issues were set out in my previous answer to the hon. Member for Hazel Grove (Mr. Stunell) of 21 January 1999, Official Report, column 548. The UK and the EU are concerned not to lose momentum for launching the wider negotiations at Seattle by focusing only on limited sectors. We do not rule out early agreements on tariffs including the forest product sector during the course of the new round as part of a comprehensive package of negotiations.

Professional Statisticians

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff who have worked as professional statisticians in his Department have left on early retirement in each of the past 10 years. [81179]

Mr. Byers: Three "professional" Statisticians have left the Department on early retirement, including retirement on medical grounds, in the last ten years.

Milk Marque

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what considerations are delaying publication of the MMC report on Milk Marque. [82273]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 27 April 1999]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry will publish the report as soon as is practicable.

The Department of Trade and Industry has provided information about the publication arrangements for monopoly reports at paragraphs 8.1–8.3 of its publication "Guidance on DTI procedures for handling Monopoly references and reports", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Professional Statisticians

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many staff who have worked as professional statisticians in his Department have left on early retirement in each of the past 10 years. [81178]

Mr. Morley: The number of professional statisticians who left on early retirement (including on medical grounds) from my Department in each of the past 10 years was as follows:

Year	Number
1990	0
1992	0
1994	0
1996	0
1998	0

I have asked Chief Executives to reply separately.

Letter from Dr. J. M. Rutter to Mr. Menzies Campbell, dated 28 April 1999:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question about how many staff who have worked as professional statisticians at the Veterinary Medicines Directorate have left on early retirement terms in each of the past 10 years. This is an operational matter for which I am responsible.

There were no such retirements for these staff in each of the past 10 years.

Letter from P. W. Greig-Smith to Mr. Menzies Campbell, dated 28 April 1999:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your question on professional statisticians who have left on early retirement in each of the last ten years. I am replying on behalf of the Centre for Environment, Fisheries & Aquaculture Science (CEFAS), which, prior to April 1997, was the MAFF Directorate of Fisheries Research (DFR).

I can advise you that no professional statisticians have left DFR/CEFAS on early retirement during the period 1989 to 1998.

Letter from Johnston McNeill to Mr. Menzies Campbell, dated 28 April 1999:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) your question to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food requesting information on the number of staff who have worked as professional statisticians who have left on early retirement in each of the past ten years, has been passed to me to reply as regards this Executive Agency.

The MHS is responsible for enforcing meat hygiene, inspection, animal welfare and Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy (BSE) legislation in licensed fresh meat premises in Great Britain. The majority of MHS staff are veterinary surgeons or Meat Hygiene Inspectors. The MHS does not have any professional statisticians in its employment.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Mr. Menzies Campbell, dated 28 April 1999:

The Minister has asked me to respond to your question about staff who have worked as professional statisticians in MAFF and have left on early retirement in each of the past ten years.

No professional statisticians have worked at the VLA and took early retirement in the past ten years.

Letter from P. I. Stanley to Mr. Menzies Campbell, dated 28 April 1999:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply, in respect of the Central Science Laboratory (CSL), to your questions concerning professional statisticians.

CSL was established as an Executive Agency of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (MAFF) in April 1992. Since that time there have been no professional statisticians who have left the Agency on early retirement grounds.

CSL presently employs one member of staff as a professional statistician, graded at CSL Level 3 (SEO equivalent). This person has not been granted chartered statistician status by the Royal Statistical Society and has not been accepted as fast stream by the Civil Service Selection Board.

Letter from Sarah Nason to Mr. Menzies Campbell, dated 28 April 1999:

The Minister has asked me to respond, in respect of the Farming and Rural Conservation Agency (FRCA), to your question about the number of staff who have worked as professional statisticians in his Department who have left on early retirement in the past ten years.

FRCA was created as an Executive Agency on 1 April 1997: to date no professional statisticians have been employed by the Agency.

Letter from J. A. Bainton to Mr. Menzies Campbell, dated 28 April 1999:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply, in respect of the Pesticides Safety Directorate (PSD), to your question concerning the employment of professional statisticians.

Since PSD was formed in 1993, no professional statisticians have been employed in the Agency.

Rats

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate his Department has made of the rat population of (a) the UK, (b) London, (c) Manchester, (d) Liverpool, (e) Newcastle, (f) Bristol and (g) Plymouth. [82460]

Mr. Morley: Data on the incidence of rodents in England were collected in the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions' 1996 English House Condition Survey on behalf of MAFF. The results should be published later this year. The sample size of the survey does not permit figures for individual local authorities to be produced.

Information for the other parts of the UK is the responsibility of the respective Secretaries of State.

Food Labelling

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will require the labelling of food products to contain information on the age of each ingredient. [82002]

Mr. Rooker: Consumers need information on the minimum durability of food products, so that food can be consumed within its recommended period and while it retains its specific properties. This need is met by the legal requirement to provide 'use by' or 'best before' dates for most prepacked foods. Information on the varying ages of the individual ingredients would not enable consumers to use food within the appropriate timescale.

Food Standards Agency

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many existing MAFF staff will be transferred to the Food Standards Agency. [82272]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 27 April 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Maidenhead (Mrs. May) on 23 March 1999, Official Report, column 219.

EU Fraud

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what (a) discussions he has had and (b) proposals his Department has put forward at Council of Ministers' meetings in respect of EU fraud; and if he will make a statement. [77777]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 19 March 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to the Treasury on 19 March 1999, Official Report, column 858.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many times officials from his Department have met their opposite numbers in the US Government and US Embassy to discuss genetically modified organisms and the biotechnology industry since 1 June 1998; and if he will list for each meeting the dates and locations; and the US department whose officials they met. [81082]

Mr. Rooker: Ministers and officials in this Department are in regular contact with representatives of all those with an interest in biotechnology—including environmental groups, consumer groups and biotechnology companies. We are also following practice and trials in a number of countries overseas, including the United States.

Rabies

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if countries with land borders with countries outside the European Union will be eligible for the pet passport system recommended by Professor Kennedy if they comply with the Office International des Epizooties definition of being free from rabies. [81928]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 26 April 1999]: The Kennedy Group recommended that pet cats and dogs resident in all EU and EEA countries should be eligible for alternative arrangements to quarantine, regardless of whether those countries had land borders with countries outside the European Union. In addition, the Government plan to include Switzerland, Andorra, Monaco, San Marino, and the Vatican in the new arrangements.

The Kennedy Group recommended that, in addition, islands elsewhere in the world meeting the OIE definition of being free from rabies should be included. Other countries which are rabies free but are not islands would not be included. The Government are following the approach of Professor Kennedy's Group here.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the countries which will be contacted to confirm whether they can comply with the OIE definition of being free from rabies; and when he expects to publish the list of qualifying countries. [81929]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 26 April 1999]: We have already written to the following islands which appear to meet the OIE definition of being rabies free to seek confirmation that this is the case:

Antigua and Barbuda
Australia
Bahrain
Barbados
Cape Verde
China (Taiwan)
Cook Islands
Falkland Islands
Fiji
French Polynesia
Japan
Jamaica
Malta
Mauritius
New Caledonia
New Zealand
Réunion
St. Kitts
St. Lucia
Seychelles
Singapore
Vanuatu.

The Government are accepting representations from other islands not on the list.

Pork and Bacon

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he has taken recently to urge consumers to purchase pork and bacon that has been reared to high welfare standards. [82443]

Mr. Rooker: In recent months we have encouraged consumers, retailers, caterers and public procurement bodies to take account of quality and welfare factors when purchasing pigmeat. This encouragement has taken place at industry events, seminars and meetings and in letters. We have also written to all MPs and UK MEPs urging them to support the pig industry in its efforts to meet consumer demands.

Abattoirs (Inspections)

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the answer given to the hon. Member for South-East Cambridgeshire on 15 February 1999, Official Report, column 574, what separate items have to be inspected by the EU Commission before the export ban can be lifted; if the abattoirs which apply then will require a second inspection; when he will invite the Commission to carry out the inspections already required; and what remaining issues need to be resolved before that invitation is issued. [72252]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 22 February 1999]: The European Commission inspected our procedures for operating the Date-based Export Scheme (DBES) from 12 to 16 April. During their visit, the inspectors were given demonstrations of the practical operation of the DBES in three slaughterhouses—one in England, one Scotland and one in Northern Ireland. They also visited two farms, an incinerator, an Animal Health Divisional Office and the new Unit in Gloucester which will run the Scheme.

The Commission are now writing a report of their inspection for presentation to the Standing Veterinary Committee (SVC). After the SVC have seen the inspection report, the Commission should set a date from which exports of UK beef produced under the DBES can start.

There is no requirement for the individual abattoirs which decide to participate in the DBES to be inspected by the Commission. The approval of such abattoirs will be dealt with on a national basis.

Genetically Modified Crops

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what reports he has received on cross-pollination between genetically modified oil seed rape in field trials and the wild weed variety; and if he will make a statement on the latter's resistance to weedkiller. [81781]

Mr. Rooker: There is no evidence, from MAFF-funded research, of cross hybridisation between oilseed rape and weeds in field trials. However, the research is still at an early stage and it is not possible to exclude the possibility that hybrids may be found. There have been reports of herbicide-resistant wild turnip in oilseed rape fields in some part of the UK. It is likely that the wild turnip, a close relative of oilseed rape, is naturally resistant to the same herbicides as is unmodified oilseed rape.

Plant Variety and Seeds Office

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the meetings which officials from the Plant Variety and Seeds Office have attended with officials from (a) EU member states, (b) the European Commission and (c) the World Trade Organisation since 1 January 1999; and if he will list such meetings planned up to 1 June 1999. [81880]

Mr. Rooker: The lists requested are set out.

Departmental Legal Business

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his Department's policy when (a) conducting legal proceedings and (b) seeking legal advice as to the circumstances in which Queen's Counsel should be instructed; and for each of the last three years (i) on how many occasions his Department instructed Queen's Counsel and (ii) what was the total cost of instructing Queen's Counsel. [81759]

Mr. Rooker: The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food predominantly uses junior counsel when it is necessary to instruct counsel to provide legal advice or to conduct legal proceedings.

In civil cases, the two First Treasury Counsel are both junior counsel and they will advise and represent the government without a Queen's Counsel in many of its important cases. In addition, the Attorney-General maintains four panels of junior Counsel who departments are expected to use for the majority of the government's civil litigation. The Attorney-General or Solicitor-General's approval is required before a Queen's Counsel can be instructed to appear in civil litigation.

A panel of Counsel, maintained by the Attorney-General, exists to provide advice in more significant criminal case work. His consent is sought to the nomination of such Counsel.

In determining the level of counsel to use, the department will consider the individual circumstances of each case. It will take into account, inter alia, the importance and sensitivity of the case, the complexity of the law, the weight and complexity of the evidence, and the degree of experience and expertise required before deciding whether to instruct Queen's Counsel or junior counsel.

The number of occasions on which the Ministry instructed Queen's Counsel in the last three years, and the cost of doing so, cannot be given without incurring disproportionate cost.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Historic Military Equipment

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he issued a heritage export licence for a Panzer iv/70 (V) main battle tank during 1998. [82194]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The information given on applications for heritage export licences is commercially sensitive and is given in confidence. The Government cannot, therefore, reveal details about objects which are the subject of applications. We are advised that it would also be an unwarranted invasion of privacy contrary to Article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what (a) regulations and (b) guidelines he has issued relating to the export of military equipment which is over 50 years old. [82172]

Mr. Alan Howarth: An individual export licence is required on heritage grounds from my Department for firearms between 50 and 100 years old if valued at or above £39,600. All other arms and armour over 50 years of age and firearms more than 100 years old require an individual export licence on heritage grounds if valued at or above £20,000. In addition, the export of any goods covered by Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, the so called military list, requires an export licence from the Department of Trade and Industry regardless of monetary value or age.

The booklet, "Export Licensing for Culture Goods: Procedures and Guidance for Exporters of Works of Art and other Cultural Goods", which is issued by my Department, sets out the export licensing requirements on heritage grounds.

Advance Corporation Tax

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is his assessment of the effect of recent changes to advance corporation tax on the tourism industry. [81803]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 28 April 1999]: We have made no specific assessment of the effect on the tourism industry of the recent changes to advance corporation tax.

The abolition of advance corporation tax from 6 April 1999, together with other recent changes in corporation tax, is aimed at stimulating greater high-quality long-term investment and will increase the attraction of the UK as a location for international companies. The removal of advance corporation tax, which gives all small to medium companies that pay dividends a significant cash-flow advantage, should benefit some of the many small firms which make up the tourism industry.

As we outlined in our recent strategy, "Tomorrow's Tourism", we are committed to creating the right economic climate for enterprise and investment for the whole of the UK economy as well as the tourism industry; these corporation tax changes contribute to our central economic objective of promoting economic stability as a platform for long-term sustainable growth.

Standard Spending Assessments

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for shire counties (a) the education service-block Standard Spending Assessment for each county, divided by the total number of full-time-equivalent pupils financed by that county, (b) the primary education service-sub-block Standard Spending Assessment for each county, divided by the number of primary pupils financed by that county and (c) the secondary education service-sub-block Standard Spending Assessment for each county, divided by the number of secondary pupils financed by that county. [82206]

Ms Armstrong: Data are not collected on the total number of full-time-equivalent pupils financed by a county.

The calculations in the table for (b) and (c) have divided the Standard Spending Assessment by the estimated number of resident pupils (as defined in the Local Government Finance Report) for primary (aged 5 to 10) and secondary (aged 11 to 15) pupils respectively. Equivalent data for resident nursery (aged 3 to 4) pupils and resident pupils aged 16 and over do not exist; it is not therefore possible to provide data for (a).

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each shire county (a) the difference between the education department budget and that county's education service-block SSA in 1998–99 and (b) that sum, divided by the total number of full-time-equivalent pupils financed by that education department. [82171]

Ms Armstrong: Shire counties have reported budget education net revenue expenditure and their education SSA for 1998–99, as given in the table.

Data are not collected on the total number of full-time-equivalent pupils financed by a county. Education Net Revenue Expenditure covers a wider range of activities than school expenditure, so it would not be appropriate to present this information on a per pupil basis.

Street Lighting

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to introduce competition into the market for street lighting connections; and what estimate he has made of the potential savings for local authorities from such competition. [82140]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This is a matter for the Director General of Electricity Supply. I understand that he has already conducted a consultation on this and related issues and is in the process of examining the options arising from that consultation.

Planning Application (New Mills)

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on what grounds the Government Office for the South West issued an article 14 direction to the Stroud District Council in relation to the planning application (No. 98/1386) by Renishaw plc at New Mills, Wootton under Edge, Gloucestershire; and if he will reach his decision by 1 May. [82453]

Mr. Caborn: An Article 14 Direction was issued in order to give the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions more time to consider the application by Renishaw, which was referred to him by Stroud District Council. He will reach a decision as quickly as soon as possible but is unable to give an undertaking that this will be done before 1 May.

Pesticides

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress has been made by the inter-departmental group reviewing the Government's existing arrangements for monitoring pesticide-related ill health. [82857]

Mr. Meale: The Review has been completed and a copy of the group's final report has been placed in both Libraries of the House.

Railways

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish a consultation document on his plans for changes in the arrangements for the application of public subsidy to the railways. [82629]

Dr. Reid: I refer the hon. Member to my answer on 20 April 1999, Official Report, column 479.

Rail Punctuality

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to amend the compensation arrangements for season ticket holders, with particular reference to the moving average punctuality statistics, when the rail company charters are next reviewed. [81513]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Changes to the compensation arrangements linked to average punctuality would be a matter for negotiation between Opraf and the train operating companies. Opraf's remit is to ensure that the standards set out in the Passenger's Charters are being met. Opraf cannot unilaterally require improvements. The moving annual average is still seen as a reasonably fair way of compensating season ticket holders for poor performance and there are no current plans to change it.

Executive Agency Targets

Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what targets he has set for (i) the Driving Standards Agency, (ii) the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency, (iii) the Highways Agency, (iv) the Vehicle Certification Agency and (v) the Vehicle Inspectorate. [82894]

Mr. Prescott: The key targets have been set for the agencies. They are included in the agencies' business plans, which include management objectives, performance indicators and key tasks, where appropriate to the agencies' business. Copies of the business plans will be placed in the Library in due course.

The key targets for the Driving Standards Agency are to:

contribute to a reduction in the numbers killed or seriously injured in accidents involving drivers aged 17–21 compared with the average for 1992–1997, with no rise in casualties; achieve the following customer service targets:

80 per cent. of all Test candidates will be satisfied with the overall level of service received from the Agency;

95 per cent. of candidates for the theory test obtain a booking at their preferred test centre within two weeks of their preferred date; the national average practical test waiting time for car tests will not exceed six weeks; appointments for car tests will be available within 10 weeks at 99 per cent. of permanent driving test centres;

keep 99.5 per cent. of theory test appointments;

99.5 per cent of practical test appointments are kept, where they are in place two days prior to the test appointment;

95 per cent. of all incoming calls to booking offices will access the handling system without receiving an engaged tone;

all calls will be answered by a human voice in no more than 20 seconds, after being routed by the call handling system; achieve an average annual return on capital employed on statutory activities of six per cent. of net assets over the period 1 April 1997 to 31 march 2002; and increase the weighted average of fees by no more than the RPI in each of the three years during the period 1 April 1997 to 1 April 2000 and by no more than the RPI minus one per cent. in each of the following two years.

The key targets for the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency are to:

make an overall efficiency gain of 2.6 per cent;

achieve a yield:cost ratio of 2.9 to 1 on enforcement (i.e. recoup £2.90 for every £1 spent);

achieve the following customer service standards;

98 per cent. of Driving Licences issued error-free;

98 per cent. of new Vehicle Registration Documents issued error-free;

97 per cent. of amended Vehicle Registration Documents issued error-free; ensure the following document turn-round times:

95 per cent. of Ordinary driving licences within 10 days;

95 per cent. of Vocational and first Provisional licences within nine days;

95 per cent. of new Vehicle Registration Documents within 12 days;

95 per cent. of amended Vehicle Registration Documents within 13 days; achieve a figure of 94 per cent. of all telephone inquiries being answered within 30 seconds; achieve a figure of 96 per cent. of all written inquiries being answered within eight days.

The key targets for the Highways Agency are to:

ensure that the percentage of the trunk road network having a zero residual life at the end of the financial year 1999–2000, is less than the figure published in the 1998 report of the National Road Maintenance Condition Survey; complete 1,750 lane kilometres of pavement renewal, including reconstruction, overlays, inlays, resurfacing and surface dressing;

develop jointly with DETR (C) indices of the condition of road pavements, suitable for publication by 31 March 2000; ensure that major roadworks on existing roads are:

no more than 2.5 miles (4km) long;

at least six miles (9.6 km) apart, except in urban areas (defined as areas where the speed limit is 30 mph or less), emergencies and otherwise agreed with DETR (C); complete 100 bridge maintenance schemes each costing over £200k; ensure that there is no material disruption to the network as a result of the Millennium Bug by:

carrying out a risk assessment on all known Agency control systems, road side equipment and facilities by the end of June 1999; and having Agency wide business continuity plans and contingency plans in place; complete 100 road schemes costing between £100k and £3 million aimed at improving road safety, contributing to an efficient economy, improving conditions for pedestrians, cyclists and equestrians (together with reducing community severance). These schemes are also aimed at reducing the adverse impacts of motorways and trunk roads on the environment and facilitating integration with other forms of transport promoting choice and information for travellers; contribute to the Government's target of reducing road casualties by one-third by the year 2000, ensuring that the average accident rates between 1996 and 1999 across the motorway and all purpose trunk road network do not exceed 20 personal injury accidents for every 100 million vehicle kilometres of travel;

progress the Traffic Control Centre Public-Private Partnership to the point of inviting best and final offers by 31 March 2000; achieve 85 per cent of scheme milestones identified in Annex C of the Business Plan; put property to economic use ensuring that:

the percentage of vacant residential properties at the end of the year does not exceed 18 per cent. of the residential portfolio; and the percentage of vacant habitable properties empty for more than six months at the end of the year does not exceed three per cent. of the residential portfolio;

develop and introduce jointly with DETR (C) a revised set of efficiency targets and indicators by 31 March 2000; publish a policy statement and action plan by 30 September 1999 on how the Agency will take forward the Government policy on Greening Government Operations; attain Investors in People by 31 December 1999;

manage the Agency's resources (programme and running costs) within the agreed financial allocations ensuring that Agency expenditure is with the target ranges of 95–100 per cent. for the following:

actual programme expenditure as a percentage of voted programme; actual running cost expenditure as a percentage of voted running costs;

meet all agreed key milestones for the successful introduction of resource accounting and budgeting as shown on page 28 of the business plan; continue to improve value for money across the Agency's activities. This target is achieved by attaining eight out of nine of the performance indicators as set out on page 29 of the business plan; fulfil the obligations of the Road Users Charter as specified in Annex E of the business plan; ensure the service provided to the public by the Agency is in accordance with the six Whitehall Standards listed in Annex F of the business plan.

The key targets for the Vehicle Certification Agency are to:

achieve break-even or better on the commercial accounts whilst achieving at least a six per cent. rate of return on capital employed; have at least 98 per cent. of approval certificates issued error-free; have at least 98 per cent. of all invoices issued error-free;

audit at least 50 per cent. of VCA's approved-type approval and 100 per cent. of the management system certification procedures with all non-compliancies found having corrective action plans agreed within 30 working days at the most, with those plans being completed within the specified time; ensure that the figure for debtor days is 70 or less; invoice within one month after the completion of all Management System Certification assessment activities; achieve-Investors in People accreditation by the end of the year;

outturn within the NRC limit.

The key targets for the Vehicle Inspectorate are to:

meet the quality and general effectiveness levels as specified in the Business Plan measures set for 1999–2000;

meet the requirements on levels and types of activity laid down in the Memorandum of Agreement on each Road Transport Enforcement Scheme as agreed with the Department of the Environment, Transport and Regions; continue to improve customer focus across VI through the implementation of initiatives in line with Better Government and government direct policies; break even while achieving an average six per cent. real rate of return on capital, over the period 1 April 1998 to 31 March 2003; achieve an Aggregated Cost Efficiency index of plus one per cent; improve staff awareness and satisfaction as measured through the annual survey and assessment against the Investors in People standard; secure the long-term development of the organisation through implementation of the Information Systems Strategy and progression of the MOT Computerisation project.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what performance targets he has set the Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre Executive Agency for 1999–2000. [82896]

Mr. Raynsford: The Agency's principal financial target for 1999–2000 is to achieve a minimum contribution to the Exchequer of £1,245,000.

Operational targets have been set to increase occupancy of the three key conference areas as follows: Churchill Auditorium to 222 days; Fleming Room to 240 days; Mountbatten Room to 200 days.

The Agency is also being required to achieve additional room hire revenue from banqueting of £175,000 and has the following key customer targets to meet:

An overall score for quality of staff of 80%.

An overall score for customer satisfaction of 78%.

An overall score for quality of venue of 75%.

The number of complaints received to be less than 2 per 100 events.

An average response time when answering complaints of less than four working days.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what estimate he has made of the number of landlords in

(a) Pendle, (b) Burnley, (c) Blackburn, (d) Rossendale, (e) Darwen and (f) Hyndburn whose rents are met from housing benefit; [82321]

(2) for each year since 1990, how many landlords received rent for their properties from housing benefit. [82320]

Angela Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

The total numbers of rent allowance cases in Pendle, Burnley, Blackburn, Rossendale, Darwen and Hyndburn (claims from tenants living in the private rented sector) in May 1998

SCOTLAND

Education (Expenditure)

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much central Government money was spent per capita in 1998 on helping schools meet special educational needs. [82212]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 26 April 1999]: In the financial year 1998–99, the Scottish Office provided £6.5 million directly to seven grant-aided special schools in Scotland, and £1.2 million to support training of local authority staff working in special needs. It is not possible to express this in capita terms. Expendture per pupil in local authority schools is the resposibility of each education authority. Local authority expenditure is supported by Aggregate External Finance. Such support is not specific to particular local authority services and it is for each authority to determine the allocation of all resources at its disposal.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much central Government money was spent per capita in 1998 on grants to (a) voluntary aided schools and (b) voluntary controlled schools. [82214]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 26 April 1999]: There are no such schools in Scotland.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much central Government money was spent per capita in 1998 on (a) primary schools, (b) secondary schools, (c) further education colleges and (d) universities. [82213]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 26 April 1999]: Direct expenditure by the Scottish Office on the education of school pupils is limited to grants made available to Jordanhill School, two self-governing schools, and certain residential special schools. Grants are also made available for pupils at certain independent schools under the Assisted Places Scheme. Comprehensive information on the division of these resources between the primary and secondary sectors is not available. Expenditure per pupil in education authority schools is the responsibility of each education authority. Local authority expenditure is supported by Aggregate External Finance. Such support is not specific to particular local authority services and it is for each authority to determine the allocation of all resources at its disposal.

The average central Government funding, in the form of grant to further education colleges in Scotland, per full-time equivalent student in financial year 1996–97 (the latest year for which final student data are available) was £3,418.

Information is not held in the format requested for university students. However, based on the allocation to higher education institutions, including universities, made by the Scottish Higher Education Funding Council in 1998–99, the main source of central Government funding, an estimate of spend per full-time equivalent student is £5,465. This does not include additional central Government money which individual institutions may access through a variety of programmes nor spending on the maintenance element of student support.

Pre-school Education

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what estimate he has made of the cost of increasing the grant for pre-school education to cover four year old pupils whose parents wish to defer entry to primary school; and if he will make a statement; [81745]

(2) if he will list those local education authorities which are funding the pre-school education of four year old children whose parents have deferred entry to primary school until after the child's fifth birthday. [81746]

Mrs. Liddell: We believe that decisions on whether a child should have their entry to school deferred should be taken locally in consultation with the education authority so that the maturity and preparedness for school of each child can be taken into account on an individual basis. Anecdotal evidence suggests that around 5% of children have their entry to primary school deferred each year. The cost of financing these places through the pre-school education grant would be around £3.5m each year.

We understand that all local authorities fund a number of children who have had their entry to primary school deferred.

As from 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Training Staff (Religious Affiliation)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will provide a breakdown of the religious composition of (a) the training staff employed at each level and (b) the trainees at each Government training centre in Northern Ireland at the latest date for which figures are available. [82193]

Mr. Ingram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Walters to Mr. Ray Beggs, dated 28 April 1999:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me, as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency, to reply to your question about the religious composition of staff and trainees at the Agency's Training Centres.

I have consulted colleagues in the Department of Finance and Personnel which, on behalf of the Northern Ireland Civil Service (NICS) and as required by the Fair Employment (Monitoring) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1999, maintains monitoring information on the composition of the NICS. In carrying out this function the Department is required to protect the confidentiality of monitoring information held on individual members of staff and of groups where the community background of individuals could be deduced.

In addition, the Department seeks to ensure that the use it makes of such monitoring information is compatible with the actions or measures it might lawfully take to address any lack of fair participation revealed by monitoring. In practice this means that the NICS does not maintain monitoring information by grade for the staff employed in Training Centres, who constitute a single occupational group. The breakdown of the community background of these staff at 1 January 1999, the latest date for which information is available, is:

	Number	Percentage
Protestant	123	52.3
Roman Catholic	85	36.2
Not determined	27	11.5

The Training and Employment Agency also monitors participation in its programmes and services in line with its commitment to equality of opportunity and fair treatment.

The Agency's 10 Training Centres are responsible for managing approximately 2,700 places on the Agency's Jobskills programme out of a total number of 14,700 Jobskills trainees. There are approximately 120 other training providers delivering the Jobskills programme.

The community background of trainees in Training Centres, derived from monitoring, is as follows:

	Number	Percentage
Protestant	775	38
Roman Catholic	1,231	60
Not determined	37	2

I hope you find this information useful.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Companies House

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what targets he has set Companies House for 1999–2000. [83002]

Dr. Howells: I have set Companies House the following targets for the 1999–2000 year.

Operational Targets

To process 99% of statutory documents within 5 days of receipt at Companies House

To achieve, on average, a monthly compliance rate for accounts submitted of 95%

To ensure that a minimum of 98% of fiche provided to customers is error-free

To ensure that there is a minimum of 96% error-free work in current processing

To answer 90% of all incoming telephone calls within 20 seconds

Questions delegated to the Chief Executive

The Chief Executive to reply within 10 days to all letters from Members of Parliament delegated to him for reply

Complaints Handling

To clear up 95% of complaints within 10 days and

To clear up 85% of complaints within 5 days

Financial Targets

To maintain a unit cost reduction of 3% in real terms on document registration

To achieve, taking one year with another, a 6% average rate of return based on the operating surplus expressed as a percentage of average net assets

To pay bills due within 30 days, or other agreed credit terms, on receipt of goods or services or a valid invoice, whichever is later.

Telecommunications

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has received a report by the Director General of Telecommunications for 1998, as required under section 55 of the Telecommunications Act 1984. [83003]

Mr. Wills: Yes. The fifteenth Report by the Director General of Telecommunications is being published today. It covers the period 1 January to 31 December 1998. Copies of the Report have been laid before each House of Parliament.

Patent Office

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what targets he has set the Patent Office for 1999–2000. [83001]

Dr. Howells: I have set the Patent Office the following targets for 1999–2000.

Patents

To issue 14,500 patent search reports or combined search and examination reports on average within 3 months from the date of request, with 90 per cent. of those within 4 months from the date of request.

To grant 8,500 valid patents on average within 2 years from the date of filing of the request for substantive examination, with 90 per cent. of those within 3 years from the date of request.

Design

To register 7,700 designs on average within 5 months from the date of filing of the application, with 90 per cent. of those within 12 months.

To process 70,000 trade mark class applications with a target to register within 9 months 90 per cent. of those to which no substantive objections are raised or oppositions filed.

Finance

To pay 100 per cent. of bills within 30 days of receipt of goods or services or a valid invoice, whichever is the later.

Questions designated to the Chief Executive

The Chief Executive will reply within 10 working days to all letters from Members of Parliament delegated to her for reply.

Efficiency Target

To increase output in relation to current expenditure by an average of at least 2 per cent. per annum over the period 1998–99 to 2002–03.

Radiocommunications Agency

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what targets he has set his Department's Radiocommunications Agency for 1999–2000. [83000]

Mr. Wills: I have set the Radiocommunications Agency the following quality of service targets for 1999–2000 in respect of its licensing and enforcement activities, and correspondence. These are in addition to achieving an overall efficiency improvement of 2 per cent. over 1998–99.

Licensing Targets

Category A

Licences that involve no frequency assignment, site clearance or international co-ordination: 100 per cent. of applications and amendments to be processed and despatched within 5 working days.

Category B

Licences that involve frequency assignment but no site clearance or international co-ordination: 90 per cent. of applications and amendments to be processed and despatched within 15 working days; the remainder to be processed and despatched within 25 working days or an explanation of the delay provided to the applicant.

Category C

Licences that require frequency assignment and site clearance and/or international co-ordination: 90 per cent. of applications and amendments to be processed and despatched within 40 working days; the remainder to be processed and despatched within 60 working days or an explanation of the delay provided to the applicant.

Renewals

Renewals of all licences in category A to be processed and despatched within 5 working days; renewals of licences in categories B and C to be processed and despatched within 10 working days.

Enforcement

100 per cent. of safety of life services reports of interference to be investigated within 24 hours.

98 per cent. of business customers reports of interference to be investigated within 5 working days; the remainder within a further 5 days.

98 per cent. of domestic customers reports of interference to be investigated within 1 month; the remainder within a further month.

Correspondence

I also expect all correspondence from hon. Members delegated to the Chief Executive by Ministers or otherwise for reply, and all written complaints addressed to him about Agency services, to be answered within 10 working days of receipt; the Agency's inquiry point to respond to 95 per cent. of calls within 30 seconds; and 100 per cent. of valid invoices to be paid within 30 days of receipt (or as agreed with the supplier).

Minimum Wage

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research his Department is undertaking on the extent to which employers are seeking to avoid their obligations under the minimum wage legislation. [81541]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Inland Revenue are enforcing the national minimum wage policy, and will supply this Department with data on all matters relating to compliance on a regular basis. In addition, we have asked the independent Low Pay Commission to monitor and evaluate the introduction and impact of the national minimum wage overall.

North Sea Coal

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment he has made of the potential for underground gasification of coal seams under the North Sea as a source of energy for the United Kingdom; [82441]

(2) what assessment he has made of the potential use of oil and gas platforms to exploit the underground gasification of coal under the North Sea. [82442]

Mr. Battle: My Department published on 22 April Energy Paper 67, which set out the Government's policy on cleaner coal technologies for research and development, technology transfer and export promotion. The Energy Paper includes a detailed account of the potential of underground coal gasification for the UK and the main technology targets for future work in this area. Our planned future R and D work will include studies on the exploitation of underground coal gasification offshore in the North Sea. Copies of Energy Paper 67 have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Weights and Measures Laboratory

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what targets he has set his Department's National Weights and Measures Laboratory for 1999–2000. [82999]

Dr. Howells: I have set the National Weights and Measures Laboratory the following quality of service and efficiency targets for 1999–2000.

Financial Targets

To report a break even situation in the Income and Expenditure Account 1999–2000.

To meet the net vote target in 1999–2000.

Operational Targets

To complete 90 per cent. of European type approvals within 10 weeks.

To complete all European type approvals within an average of eight weeks.

To complete 95 per cent. of all calibration jobs (including preparation of certificates) within 18 working days of acceptance of the work.

To meet 70 per cent. of the milestones included in the work programme agreed between NMPSU and NWML.

Questions delegated to the Chief Executive

Chief Executive to reply within 10 working days to all letters from Members of Parliament delegated to him for reply.

Financial target. Restated from previous year.

To reduce the real cost of a programme hour by 4 per cent. over the period 1997–2000.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Mature Students

18. Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the effect of the introduction of tuition fees on applications for higher education from mature students. [81533]

Mr. Mudie: The latest figures we have from the Higher Education Statistics Agency show that the introduction of tuition fees had no negative effect on the total number of mature entrants to higher education in 1998. These figures show that an increasing number of mature students opt to enter higher education via part-time courses.

Higher Education

19. Ms Blears: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to increase access to higher education by young people from inner-city areas. [81534]

Mr. Mudie: We have enabled the funding council to allocate £30 million a year to promote wider participation by people from disadvantaged backgrounds, which will be allocated by postcode. We intend that Excellence in Cities—our action plan for inner city education—will drive up standards and raise pupils' aspirations, giving many more young people the opportunity to go on to higher education.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will next meet the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals to discuss the expansion targets for higher education. [81527]

Mr. Blunkett: I met with the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals on 17 March. The expansion issues for higher education were discussed at that meeting. We have no immediate plans for further meetings.

School Admissions

20. Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps have been taken to increase the ability of popular schools to admit those children who have applied for a place. [81535]

Ms Estelle Morris: It is for school admission authorities to fix admission limits for their schools. Where parental demand cannot be satisfied it is for the LEA or, in some cases the governing body, to consider whether to bring forward proposals to expand the school. In considering such proposals, the Secretary of State currently and, from 1 September 1999, the School Organisation Committee, will have regard, among other things, to parental preferences.

Cycling

21. Mr. Lock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the provision of secure cycle storage facilities in schools and its effect on enabling children to cycle to school. [81536]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Survey information suggests that more children would cycle to school if there were better cycle storage facilities. We are considering ways of improving these facilities, and promoting safer routes and road safety training.

Funding

22. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what funds in addition to the standard spending assessment allocation have been allocated to schools for 1999–2000. [81537]

Ms Estelle Morris: £1.7 billion has been allocated to benefit schools for 1999–2000 in addition to the Standard Spending Assessment allocation.

Departmental Spending

23. Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the planned allocation of resources to central departmental spending for 1999–2000 and subsequent years. [81538]

Mr. Mudie: Details are set out in the Departmental Report which was published on 24 March 1999 and a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Top-up Fees

24. Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to allow universities to charge top-up fees. [81539]

Mr. Mudie: We have consistently said that top-up fees play no part in the Government's policy on higher education. To that end my right hon. Friend has imposed a condition on grant to the Funding Council to control such fees. Any institution charging top-up fees to students who have been assessed as eligible for fee support could incur financial penalties.

Resource Allocation

25. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to ensure that the additional resources allocated for education are spent on schools. [81540]

Ms Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State wrote in January to each English Local Education Authority to urge them to use all of the cash increase in the education SSA to support education services, especially the drive to raise school standards. We are monitoring the formal budget returns of authorities to see whether they have done this.

New Deal

26. Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the operation of the new deal in Leicester. [81542]

Mr. Andrew Smith: In the Leicestershire and Rutland Unit of Delivery the Employment Service are leading the delivery of the New Deal for long term unemployed adults and for lone parents. Fernly Business Services lead the delivery of the New Deal for young people and Pelcombe Training Ltd. is responsible for the pilot launched in November for those aged 25 and over. I am encouraged by some of the innovative approaches being developed and the efforts being made to engage a wide range of local organisations, particularly ethnic minority groups and employers.

Part-time Students

27. Mr. Beard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to support part-time students in higher education. [81543]

Mr. Mudie: From September this year tuition will be free for part-time students on benefits, and from September 2000 loans of at least £500 will be available to part-time students on low incomes. We have already made Access Funds available to part-time students, and the Higher Education Funding Council for England provides a 5 per cent. premium on funding to higher education institutions for each such student.

Early Years Education

28. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps have been taken to support playgroups and pre-schools. [81544]

30. Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps have been taken to safeguard the voluntary sector's involvement in early years services. [81546]

Ms Hodge: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for South Swindon (Ms Drown), Official Report, column 474.

29. Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress is being made in improving standards in early years education; and if he will make a statement. [81545]

Ms Hodge: Standards in early education are monitored through inspections by Ofsted. Work is underway on reviewing the desirable learning outcomes; creating a new framework of qualifications for those who work with young children; and reviewing the regulation of early education and day care. This will all contribute to further improvements in quality. In addition, Government funding for the training of early years staff has been made available through the Standards Fund and TECS.

New Deal for Schools

31. Ms Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many pupils he estimates will benefit from the new deal for schools. [81547]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Based on information supplied by Local Authorities in the third phase of the New Deal for Schools (NDS) programme, we calculate that 1.6 million pupils will benefit from the £340 million allocated recently for projects beginning in 1999–2000. Information on the number of pupils benefiting from the two previous New Deal for School rounds is not available, but we estimate that a further 1.6 million pupils have benefited from those rounds.

Teaching Standards

32. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to improve professional standards in the teaching profession. [81548]

Ms Estelle Morris: We have already acted to establish new standards for Qualified Teacher Status, and for those completing their initial training after 7 May 1999, we are introducing an induction year. Newly qualified teachers will have to meet new Induction Standards. National training programmes are already on offer based on headship standards.

Our Green Paper, "Teachers: meeting the challenge of change", published in December, set out major proposals to improve and strengthen the teaching profession. It makes important proposals to strengthen the teachers' pay structure, teacher appraisal and career and professional development, all of which will improve professional standards. Consultation has made clear that teachers and their professional bodies, initial teacher training providers, and other education bodies are keen to improve professional standards. The Government are now considering how to carry forward the proposals to create a modern and effective teaching profession for the benefit of all our children.

Non-teaching Assistants

33. Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on progress made in providing funding for additional non-teaching assistants in schools. [81549]

Ms Estelle Morris: As part of the Government's proposal to increase the number of teaching assistants by 20,000 full-time posts (or equivalent) by 2002, we have allocated £22.15 million in 1999–2000 for the Additional Literacy Support programme in primary schools. This will support the deployment of about 2,000 full-time equivalent classroom assistants nationally. In the years 2000–02, funding for the recruitment and training of a further 18,000 full time equivalent assistants will be made available.

Learning Mentors

34. Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what criteria will apply to obtaining access to a learning mentor. [81550]

Ms Estelle Morris: From September 1999, each secondary school pupil in the designated areas will have access to Learning Mentors, based in schools. Learning Mentors will be available to all who need them and will devote the majority of their time to individuals needing extra support in order to realise their full potential.

We will be agreeing the detailed arrangements for deploying mentors with the relevant local education authorities in partnership with their schools.

Careers Service

35. Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the future structure and objectives of the careers service. [81551]

Mr. Mudie: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment announced his intention, on 10 March 1999, to publish proposals this summer concerning new local and national arrangements to develop lifelong learning and skills. The Secretary of State will consider, as part of this review, the future structure of the Careers Service in England. The Secretary of State's objectives for the Careers Service are set out in the "Careers Service Planning Guidance", a copy of which is lodged in the Library.

Community Education

36. Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to encourage schools to support community education. [81552]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Department is undertaking a range of initiatives to encourage school—community links—including guidance to be published later this year. The Schools Plus Policy Action Team will report in December on how best to use schools as a focus for community services.

Class Sizes

37. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent representations he has received on the implementation of the Government's policy to reduce class sizes. [81553]

Ms Estelle Morris: We have received a number of representations in various pieces of recent correspondence about the implementation of our policy to reduce infant class sizes.

Disability Rights Commission

Valerie Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to appoint the Chair and Chief Executive of the proposed Disability Rights Commission. [83054]

Ms Hodge: The Disability Rights Commission Bill has received its Second Reading in the Commons, thereby indicating Parliamentary support for the principle of the Bill. My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, has informed the Department that they may start the recruitment for a Chair and Chief Executive for the proposed Disability Rights Commission. The successful candidates will not be formally appointed to these positions until after the Bill has received Royal Assent.

Parliamentary approval to this new service will be sought in the Summer Supplementary Estimate for the Department for Education and Employment Vote (Class 1, Vote 1). Pending that approval, urgent expenditure estimated at £100,000 will be met by repayable advances from the Contingencies Fund.

This expenditure is required to meet the cost of recruiting the Chair and Chief Executive. The urgency arises from the need to have both the Chair and Chief Executive in place as soon as possible after Royal Assent to ensure that public funds are properly protected and to enable their full participation in the planning process to ensure rapid progress to the establishment of Disability Rights Commission in April 2000.

Tuition Fees

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the current level of assessed parental income above which a student becomes eligible for (i) full and (ii) part payment of tuition fees; what plans he has to increase these threshold levels in line with inflation; what estimate he has made of the number of students who will become eligible for paying in full or in part their tuition fee if the threshold is not increased in line with inflation; and if he will make a statement. [82654]

Mr. Mudie: For the 1998–99 academic year, parents with a residual parental income of less than £16,945 after allowable deductions are not assessed as due to make any payment towards the £1,000 tuition fee contribution. Thereafter, the level of the payment they are asked to make rises in line with their residual income. Parents are assessed as due to make the full contribution if they have a residual income of just over £27,000. The threshold levels have been increased in line with inflation for the 1999–2000 academic year. We estimate that around 30 per cent. of students, where parental income is taken into account, will continue to make no contribution towards the cost of their tuition. A further third will pay less than the full contribution.

National Grid for Learning

Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of state schools he estimates are connected to the National Grid for Learning; and what proportion of teachers in state schools he estimates are, thereby able to use their own e-mail addresses. [81476]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Department published last year the results of a survey of ICT provision in schools. Subsequent annual surveys will indicate the growth in number of schools with such connections, although the latest estimates of the number of primary, secondary and special schools in England with some form of internet access are also given in the table. The Government are committed to ensuring that all schools are connected to the internet by 2002.

Percentage of schools connected

	DfEE survey March 1996	DfEE survey March 1998	BECTa estimate February 1999
Primary	5	17	30
Secondary	47	83	90
Special	8	31	45

It is for schools to decide whether they make use of services and systems supporting an individual e-mail address for each teacher in the light of their own needs and development plans. The Department will be collecting and publishing figures relating to teachers' and pupils' personal e-mail addresses in the next "Statistical Bulletin on Information Technology in Schools". We expect to publish this information in November 1999.

Physical Education Training

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the average number of hours spent on PE training during teacher training courses. [82083]

Ms Estelle Morris: It is the responsibility of initial teacher training (ITT) providers to decide what proportion of time should be spent on any particular subject in the courses they run. No information on the amount of time spent on PE, or any other subject, is held centrally and no estimates have been made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State.

Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools did, at the request of the then Secretary of State, carry out a sample survey of 20 ITT providers between October 1996 and December 1997 to provide more information on the preparation of trainees for primary teaching, who were not PE specialists, to teach PE. He reported that on average postgraduate trainees had 23 hours of PE training and that undergraduates had 32 hours: which is a similar proportion of time to that allocated to other National Curriculum foundation subjects.

Higher Education (Cornwall)

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the opportunity for the future development of higher education in Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly. [81515]

Mr. Mudie: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State recognises the potential contribution the development of higher education could make to Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly. We welcome the Combined Universities in Cornwall initiative to develop plans for taking this forward.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on how many occasions special advisers travelled abroad in an official capacity accompanied by Ministers; what was the average cost of each trip per head for the accompanying adviser; and what were the places visited. [82432]

Mr. Blunkett: Between 2 May 1997 and 31 March 1999, my Special Advisers have accompanied me and other Ministers on visits abroad in an official capacity within Europe or on European Presidency business on 12 occasions. All travel complied with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code. The average cost per head of civil servants, Ministers and advisers on such trips was £546.

Race Relations Employment Advisory Service

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has for the future of his Department's Race Relations Advisory Service. [82330]

Ms Hodge: The Race Relations Employment Advisory Service will continue to play a key role in promoting to employers the benefits of race equality at work.

List 99

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will estimate the average time taken from beginning consideration of placing a teacher on List 99 to a decision being made. [82489]

Ms Estelle Morris: In the year 1 April 1998 to 31 March 1999, my Department concluded 448 misconduct cases. The average time taken to conclude those cases was nine months. In some of these cases the nature of the misconduct was not serious enough to consider placing the person on List 99. There can be enormous differences in the complexity of cases referred for consideration. Some straightforward cases are concluded very quickly while other, more difficult, cases take substantially longer.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on how many cases decisions are currently outstanding as to whether a teacher should be placed on List 99. [82490]

Ms Estelle Morris: My Department's Teachers' Misconduct Team currently has 451 cases which have been referred for consideration. In 159 of these cases the individual has been informed that the Secretary of State is considering placing them on List 99. In the remaining 292 cases, my Department is collecting information before coming to a decision as to whether List 99 action should be considered.

New Deal (Hotline)

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 21 April 1999, Official Report, column 557, if he will break down by region the calls received by the New Deal Hotline identifying (a) how many were from clients and how many from employers and (b) how many were (i) compliments and (ii) complaints. [82531]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The following table shows a breakdown, by Employment Service Regions, of the number of complaints received from employers and clients through the New Deal Hotline.

Breakdown of hotline calls: 5 January 1998–26 March 1999

Region	Total number of calls received	Of which client complaints	Of which employer complaints	Of which other miscellaneous calls [1]

HOME DEPARTMENT

Parole

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average delay in processing parole dossiers at the first application stage for prisoners in England and Wales on the latest date for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [82448]

Mr. George Howarth: The parole timetable for determinate sentenced prisoners specifies that the review process should be complete, and the result notified to the prisoner, within 24 weeks of the scheduled start date for the review.

The table shows the percentage of first review cases meeting the target and the average delay in the cases that missed the target over the past four quarters.

	Percentage of first review cases meeting 24 week target	Average delay in first review cases missing 24 week target
April 1998-June 1998	45.1	5.9 weeks
July 1998-September 1998	57.9	6.3 weeks
October 1998-December 1998	64.8	5.8 weeks
January 1999-March 1999	74.6	6.3 weeks

Schengen Agreement

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those elements of the Schengen supplementary accords, copies of which his Department had not received at the time of the indication he made to the Justice and Home Affairs Council of an intent to apply to join elements of the Schengen system; and when he expects to receive them. [82295]

Kate Hoey: Since my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced in his reply to the right hon. Member for Penrith and The Border (Mr. Maclean), on 12 March 1999, Official Report, columns 380–82, the areas of the Schengen acquis in which the United Kingdom intended to seek participation, we have received the following further items of the Schengen acquis:

Sch/Com-Ex (93) 21

Previously received in English with annex in French

Sch/Com-Ex (93) 23

Previously received in French only

Sch/Com-Ex (93) 24

Previously received in English with annex in French

Sch/Com-Ex (98) 13.

These have all been deposited with the House of Commons European Scrutiny Committee and with the House of Lords Select Committee on the European Communities.

We expect shortly to receive the remaining Decisions and Declarations of the Schengen Executive Committee adopted during 1998. In keeping with Government policy, these will be deposited with Parliament, provided they have not been classified as confidential by the Schengen states.

A number of decisions are expected to be adopted at the meeting of the Schengen Executive Committee on 28 April. We expect to receive these texts shortly after 28 April and these will also be deposited with Parliament, subject to the same caveat on confidentiality.

Parliamentary Ombudsman (Complaints)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the advantages and disadvantages of requiring applicants who want to make complaints to the Parliamentary Ombudsman under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information to ask an hon. Member to submit their complaints. [82263]

Mr. Straw: The White Paper, "Your Right to Know", included an assessment of the arrangements for complaints to the Parliamentary Ombudsman under the "Code of Practice on Access to Government Information" and concluded that successive Ombudsmen had proved effective in policing the Code. The White Paper also stated that, as part of our proposals for a Freedom of Information Act, the Government favoured a mechanism which is readily available and freely accessible. The draft Freedom of Information Bill, which I hope to publish shortly for consultation and pre-legislative scrutiny, is likely to propose a procedure which will allow a complainant to access the Information Commissioner directly, rather than through an hon. Member.

Ex-Offenders

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to improve employment opportunities for ex-offenders; and if he will make a statement. [82454]

Mr. George Howarth: Improving offenders' employability and access to the job market is a priority for the probation service for 1999–2000. Probation services are actively involved in the delivery of Welfare to Work programmes, and developing strategies for generating employment, training and education opportunities for offenders, with a particular emphasis on literacy and basic skills provision. Over £3.1 million was spent by probation services in 1997–1998 in partnership with the voluntary sector on the provision of employment, training and education services for offenders.

Much work has already been done and is continuing to be done to assist offenders in gaining the skills and qualifications necessary to help them in their search for work. Funding has also been made available to probation services under the Crime Reduction programme to develop screening and tutoring programmes to improve the basic skills of offenders. The projects will pilot and evaluate new approaches with the aim of putting the most successful approaches into practice across the country.

Police Allowances

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total expenditure on each allowance available to police officers, per police force and in total, in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [82456]

Mr. Boateng: The total expenditure on all allowances, per police force, for 1994–95 to 1996–97, is set out in the table. No analysis of individual allowances is made. Information for subsequent years is not available.

New Deal

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders serving custodial sentences have taken part in the New Deal scheme through the Prison Service; how many offenders completed the scheme and obtained employment following participation in the scheme; and if he will make a statement. [82455]

Mr. George Howarth: Offenders are not eligible for the New Deal while serving custodial sentences, but they can take part in the Prison Service's Welfare to Work programme for 18–24 year olds running in selected prison establishments. This aims to improve their employability and help them gain the most from the New Deal Gateway, to which they have immediate access on release.

In the 12 months from April 1998, 2,430 inmates joined the Prison Service programme in the 11 establishments piloting it, and 1,625 had completed it by the end of that period. Early results from an evaluation of the programme indicate that within 6 months of leaving prison, 28 per cent. of those who complete the programme go on to join the New Deal Gateway, compared with 11 per cent. of a control group. A survey of probation officers also indicates that 42 per cent. of programme completers have some employment and 6 per cent. go into education or non-New Deal training within four months of release. These percentages are similar to the control group.

The programme is now continuing into its second year and the number of establishments has been increased to 13.

PRIME MINISTER

Civil Servants

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the civil servants who worked in No. 10 Downing Street, broken down by department, on (a) 1 April 1998 and (b) 1 April 1999; and if he will make a statement. [80059]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 15 April 1999]: Civil servants working in No.10 Downing Street on the dates referred to were as follows:

	1 April 1998	1 April 1999
Private Office	11	12
Policy Unit	16	18
Press Office	11	14
Strategic Communications Unit	8	9
Appointments and Honours	7	9

Yugoslavia (NATO Bombing)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the extent of collateral damage caused by NATO forces in Yugoslavia and of the percentage of bombs and missiles which miss their targets. [80616]

The Prime Minister: We both assess the risk of collateral damage in advance of UK airstrikes and monitor the results afterwards on a case by case basis. Our pilots train intensively to ensure the greatest possible accuracy in bombing attacks and NATO as a whole has made every attempt to reduce the risk of collateral damage. The cases of injury and death among civilians which have nevertheless occurred have been acknowledged by NATO and are deeply regretted. But the accidental civilian casualties caused—despite these stringent precautions—by NATO bombing, contrast sharply with the deliberate and calculated slaughter of Kosovar civilians instigated by Milosevic in pursuit of ethnic cleansing.

Under the terms of paragraph 1a of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, I am not prepared to release data on the percentage of bombs and missiles which miss their target. It would be wrong to assume that bombs and missiles which miss their target necessarily cause collateral damage.

United Nations

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister in what circumstances it is possible for intervention by a member state of the UN or a regional organisation in the territory of another UN member state to be authorised by the UN on the basis of a resolution passed by a majority vote in a specially convened session of the General Assembly; and if he will make a statement. [82665]

The Prime Minister: General Assembly Resolution 377(V) provides for the General Assembly, in certain circumstances, to make appropriate recommendations for collective measures for the maintenance of international peace and security. Details on the Resolution (known as the Uniting for Peace Resolution) are available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister on what authority a state, or regional organisation of states, can be empowered to intervene in the territory of another UN member state, under the United Nations Charter, on the basis of its intervention being in response to a humanitarian catastrophe; and if he will make a statement. [82667]

The Prime Minister: Under international law a limited use of force can be justifiable in support purposes laid down by the Security Council but without the Council's express authorisation when that is the only means to avert an immediate and overwhelming humanitarian catastrophe. Any such case would in the nature of things be exceptional and would depend on an objective assessment of the factual circumstances at the time and on the terms of relevant decisions of the Security Council bearing on the situation in question.

Kosovo

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister what proposals were conveyed by President Chirac to NATO partners in the months prior to the commencement of the bombing of Serbia by NATO forces with the objective of making Kosovo the first test of NATO/Russian understanding and collaboration; when such proposals were made; and if he will make a statement. [82666]

The Prime Minister: I am not aware of any such proposals.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Default Summonses (Gravesend)

Mr. Pond: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (i) liquidated and (ii) unliquidated default summonses were issued by Gravesend County Court in (a) 1997 and (b) 1998. [82300]

Mr. Hoon: Gravesend County Court issued 841 liquidated and 151 unliquidated summonses in 1997. The figures for 1998 were 781 and 145 respectively.

Mr. Pond: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department how many default summonses were issued by Gravesend County Court between (a) 1 April 1997 and 30 September 1997 and (b) 1 April 1998 and 30 September 1998. [82301]

Mr. Hoon: Gravesend County Court issued 528 default summonses between 1 April 1997 and 30 September 1997; and 478 default summonses between 1 April 1998 and 30 September 1998.

Mistakes of Law

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on (a) the reform of the law relating to the mistake of law rule at common law and (b) the Law Commission report (1994 No.227) entitled "Restitution: Mistakes of Law, Ultra Vires Public Authority Receipts and Payments". [82308]

Mr. Hoon: The House of Lords decision in Kleinwort Benson Ltd. v. Lincoln City Council last October means that it is no longer necessary to bring forward legislation to implement the first part of the Law Commission report No. 227 on "Restitution: Mistakes of Law, Ultra Vires Public Authority Receipts and Payments", which dealt with the common law aspects of mistake of law.

Part 2 of the report proposed changes to the law to ensure that citizens had effective remedies in circumstances where tax was paid but not due. However, developments since the report was published, including the procedures associated with self-assessment of tax liabilities, have created an acceptable balance of rights and responsibilities between the taxpayer and the state. Therefore, the Government have concluded that it is no longer necessary to implement Part 2 of the report.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate, for each of the next 20 years, the size of the gap in pounds per week between the basic state pension and the minimum income guarantee, assuming price indexation of the basic pension and earnings indexation of the minimum income guarantee. [82056]

Mr. Timms: We have announced our intention to update the basic state pension annually at least in line with prices, and to increase the minimum income guarantee over time, as resources allow, in line with earnings. The information requested on the basis of the assumptions stated in the question is in the table.

Difference between the basic state pension and minimum income guarantee for a single pensioner aged 65

Notes:

1. The difference is shown in constant April 1999 prices.
2. The figures assume that earnings grow by 1.5 per cent. per year above prices.
3. Figures rounded to the nearest £0.05.

DEFENCE

Foreign Media Interviews

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a translation of his interview in the al-Sharq al Aswat Arabic language newspaper of 23 October 1998. [74139]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 2 March 1999]: I have today placed a translation of the interview in the Library of the House.

Small Arms Ranges

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on policy with regard to future use of small arms trainer ranges by HM armed forces. [81776]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Small arms trainer ranges have proved a cost-effective way of training servicemen in rifle and, more recently, pistol marksmanship. The Ministry of Defence is considering expanding the role of the trainer ranges to encompass training in the use of a number of other close combat weapons and to improve training realism.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the small arms trainer ranges operational in the United Kingdom prior to the strategic defence review, indicating (a) regular, (b) TA and (c) Cadet Unit numbers catered for at each. [81779]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Small arms trainer (SAT) systems are currently operational at the following locations in the United Kingdom:

Departmental Legal Business

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his Department's policy when (a) conducting legal proceedings and (b) seeking legal advice as to the circumstances in which Queen's Counsel should be instructed; and for each of the last three years (i) on how many occasions his Department instructed Queen's Counsel and (ii) what was the total cost of instructing Queen's Counsel. [81761]

Mr. Doug Henderson: My Department uses counsel to conduct legal proceedings or to provide legal advice as recommended by the Department's various solicitors or the Department's Legal Adviser. Junior counsel from the Attorney-General's panel or Queen's Counsel are instructed according to the degree of experience and expertise required in each case.

The number of occasions on which Queen's Counsel have been instructed in the last three years, and the cost of doing so, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Falklands

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effect on the Falkland Islands garrison of the decision of the Government of Chile to withdraw air links to the Falkland Islands; and if he will make a statement. [81867]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The suspension of Lan Chile flights between Chile and the Falkland Islands will have no effect on the Falkland Islands garrison.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to meet the Falkland Islands Government's request for armaments for fisheries protection vessels; and if he will make a statement. [81960]

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will announce his decision on the calibre of guns for Falkland Islands fishery protection vessels; and if he will make a statement. [81870]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

We take the matter of illegal fishing in the Falkland Islands seriously and it is our shared objective with the Falkland Islands Government to combat the problem. Illegal fishing has the potential to undermine the Falklands economy and attempts to conserve fish stocks. Recently, there have been up to an estimated 50 unlicensed vessels in Falklands waters and we assume that all were engaged in illegal fishing activities. The number of vessels now appears to be declining.

In January this year, we authorised the arming of a Fisheries Protection Vessel (FPV) with a 20mm Oerlikon cannon, which is the best weapon for the task of deterring illegal fishing and dealing with it, if necessary. The Falkland Islands Government (FIG) is responsible for the procurement and shipment of the cannon. This process has taken longer than anticipated. We have tried to help FIG speed up the shipment of the consignment but it cannot be carried on a passenger aircraft together with the ammunition needed. Accordingly, the Ministry of Defence has agreed to fly the cannon out on the next freight flight on 6 May.

FIG requested approval for temporary use of a smaller, 0.50 inch, machine gun on an FPV, as an interim measure. This request was carefully considered and a decision was made not to give approval. The machine gun is not a good visible deterrent and there are concerns that warning shots, which the FPV would be required to fire to alert a suspected unlicensed vessel, would not be seen or heard.

As a temporary measure, the Ministry of Defence has agreed to our request for one of the Royal Navy vessels stationed in the Falklands to accompany an FPV on its patrols. We have also made representations to the Taiwanese authorities in London and Taipei, as the majority of unlicensed vessels in Falklands waters are theirs. We shall continue to urge the Taiwanese authorities to bring their fleet under control.

We have received representations on this issue from FIG and its Fisheries Department, several MPs and from members of the public. Commercial operators who are licence-holders have made indirect representations.

We shall continue to support FIG in its attempts to combat illegal fishing.

Pay Budget

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's budget for pay within the Defence Operating Costs Budget for 1999–2000. [82514]

Mr. George Robertson: The disclosure of information on planned expenditure on pay at this stage in the financial year could reveal internal assumptions about increases in the pay bill while negotiations on civil service pay for the current year are continuing. I am therefore withholding the information requested under exemption 7 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons Table 1a of his Department's expenditure plans 1999–2000 to 2001–02 does not contain entries for the years 2000–01 and 2001–02. [82516]

Mr. George Robertson: Table 1a of "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1999–2000 to 2001–2002: Ministry of Defence" does not contain entries for the years 2000–2001 and 2001–2002 because I have not decided on the allocation of resources for these years. Internal plans for these years represent projections and planning assumptions used to inform advice to me and my Ministerial colleagues on the affordability of the various elements of the Defence programme. Such information is covered by Exemption 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many animals have been used in experiments at each of his Department's sites in each of the last five years. [82526]

Mr. Doug Henderson: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Sir John Chisholm to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 29 April 1999:

I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question about the numbers of animals used in experiments at Ministry of Defence sites in each of the last 5 years.

The following figures relate to DERA sites and are in respect of the numbers of procedures undertaken (1 animal = 1 procedure, but note that individual animals may take part in several procedures). The figures reflect the information provided annually to the Home Office.

Year	No. of Procedures
1994	7,654
1995	8,914
1996	11,221
1997	11,083
1998	11,215

I hope the above is helpful.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which of his Department's sites are licensed to carry out experiments on animals; and when the licences were issued. [82520]

Mr. Doug Henderson: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Sir John Chisholm to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 29 April 1999:

I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question about licensing arrangements for animal experiments. My reply refers to the arrangements at DERA sites as we undertake the majority of work involving animals on behalf of the Ministry of Defence.

Under the terms of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 two DERA sites are licensed to conduct research that involves the use of animals. These are the Chemical and Biological Defence Sector at Porton Down and the Alverstoke site of the Centre for Human Sciences. Both sites have held licences, known as certificates, since the Act came into force in 1986. The Porton Down certificate had been modified several times since 1986 as facilities have changed and/or been updated.

I hope this is helpful.

Submarines (Firth of Clyde)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to modify the regulations governing submerged submarine operations in the Firth of Clyde on weekdays; and if he will make a statement. [82276]

Mr. George Robertson: The regulations governing submerged submarine operations are contained in the Submarine/Fishing Vessel Interaction Code of Practice. Changes to the current Code of Practice which relate to the Firth of Clyde are currently with the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisation for ratification. The provisions contained therein, which include revised operating procedures in the Firth of Clyde and the requirement to notify the Clyde Fishermen's Association on weekdays when dived submarine operations are taking place in the area, are already being used by the Submarine Flotilla.

Official Secrets Act

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the use of the Official Secrets Acts in relation to those employed at (a) Aberporth, (b) Llanbedr, (c) Manorbier and (d) Ty Groes of the Thunderbird Regiment Royal Artillery of Portsmouth and Gosford at the time of the Aer Lingus accident on 24 March 1968. [82275]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The unit referred to, more properly known as the 457 Heavy Air Defence Regiment Royal Artillery (TA), was based at Portsmouth with one battery at Gosport. It was disbanded on 1 April 1967—almost a year before the Aer Lingus Viscount crashed into the Irish Sea. The establishments listed played no part in the events of that day. It is therefore extremely unlikely that the employees at those establishments or any other MOD employee would have any information concerning the causes of the crash. Nevertheless, I can repeat the assurances already given by my officials to the Irish authorities that if any MOD employee, military or civilian, had any information which could help determine the causes of the crash, there would be no inhibition or restriction whatsoever as to its disclosure to the Irish Accident Investigation Officials.

Army Technical Support Agency

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Army Technical Support Agency for 1999–2000. [82895]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Chief Executive of the Army Technical Support Agency has been set the following 5 Key Targets for 1999–2000.

1. To influence equipment design by obtaining formal tasking from Project Managers/Integrated Logistic Support (ILS) Managers in at least 80 per cent. of designated ILS projects.

2. To provide a complete and accurate answer to at least 94 per cent of ad hoc inquiries within 2 working days.

3. To despatch new and reprinted technical publications within the period from receipt of demand as follows:

   (a) For Priority demands, 90 per cent. within 5 working days and,

   (b) For Routine demands, 90 per cent. within 24 working days.

4. To complete at least: 90 per cent. of Operational projects, 75 per cent. of Priority A projects and 60 per cent. of Priority B projects before the target date agreed with the customer.

5. To satisfy at least 92 per cent. of customers in the handling of technical projects.

Operation Allied Force

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what United Kingdom forces have been committed to Operation Allied Force; and if he will make a statement. [83122]

Mr. George Robertson: I have today authorised the committal of a significant number of additional RAF aircraft to Operation Allied Force, the NATO air and naval action. We are committing an additional four Harrier GR7 ground attack aircraft, four Tornado GR1 and a Tristar tanker to Operation Allied Force in response to a request from SACEUR for additional air assets. These aircraft will join the more than 700 UK and other allied aircraft already involved in air operations in the Balkans.

Including the deployments I am announcing today, the following UK units, or elements thereof, are currently committed to Operation Allied Force:

Royal Navy

HMS Invincible
HMS Newcastle
HMS Iron Duke
HMS Grafton
HMS Splendid
RFA Fort Austin
RFA Bayleaf
7 Sea Harrier FA2 aircraft
10 Sea King helicopters

In addition, HMS Turbulent is currently patrolling in the area.

Royal Air Force

16 Harrier GR7s
12 Tornado GR1s
3 E3-D Sentry AWACS
4 Tristar tankers
4 VC10 tankers
1 Nimrod.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Kosovo

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimate she has made of the cost of restoring Kosovan (a) infrastructure and (b) housing to March 1999 levels. [82475]

Mr. Foulkes: It is impossible at this stage to make a reliable estimate of the costs of restoring infrastructure and housing in Kosovo. An early needs assessment will be part of the process for planning refugee return and longer term reconstruction, which was begun by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and her colleagues from the US, French, German and Italian development ministries at their meeting in London on 22 April.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how the additional £20 million funding recently announced by her Department for the Kosovar refugees is being spent. [82668]

Mr. Foulkes: We are funding airlifts and the necessary logistical support to overcome the constraints on delivering international assistance into the region and to internal movements of supplies. We have put in aircraft handling teams at Tirana and Skopje airports and a trucking convoy operation from Durres port in Albania. We are working with NATO and UNHCR to establish and run refugee centres in Albania and Macedonia. We have provided specialist personnel to strengthen agency capacity in key areas such as healthcare and camp security and have also funded a range of projects of international agencies and NGOs. Full details of the assistance provided by DFID have been deposited in the Library of the House.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proposals she has evaluated for the movement of refugees from Macedonia to Albania. [82669]

Mr. Foulkes: We have received no specific proposals for the movement of refugees from Macedonia to Albania. It is normal practice for refugees to be cared for in the first country in which they seek safety. Any movement to third countries should be entirely voluntary—we have made clear our concern to the Macedonian Government about the way in which people were initially dispatched to other countries, including Albania, without their consent. It must also take into account the hosting capacity of the receiving country—Albania has already received over 350,000 refugees from Kosovo, and facilities there are stretched.

HEALTH

Hepatitis C

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate he has made of the number of people with haemophilia infected with hepatitis C by contaminated blood products who are now suffering (a) chronic liver disease and (b) other significant health problems as a result of their infection; [80909]

(2) what estimates he has made of the number of people with haemophilia who were infected with hepatitis C as a result of their NHS treatment before 1986 and the number of these who are alive today. [80908]

Mr. Hutton: We estimate that 4,000 people with haemophilia were infected with hepatitis C through their National Health Service treatment with blood products before the introduction of viral inactivation processes in 1985. The Haemophilia Society assesses that more than ninety patients have died. We do not have information on the number of people with chronic liver disease or other significant health problems, but all identified cases of hepatitis C infection through blood or blood products are referred to a specialist for further assessment, and drug therapy as appropriate. We believe that 6 or 7 people with haemophilia are on the United Kingdom Transplant Support Service Authority's list of people awaiting liver transplants.

Dentistry

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the amount of unspent Investing in Dentistry funds for 1997–98; and whether that balance was re-allocated to the 1998–99 funds. [81911]

Mr. Denham: The investing in dentistry scheme was announced in September 1997 and up to £9 million was made available to meet expenditure in that financial year, 1997–98. Grants to the value of £3,836,408 had been approved by the end of March 1998, although by that point grant payments dispensed, and the estimated cost of the additional treatment fees generated by the extra patients registered, had together totalled about £175,000. This is because there is often a period of several months after the approval stage before the additional staff or facilities are in place to receive patients, when the grant becomes payable. Under the current annuality conventions, any money which has been voted by Parliament for a particular year, but which is not needed to meet expenditure chargeable to that year, cannot be carried forward into the next financial year. However, in 1998–99, a further £10 million was made available for the investing in dentistry scheme.

Breast Cancer Units

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many specialist breast cancer units in hospitals cover the Greater London area. [81887]

Mr. Hutton: The 36 specialist breast cancer units in hospitals covering the Greater London area are:

Basildon and Thurrock General Hospitals Healthcare Trust
Bromley Hospitals National Health Service Trust
Central Middlesex Hospital NHS Trust
Chase Farm Hospitals NHS Trust
Ealing Hospital NHS Trust
East Hertfordshire NHS Trust
Essex and Herts Community NHS Trust
Forest Healthcare NHS Trust
Greenwich Healthcare NHS Trust
Guy's and St. Thomas' Hospital NHS Trust
Hammersmith Hospitals NHS Trust
Havering Hospitals NHS Trust
Hillingdon Hospital West Middlesex
Homerton Hospital NHS Trust
King's Healthcare NHS Trust
Kingston and District Community NHS Trust
Lewisham Hospital NHS Trust
Luton and Dunstable Hospital NHS Trust
Mayday Healthcare NHS Trust
Mount Vernon and Watford Hospitals NHS Trust
Newham Healthcare NHS Trust
North Middlesex Hospital NHS Trust
Northwick Park and St. Mark's NHS Trust
Queen Mary's Sidcup NHS Trust
Redbridge Healthcare NHS Trust
Richmond, Twickenham and Roehampton Healthcare NHS Trust
Royal Free Hampstead NHS Trust Hospitals
The Royal Hospitals NHS Trust
Royal Marsden Hospital NHS Trust
St. George's NHS Trust
St. Mary's NHS Trust
University College London Hospitals NHS Trust
Wellhouse NHS Trust
West Herts Community Health NHS Trust
West Middlesex University Hospital NHS Trust
Whittington Hospital NHS Trust.

Cystic Fibrosis

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the average survival age for sufferers of cystic fibrosis in (a) 1998, (b) 1988 and (c) 1978; [81753]

(2) if he will estimate the number of cystic fibrosis sufferers who reached their 18 birthday in (a) 1970 and (b) 1998. [81752]

Mr. Hutton: The information is not available in the form requested. The United Kingdom Cystic Fibrosis Survey can provide survival data based on three year cohorts. According to the Survey's current data (which include 1997 data for deaths from the Office for National Statistics) of people with cystic fibrosis born in the three year period 1986–88, 93 per cent. survived to age 12; of those born in 1977–79, 63 per cent. survived to age 21; of those born in 1968–70, the median survival was 16 years 8 months and 47 per cent. survived to age 18. For the 1986–88 cohort, 90 per cent. might be expected to survive to age 18. Recent trends for children indicate that the upper limit of survival to age 18 might be about 95 per cent.

444 people with cystic fibrosis were aged 18 or more at the start of 1978 and 94 reached their 18 birthday in that year; 2,357 people with cystic fibrosis were aged 18 or more at the start of 1997 and 216 reached their 18 birthday in that year. Equivalent figures for the years before 1978 are not available and nor yet are those for 1998.

A summary of information from the Survey up to 1997 is available from the Cystic Fibrosis Trust. Copies are available in the Library.

Health Authorities and Trust Financial Plans

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which health authorities and trusts have finalised their financial plans for the financial year 1999–2000. [82670]

Mr. Denham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 26 April 1999, Official Report, columns 28–29.

The financial plans of all health authorities and trusts for the financial year 1999–2000 are due to be submitted to the National Health Service Executive headquarters by the end of May.

HIV/AIDS

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the membership of the Steering Group convened to develop the HIV/AIDS strategy; and if he will set out the interests of each member. [82452]

Ms Jowell: The membership of the Steering Group convened to develop the HIV/AIDS Strategy is listed, as are their areas of interest in the HIV/AIDS field.

Chair:

Mr. David Walden, Head of Health Promotion division in the Department

Members:

Dr. David Hawkins—HIV/AIDS and genito-urinary medicine—clinical care (Consultant in Genito-urinary medicine; Chelsea and Westminster Hospital, and member of the Expert Advisory Group on AIDS (EAGA);

Observers from Department for International Development, Prisons Medical Service, Scottish Home and Health Department, Welsh Office, Department of Health and Social Service—Northern Ireland.

ECG Screening

Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce ECG screening for cardiac risks in the young; and if he will make a statement. [82081]

Mr. Hutton: The National Screening Committee, which advises Ministers about changes to screening policy, has commissioned a report on screening for heart disease in children. This will be considered by its Child Health Screening Policy Sub-Committee shortly. The National Screening Committee will be in a position to offer advice in the autumn.

WALES

National Assembly

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the posts created in the National Assembly for Wales which stipulate knowledge of the Welsh language as (a) necessary and (b) desirable; and those posts for which there is no such stipulation. [78773]

Mr. Michael: Welsh has been specified as essential for posts in the translation service and in the editorial team for the record of Assembly business. Jobs for which Welsh is essential are carefully considered before reaching that conclusion and have attracted a choice of candidates. Posts for which Welsh is desirable or an advantage have been well subscribed by both English and Welsh speakers and also those speaking other modern World languages. An example is the recent Middle Managers recruitment scheme for which Welsh was identified as desirable and which generated over 1,000 applications for a possible 20 posts, the majority from English speakers.

Welsh has been described as an advantage for a number of other posts. For posts where Welsh is advertised as desirable or an advantage, it could be used as a deciding factor only where two candidates were equally good in all other respects. There are no posts for which a knowledge of Welsh is undesirable.

1. Posts for which Welsh is essential
   - Translators
   - Editorial Team
   - Committee Clerks—2 (out of 7)
   - Deputy Committee Clerks—2 (out of 7)
2. Posts where Welsh is an advantage
   - Head of Committee Secretariat
   - Staff of Committee Secretariat
   - Head of Public Information and Education Services
   - Public Information and Education Support Team
   - Head of Members Information and Briefing Service
   - Members Information and Briefing Service Support Team
   - Head of Chamber Secretariat
   - Head of Table Office
   - Table Office Support Team
   - Private Secretary to the Presiding and Deputy Presiding Officer
   - Librarian
   - Assistant Economist
   - General Executive Officer
   - Assistant Librarian
   - IS/IT Co-ordinator
   - Record of Proceeding Support Team
3. Other posts
   - Director of Public Information and Education
   - PS/PA to Director of Assembly Communications
   - Middle Managers
   - Security Guards/Ushers.

Consultations (Postal Costs)

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will pay the postal costs of voluntary bodies and registered charities requested to respond to Government consultation documents; and if he will make a statement. [80916]

Mr. Michael: When voluntary bodies and registered charities are invited to respond to a Welsh Office consultation paper, postal costs are not covered automatically. The Department would consider any claim on its merits, taking account of such factors as the nature of the organisation, the scale of the consultation exercise and the information requested.

The Welsh Office does not pay postal costs incurred by organisations responding to consultation from other Government Departments. It is for individual Departments to decide whether to cover these.

Gifted Children

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what initiatives the Government have announced with respect to gifted children; [81585]

(2) what provision his Department advises local authorities to make with respect to gifted children at state schools. [81584]

Mr. Hain: Local education authorities have a statutory duty to ensure pupils of statutory school age receive education suitable to their age, ability or aptitude, including pupils of above average ability. This will usually be in a mainstream school. The National Curriculum provides for children of all abilities, including those who are gifted. The Education Act 1996 gives LEAs discretion to arrange for the withdrawal of a pupil from primary school for the purpose of receiving secondary education once a child has reached the age of 10 years and 6 months.

Our priority is to improve standards of educational attainment for all children in Wales. The Welsh Office Education White Paper "Building Excellent Schools Together", published in July 1997, recognised the need for schools to stretch gifted pupils to achieve their full potential. The Government have established a Gifted and Talented Advisory Group to contribute to the development of a strategy for the early identification and effective provision for gifted and talented children. The Qualifications, Curriculum and Assessment Authority for Wales (ACCAC), which is represented on the Group, will also ensure that the needs of such pupils are considered as part of their review of the National Curriculum in Wales. Following the transfer of functions, these issues will become the responsibility of the National Assembly.

Department Legal Business

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his Department's policy when (a) conducting legal proceedings and (b) seeking legal advice as to the circumstances in which Queen's Counsel should be instructed; and for each of the last three years (i) on how many occasions his Department instructed Queen's Counsel and (ii) what was the total cost of instructing Queen's Counsel. [81767]

Mr. Michael: The Treasury Solicitor's Department, acting on behalf of the Welsh Office, predominantly use junior counsel when it is necessary to instruct counsel to provide legal advice or to conduct legal proceedings.

In civil cases, the two First Treasury Counsel are both junior counsel and they will advise and represent the Government without a Queen's Counsel in many of their important cases. In addition, the Attorney-General maintains four panels of junior Counsel whom Departments are expected to use for the majority of the Government's civil litigation. The Attorney-General's approval, or that of the Solicitor-General, is required before a Queen's Counsel can be instructed to appear for any Government Department in civil litigation.

In determining the level of counsel to use, the Department considers the individual circumstances of each case. Amongst other things it takes into account, inter alia, the importance and sensitivity of the case, the complexity of the law, the weight and complexity of the evidence, and the degree of experience and expertise required before deciding whether to instruct Queen's Counsel or junior counsel.

For the years in question Queen's Counsel were instructed as follows:

1997: 3 occasions

1998: 4 occasions

1999: 3 occasions

Costs paid to date in instructing Queen's Counsel, excluding Counsel engaged on the North Wales Child Abuse Inquiry, are currently £83,376 for the years in question. So far as the costs arising from the North Wales Inquiry are concerned, this is information which cannot be extracted from the file and invoice records without incurring disproportionate cost.

Power Stations

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if consents for building power stations will be a matter devolved to the Welsh Assembly. [82245]

Mr. Hain: No.

Education (Expenditure)

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much central Government money was spent per capita in 1998 in Wales on helping schools meet special educational needs. [82198]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 26 April 1999]: Local authorities are funded to meet the needs of pupils with special educational needs through the annual local government revenue settlement. It is not possible to identify school expenditure on SEN from the returns made by local authorities.

In 1997–98, £1.3 million was made available under the Grants for Education Support and Training programme to promote SEN provision.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will become a matter for the National Assembly.

Health Authorities

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list, for each health authority and NHS trust in Wales, the projected budget surplus or deficit planned by that authority or trust for the financial year 1999–2000. [82671]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: I regret the information requested is not yet available. Health authorities and trusts will prepare their financial projections for the year 1999–2000 once they have had an opportunity to assess the financial implications of the health authority allocations which will be issued shortly.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

TREASURY

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what market research and polling has been carried out into the working families tax credit. [80886]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government have not undertaken any market research or polling of WFTC.

VAT (Finance) Order 1999

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the compatibility of the VAT (Finance) Order 1999 with the Sixth VAT Directive following the ruling by the VAT Tribunal on the FDR case on 20 April. [82661]

Dawn Primarolo: The Order reflects the provisions of EC law better than its predecessor, and is based on extensive consultation with the VAT authorities in other Member States and the European Commission. We are satisfied that it fully complies with European law. We are confident that it would be found to be compatible with the Sixth EC VAT Directive were such a question to be referred to the European Court of Justice.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he intends to repeal the VAT (Finance) Order 1999 following the ruling by the VAT Tribunal on the FDR case on 20 April; and if he will make a statement. [82660]

Dawn Primarolo: No.

Sudden Death Syndrome

Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many deaths have been reported from sudden death syndrome for under 25 year-olds in each of the last five years. [82082]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Hold to Mr. David Taylor, dated 29 April 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to answer your recent question on how many deaths have been reported from sudden death syndrome for the under 25 year-olds in each of the last five years. The information requested is shown in the table below.

Death certificates do not usually say whether a death was sudden or not, and 'sudden death syndrome' is not a term that is used much in this country. When one of these terms is used, the death is assigned an underlying cause of death of 'sudden death, cause unknown', (International Classification of Diseases Ninth Revision code 798).

However, all deaths that are sudden and unexpected must be referred to a coroner for investigation. Usually a post mortem examination by a pathologist identifies a previously unsuspected disease that caused the death. The table shows the number of deaths at ages one to 24 from heart disease, stroke, and epilepsy which were certified by coroners. This should include all sudden deaths from these diseases, but will also include deaths that were referred to the coroner for other reasons. The table also gives the number of deaths for which no cause could be found by post mortem or inquest but which were not actually stated to have been 'sudden'.

Sudden deaths, cause unknown, and deaths from selected causes certified by coroners, of people aged one to 24 in England and Wales 1993 to 1997

	1993	1994	1995	1996	1997
Sudden, cause unknown	15	21	17	20	18
Certified by coroner, due to:
Heart disease	154	137	138	102	102
Stroke	29	26	30	30	15
Epilepsy	98	91	93	88	93
Unknown cause	26	27	35	40	41

Notes:
Figures do not include deaths from Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, or any other deaths under 1 year of age.

Tax Law Rewrite Project

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on recent developments in respect of the Tax Law Rewrite project. [82998]

Dawn Primarolo: I am pleased to announce that the Tax Law Rewrite project is continuing to make very good progress. The Inland Revenue will shortly publish the project's fifth Exposure Draft, which contains draft clauses on capital allowances for machinery and plant, dredging and patents. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

This Exposure Draft is the second instalment in a series that will completely rewrite the capital allowances code. The rewritten legislation in this publication will form part of the first rewrite Bill, which will be on capital allowances. The Rewrite project is committed to full consultation. I hope that all those with an interest in legislation will welcome and use this latest opportunity to comment.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Russia

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many times British and American officials have visited Russian facilities under the US-British-Russian Trilateral Process to end Russia's offensive biological warfare programme since the process was initiated in September 1992; what were the dates of each visit; and what were the names and locations of each facility visited. [82250]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: British and American officials have visited four Russian facilities under the US-British-Russian Trilateral Agreement. The visits took place from 5 to 16 October 1993 and from 10 to 21 January 1994. Under the terms of the Trilateral Agreement and in line with established practice under Section 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, which covers Third Party's commercial confidences, I am unable to provide the names and locations of the facilities visited.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many expert working groups have been set up under the US-British-Russian Trilateral Process to end Russia's offensive biological warfare programme since the process was initiated in September 1992; and what are the names of each of these expert working groups. [82251]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: A working group, comprising UK, US and Russian officials, has met twice since the conclusion of the US-British-Russian Trilateral Agreement: in London in April 1994 and in Moscow in September 1994. The meetings focused on past offensive BW programmes, current BW defence activities, a review of the visits which had already taken place, a "rules of the road" document for visits to military biological facilities and conversion issues. No separate working groups have been established on other aspects of the Trilateral Agreements.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many times Russian officials have visited British and American facilities under the US-British-Russian Trilateral Process to end Russia's offensive biological warfare programme since the process was initiated in September 1992; what were the dates of each visit; and what were the names and locations of each facility visited. [82249]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Russian officials have visited one British facility and three American facilities under the US-British-Russian Trilateral Agreement. The visit to the British facility took place from 22 to 25 March 1994. Those to the American facilities took place from 15 to 18 February 1994, from 22 to 24 February 1994 and from 28 February to 2 March 1994. Under the terms of the Trilateral Agreement and in line with established practice under Section 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, which covers Third party's commercial confidences, I am unable to provide the names and locations of the facilities visited.

MEPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the proposals on the agenda of the General Affairs Council of 22–23 March concerning the establishment of a pan-European MEP voting constituency with pan-European MEP lists; what discussions were held in the Council; and when the matter will next be considered. [82479]

Ms Quin: No such item appeared on the agenda for the 22–23 March General Affairs Council. The European Parliament's proposal for common principles for European Parliamentary elections, adopted in July 1998, suggested the possibility of trans-European lists of candidates. But the Council has yet to give an opinion on the proposal.

Colombia

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received concerning recent harassment of human rights activists in Colombia. [82485]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We have received representations on the problems experienced by human rights workers in Colombia, particularly those in the Uraba region, by a number of NGO's as well as from members of the public. I myself raised the issue of human rights workers and in particular the CINEP case, with the Colombian Vice-President, Gustova Bell, when he called on me on 27 April.

Council of Europe

Mr. Plaskitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements are being made to commemorate the 50 Anniversary of the Council of Europe in London on 5 May; and if he will make a statement. [82997]

Ms Quin: Ministers of Council of Europe Member States and guests from Strasbourg have been invited to a ceremony in the Palace of Westminster on 5 May at which my hon. Friend the Lord Chancellor will make a keynote address on the importance of the Council of Europe. Her Majesty The Queen will grace a reception at St. James's Palace, where the Council of Europe's Statute was signed 50 years ago on 5 May 1949. The Strasbourg Philharmonic Orchestra will give a concert in the Barbican Centre on 4 May in the presence of HRH Princess Alexandra.

The United Kingdom is an active member of the Council of Europe which plays a valuable role in promoting human rights, democracy and the rule of law in Europe. The Council of Europe has helped to set the standards which must form the basis of a stable modern Europe. In recent years, it has played a vital part in fostering these values in the newly democratised States of Central and Eastern Europe and in providing practical assistance to help them achieve the standards to which all Council of Europe members are committed. The Council of Europe is also contributing its expertise to the efforts of the international community to restore peace and stability in the Balkans.

The Council of Europe, through the legally binding mechanisms of the European Convention on Human Rights and the newly created Single Court, has set the pattern and standard for the protection and promotion of human rights in Europe. The work of the Council in promoting the protection of the rights of members of national minorities is particularly vital to the development of the region and the well-being of its citizens.

The United Kingdom has been active in the work being done to follow up the report of the Committee of Wise Persons, set up after the Council's second Summit in 1997, to enhance the Council of Europe's ability to address the key threats to democracy and fundamental freedoms in Europe today.

As a signal of the importance that the United Kingdom attaches to this, Her Majesty's Government has put forward a candidate, my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Hodge Hill (Mr. Davis), for election to the post of Secretary General of the Council of Europe, which falls vacant at the end of August.

United Nations

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs at what stage Article 19 of the UN Charter could be triggered in respect of the US non-payment of its full contributions, with particular reference to loss of voting rights in the General Assembly and other UN agencies; and if he will make a statement. [82655]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Calculations for Article 19 of the UN Charter, under which member states may lose their General Assembly vote if they have outstanding contributions greater than the total of their previous two years' dues, are made on 1 January every year. Article 19 could trigger in respect of the US in January 2000 if it does not pay at least some of its UN arrears this year. The UK and EU urge all member states to pay their UN dues promptly, in full and without conditions.

Chile

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the issues raised during his meeting with the Chilean Foreign Minister on 21 April. [82483]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Chilean Foreign Minister, Sr. Insulza, cancelled the meeting with my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary at the last minute for logistical reasons. My right hon. Friend has since spoken to Sr. Insulza. For details of the issues discussed, I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Ilford, North (Ms Perham) on 28 April 1999, Official Report, column 180.

Near Abroad Doctrine

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out Her Majesty's Government's policy on the right of UN members, or regional organisations, to intervene in the territory of other member states on the basis of the near abroad doctrine; and if he will make a statement. [82664]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The United Nations Charter preserves the right of a state or group of states to use force in self-defence in accordance with Article 51; the Charter also allows the use of force under the authorisation of the Security Council acting under Chapter VII of the Charter. Cases have also arisen, as in Kosovo, when in the light of all the circumstances the use of force is justifiable in support of purposes laid down by the Security Council when that was the only means to avert an immediate and overwhelming humanitarian catastrophe. There is no accepted doctrine of the "near abroad".

Peacekeeping (UN)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out Her Majesty's Government's policy on the application of Article 53 of the UN Charter, with particular reference to Security Council approval for regional organisations' peace enforcing, peacekeeping or humanitarian interventions. [82663]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Under Article 53 of the United Nations (UN) Charter, enforcement action under regional arrangements described in Article 52 requires Security Council authorisation. Prohibitions on the use of force contained in the UN Charter do not preclude the use of force by state or group of states in accordance with Articles 51 or under the authority of the Security Council acting under Chapter VII of the Charter.

Cases have also arisen when, in the light of all the circumstances, a limited use of force was justifiable in support of the purposes laid down by the Security Council but without the Council's express authorisation when that was the only means to avert an immediate and overwhelming humanitarian catastrophe. Such cases would in the nature of things be exceptional and would depend on an objective assessment of the factual circumstances at the time and on the terms of relevant decisions of the Security Council bearing on the situation in question.

We are working to ensure the closest possible co-operation between the Security Council and regional arrangements. I draw my hon. Friend's attention to the 30 November statement by the President of the Security Council, "Enhancing Monitoring of Activities authorised by the Council but carried out by Member States or Coalitions of States", which has been placed in the Library of the House (ref. DEP 99/333).

East Timor

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will promote the appointment of a UN Special Rapporteur for East Timor to monitor human rights in the area. [82467]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 28 April 1999]: We are open to any proposal that makes a peaceful future for East Timor more likely. We welcome the visits to Indonesia of the UN Special Rapporteur on Violence Against Women last December and the UN Working Group on Arbitrary Detention in February, and look forward to the publication of their reports.

In the meantime, we note that the UN Office in Jakarta has access to East Timor; and that the establishment of a permanent UN presence in East Timor was discussed at the latest round of talks in New York, under the auspices of the UN Secretary General, between Indonesia and Portugal.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Intervention Board

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the Intervention Board will publish its 1997–98 annual report and accounts. [82853]

Mr. Nick Brown: I am pleased to announce that copies of the document have been placed in the Libraries of the House today.

Inward Processing Relief

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received regarding the administrative arrangements for applying for inward processing relief; and what plans he has for reform of the system. [82243]

Mr. Rooker: Inward Processing Relief (IPR) promotes exports from the EU by putting Community producers on an equal footing with their third country counterparts as regards duty.

Proposals for reform of the administrative arrangements of the scheme have been the subject of discussions in Brussels over the past two years. The aim of the reform is to ensure that the relief continues to be of real financial benefit to EC business.

Regular consultation on the review takes place within the UK's own working group made up of representatives from UK business, including the food processing industry, MAFF, DTI and HM Customs and Excise. The recommendations of this group have been channelled into the discussions in Brussels and have positively influenced the Commission's plans for reform.

The UK fully supports the overall aims of the Commission in its reform and is continuing to press the Commission to speed up the process.

HM Customs and Excise lead on negotiations on this trade facilitation scheme.

Badgers

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what methods are being used for killing badgers in the randomised badger culling trial. [81508]

Mr. Rooker: Badgers are humanely despatched by shooting.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if a veterinary surgeon will be present when each badger is captured and killed in the randomised culling trial. [81511]

Mr. Rooker: The despatch of badgers may only be carried out by fully trained MAFF staff following standard operating procedures. Veterinary staff are not required to be present.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what administrative and practical measures have been put in place to ensure that badger welfare is optimised during the capture and killing of badgers; [81509]

(2) what training field staff involved in the randomised badger culling trial have received in killing badgers humanely; [81510]

(3) what training is given to new field staff involved in the randomised badger culling trial in identifying badger field signs and in shooting badgers humanely. [81512]

Mr. Rooker: New Wildlife Unit Staff receive initial training in how to recognise badger field activity from experts from the Central Science Laboratory and then work in the field alongside experienced Wildlife Unit Staff until they are fully competent.

To limit the time that badgers may be left in cage traps, standard operating procedures require that cages set to trap be checked as early as possible the following day and normally no later than 12:00 noon. Trapping will be suspended, if, due to bad weather, there is a risk that cage traps could be flooded or trapped badgers would suffer from extreme exposure. Both temperature and wind-chill are taken into account.

The despatch of badgers may be carried out only by MAFF staff who have been fully trained, tested and issued with an "Authority to use Firearms on Official Business". Such staff receive external and internal training on the safe and humane use of firearms specifically in relation to badgers. Given the importance of this work, action is being taken to appoint an independent auditor to assess the humaneness of the method of despatch and the proper application of these procedures.

Veterinary Laboratories Agency

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what performance targets he has set the Veterinary Laboratories Agency for 1999–2000. [83047]

Mr. Nick Brown: I have set the Veterinary Laboratories Agency the following performance targets for 1999—2000.

Efficiency

1. To develop new efficiency indicators that will apply from 1 April 2000.

Service Deliver

2. To achieve 85 per cent. of ROAME R&D milestones.

Service Quality

3. To achieve NAMAS accreditation for rabies serological testing and GLP approval for the small animal accommodation.

Financial Performance

4. To recover the full economic cost (before exceptional items and calculated in accordance with accruals accounting) of its services.

5. To operate within 95 per cent. and 100 per cent. of allocations by the MAFF Management Board for running costs, capital and receipts.

Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what performance targets he has set the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science for 1999–2000. [83048]

Mr. Nick Brown: I have set the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science the following performance targets for 1999–2000.

Delivery of Service

1. To give satisfaction to its customers in the way that outputs are provided taking account of the relevance, timeliness and value for money of outputs and the achievement of ROAME milestones.

Quality of Science

2. To maintain a high standard of excellence, based on indicators of scientific and technical quality.

Efficiency

3. To achieve the savings forecast in the efficiency plan.

Financial Performance

4. To recover from Government Departments and Agencies and external customers the full economic costs (calculated according to accruals accounting) of its services.

5. To operate within 95 per cent. and 100 per cent. of allocations by the MAFF Management Board for running costs, capital and receipts.

Farming and Rural Conservation Agency

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what performance targets he has set the Farming and Rural Conservation Agency for 1999–2000. [83049]

Mr. Nick Brown: I have set the Farming and Rural Conservation Agency the following performance targets for 1999–2000.

1. To deliver a 5 per cent. saving on new applications for the Countryside Stewardship Scheme compared with 1998–99.

Delivery of Service

2. 92 per cent. of work completed to time.

3. 98 per cent. of work completed to quality standards agreed with MAFF and WOAD customers.

People

4. To achieve Investors in People accreditation.

Financial Performance

5. To recover from Government Departments the full economic cost (calculated to accruals accounting) of its services.

6. To operate with 95 per cent. and 100 per cent. of allocations by the MAFF Management Board for running costs, capital and receipts.

Pesticides Safety Directorate

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what performance targets he has set the Pesticides Safety Directorate for 1999–2000. [83050]

Mr. Nick Brown: I have set the Pesticides Safety Directorate the following performance targets for 1999–2000.

Quality of Service

1. To deliver the throughput of applications and processing times set out in the tables that follows this list.

2. To deliver high quality policy advice to Ministers and respond to their policy objectives.

3. To deliver high quality scientific work.

4. To conduct a Customer Satisfaction Survey and respond positively to the results.

People

5. To maintain Investors in People accreditation.

Efficiency

6. To develop new efficiency indicators that will apply from 1 April 2000.

Financial Performance

7. To recover from industry and Government the full economic cost (calculated according to accruals accounting) of its services.

8. To operate within 95 per cent. and 100 per cent. of allocations by the MAFF Management Board for running costs, capital and receipts.

Central Science Laboratory

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what performance targets he has set the Central Science Laboratory for 1999–2000. [83051]

Mr. Nick Brown: I have set the Central Science Laboratory the following performance targets for 1999–2000.

Efficiency

1. To develop new efficiency indicators that will apply from 1 April 2000.

Delivery of Science

2. At least 92 per cent. of work completed to time and within budget.

3. Achieve a mean score of 3.5 on a scale of 0 to 5 for the assessment of customer satisfaction using the established methodology.

4. Proportion of project milestones achieved to be at or greater than 82 per cent. (MAFF commissioned projects).

Financial Performance

5. To recover the full economic costs (calculated according to accruals accounting) of its services, after allowing for relocation costs.

6. To operate within 95 per cent. and 100 per cent. of allocations by the MAFF Management Board for running costs, capital and receipts.

Meat Hygiene Service

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what performance targets he has set the Meat Hygiene Service for 1999–2000. [83052]

Mr. Nick Brown: I have set the Meat Hygiene Service the following performance targets for 1999–2000.

Operational and service delivery

1. To control specified risk material

To take all measures necessary to ensure full compliance in licensed premises with Specified Risk Material Regulations 1997 and other related statutory instruments.

2. To maintain the formal training programme for staff in HAS

To ensure that all MHS contract and employed OVSs have received formal training in HAS by the end of the year.

3. To raise HAS scores

To ensure that at the end of 1999–2000 on a rolling three-month average at least 93 per cent. of licensed premises achieve HAS scores of more than 65 and that 75 per cent. of all licensed premises achieve HAS scores of more than 70.

4. To implement strictly the MHS clean livestock strategy

To implement strictly the Clean Livestock Policy by ensuring that the percentage of cattle and sheep allowed to be slaughtered under special precautions in categories 3 and 4 is below 10 per cent. of those initially rejected over the course of the year (category 5 animals may not be slaughtered for human consumption).

5. To ensure a strict prohibition on faecal contamination

To ensure a strict prohibition on carcases showing any faecal contamination being health-marked for human consumption.

6. Animal Welfare

To ensure that the Welfare at Slaughter and Killing Regulations 1995 are enforced in licensed slaughterhouses and to maintain effective monitoring of compliance; to carry out an animal welfare survey in all slaughterhouses by the end of the year.

Efficiency

7. To develop new efficiency indicators that will apply from 1 April 2000.

Financial Performance

8. To charge costs to industry

To charge plant operators the recoverable costs (calculated in accordance with the relevant legislation and accruals accounting and Industry Charges Guide) of providing the statutory health inspection at fresh meat premises.

9. To recover full costs from Government

To recover from Government Departments, Agencies and the Intervention Board the full economic costs (calculated in accordance with the relevant charging legislation and accruals accounting) of providing agreed services or other work undertaken on their behalf.

10. To comply with cash restraints

To operate within 95 per cent. and 100 per cent. of allocations by the MAFF Management Board for running costs, capital and receipts.

Veterinary Medicines Directorate

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what performance targets he has set the Veterinary Medicines Directorate for 1999–2000. [83053]

Mr. Nick Brown: I have set the Veterinary Medicines Directorate the following performance targets for 1999–2000.

Safety and Quality

1. To provide high quality scientific assessment work.
2. To provide high quality policy advice to Ministers.
3. To enter Suspected Adverse Reactions Surveillance Scheme (SARSS) reports onto the database as follows:

   Human SAR reports: within 2 working days

   Serious animal reports: within 2 working days

   Non-serious animal reports: within 10 working days
4. To report to the Veterinary Products Committee each quarter reviewing trends in SARSS reports and identifying areas requiring evaluation.
5. To collect 100 per cent. and analyse at least 95 per cent. of the samples collected in the national residues surveillance plan.

Standards of Service

6. 100 per cent. compliance with timetables for Centralised and Decentralised authorisation procedures (including Maximum Residue Limits).
7. 92 per cent. of new Marketing Authorisations to be determined or referred to VPC within 120 clock days.
8. 100 per cent. of new Marketing Authorisations to be determined within 210 clock days.
9. 100 per cent. of valid variation applications to have first assessment by 75 clock days and to be determined by 150 clock days.
10. 100 per cent. of valid renewal applications to have first assessment by 90 clock days and to be determined by 180 clock days.

Efficiency

11. To develop new efficiency indicators that will apply from 1 April 2000.

Financial Control

12. To recover from industry and Government the full economic cost (calculated according to accruals accounting) of each of its main business activities of:

    licensing and surveillance policy work

    residue monitoring

13. To operate within 95 per cent. to 100 per cent. of allocations by MAFF Management Board for running costs, capital and receipts.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the President of the Council, pursuant to her answer of 18 March 1999, Official Report, column 711, on special advisers, if she will give the total travel cost of each occasion when (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental advisers travelled abroad in an official capacity since 2 May 1997 and the place visited. [82435]

Mrs. Beckett: In the period from 2 May 1997 to 31 March 1999 Special Advisers in my Department travelled overseas in an official capacity on one occasion, to France, Belgium and the Netherlands. The total cost of travel and hotel accommodation was £463.07. All travel complied with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Immigration and Asylum Bill Special Standing Committee

Mr. Lock: To ask the President of the Council what was the total cost to public funds of the afternoon sitting of the Special Standing Committee on the Immigration and Asylum Bill on 20 April. [82207]

Mrs. Beckett: The additional costs incurred were mainly for catering staff overtime, and some minimal costs for committee staff and security. It is not possible to identify the specific additional cost of running this committee to public funds because it is not the House's practice to analyse day to day running costs.

European Community Documents

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Council, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) of 14 April 1999, Official Report, column 275, if she will place her full reply in the Library. [82297]

Mrs. Beckett: When I reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell), I shall, of course, ensure a copy is placed in the Library of the House.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 30 April 1999

SOCIAL SECURITY

Winter Allowance

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of (a) the cost of paying the £100 winter allowance through the basic state pension and (b) the cost of paying the winter allowance separately. [82283]

Angela Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave to the hon. Member for Bognor Regis and Littlehampton (Mr. Gibb) on 28 April 1999, Official Report, columns 168–69.

Birth Certificates

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the purposes for which his Department and its Executive Agencies require a birth certificate to be provided by (a) employees, (b) contractors, (c) those applying for employment or contracts and (d) other persons. [82768]

Mr. Timms: This Department and its Agencies require new employees to provide proof of identity and their date of birth, and the provision of their birth certificate is one means of doing this. However, a birth certificate is required only in the absence of other documentation, usually a passport. The Department and its Executive Agencies do not ask for birth certificates from contractors or from those seeking a contract.

The Benefits Agency does not insist on seeing birth certificates of new claimants of social security benefits to verify their identity, except when they are claiming certain benefits such as retirement pensions and child benefit. For other social security benefits, other forms of documentation are also acceptable.

The Child Support Agency will ask for sight of a qualifying child's birth certificate where there is a paternity dispute to establish whether or not the non-resident parent is shown on the birth certificate. It is unlikely that the Agency will request a birth certificate in any other circumstances, as the dates of birth of qualifying children are verified for the purposes of child benefit.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 18 March 1999, Official Report, column 791, on Special Advisers, if he will give the total travel cost of each occasion when (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity since 2 May 1997 and the place visited. [82418]

Mr. Timms: For the period 2 May 1997 to 31 March 1999, Special Advisers in this Department have travelled overseas in an official capacity on one occasion to Brussels. The total cost, for a party of four, for travel and any hotel accommodation was £642. All travel complied with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fisheries Inspectorate

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many vessels from each EU country have been (a) monitored and (b) boarded by his Department's Fisheries Inspectorate in British territorial waters in the last two years; and if he will make a statement. [82566]

Mr. Morley: The UK has exclusive fishing rights within the UK 0–6 mile limits and there is only limited access for other Community fishing vessels within our 12 mile limits. It follows that the majority of enforcement activity within the territorial waters adjacent to England and Wales involves UK fishing vessels.

Details of sightings and boardings of fishing vessels in British Fishery Limits adjacent to England and Wales are held by the Ministry. However, this information is not recorded in a way which would enable detailed information to be provided in respect of the territorial waters adjacent to England and Wales without incurring disproportionate cost.

Competitive Bidding

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many bids from farmers and farming organisations were (a) received and (b) successful in each of the competitive bidding processes launched and managed by his Department since May 1997. [82463]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 28 April 1999]: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Culling Trials

Mr. Caplin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the next areas to be brought into the randomised culling trial. [83267]

Mr. Rooker: Using the criteria set out in their report of last July, the Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB has now identified the fourth triplet of trial areas. It is located in east Herefordshire and work will begin there shortly.

DEFENCE

Air Brigades

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the readiness time for 5 Airborne Brigade; and what is the estimated deployment time for 16 Air Assault Brigade. [82347]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 27 April 1999]: Under current plans, 5 Airborne Brigade will cease to exist on 1 September 1999, and the command of the Airborne Battle Group will transfer to 16 Air Assault Brigade. The Airborne Battle Group will be maintained at the same very high readiness by 16 Assault Brigade as it is currently maintained by 5 Airborne Brigade. I am withholding more detailed information on readiness states under Exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Army Base Repair Organisation

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Army Base Repair Organisation for 1999–2000. [83229]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Chief Executive of the Army Base Repair Organisation has been set the following 5 Key Targets for 1999–2000.

To complete 95 per cent. of all programmes within the plan agreed with the customers; to complete 95 per cent. of district load tasks within the turnaround times agreed with the customer unit;to drive down the cost of repairs, by 3 per cent. in real terms, for financial year 1999–2000; to reduce the cost of reworking returned faulty equipment by 3 per cent., in real terms, for financial year 1999–2000; and to develop a trading mechanism with the owner and other parts of MOD, as part of the transition to full Trading Fund status, by 31 March 2000.

Low Flying

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with the Chief Executive of Gloucestershire airport about low flying by military aircraft. [82767]

Mr. Spellar: None.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Kosovo

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the mandate of the EU Special Envoy for Kosovo; what is his budget; and what level of assistance has been provided to him to date. [82234]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: On 5 October 1998, the European Council nominated Mr. Wolfgang Petritsch as EU Special Envoy to Kosovo to act on the spot for the EU under the direction of the Presidency and in close co-ordination with the EU Special Representative for the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY).

In order to provide the EU Special Envoy with the human and logistical resources needed to carry out his functions, the Presidency presented a Joint Action which allocated a sum of euro 510,000 to cover the costs related to Mr. Petritsch's mission.

The action was adopted on 25 March 1999. The action shall apply until 30 September 1999, unless renewed subject to a review including administrative and financial aspects.

Official Vehicles

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many ambassadors' and high commissioners' cars were made (a) in the UK and (b) outside the UK. [82559]

Mr. Fatchett: The Foreign Office has 215 flag cars in operation at Embassies and High Commissions overseas. These include protected and non-protected vehicles. There are presently 204 (95 per cent.) flag cars which have either been built in the UK and exported or built in the UK but bought locally. The Foreign Office has 11 flag cars which are non-UK built vehicles.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of vehicles used by (a) diplomatic posts and (b) Government departments overseas are (i) British manufactured and (ii) non-British manufactured. [82558]

Mr. Fatchett: Of the 1,202 vehicles currently supplied to diplomatic Posts overseas, 61.6 per cent. are British manufactured and 38.4 per cent. non-British manufactured. The information to answer part (b) of this question is not centrally held.

Yugoslavia (Oil Embargo)

Mr. Alan Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the EU oil embargo against the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia came into force; and if he will make a statement. [83228]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: On 23 April, the Council of the EU adopted a Common Position (1999/273/CFSP) prohibiting the sale or supply of petroleum and petroleum products to the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

Following from this Common Position, the EC adopted a Regulation on 26 April. The Regulation prohibits

(a) the sale, supply or export, directly or indirectly, of certain petroleum and petroleum products listed in an Annex to the Regulation, whether or not originating in the Community, to any person or body in the FRY or to any person or body for the purpose of any business carried on in, or operated from the territory of the FRY;

(b) the shipping of such products to the territory of the FRY

(c) participation in related activities the object or the effect of which is to promote the transactions or activities referred to under (a).

The Regulation includes exemptions, under certain conditions, for the sale, supply or export of petroleum and petroleum products for the use of diplomatic and consular missions of EU Member States; for the use of a future international military presence; and for humanitarian purposes.

The Regulation applies within the territory of the Community, including its air space and on board any aircraft or any vessel under the jurisdiction of a Member State and to any person elsewhere who is a national of a Member State and any body which is incorporated or constituted under the law of a Member State.

The Regulation will enter into force on 1 May and is directly applicable in the UK. Legislation introducing licensing and enforcement provisions, including penalties, will come into force the same day.

Pakistan

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact on Pakistan's political stability of the Taliban movement. [82874]

Mr. Fatchett: We are concerned about the impact on regional security of the continued conflict and instability in Afghanistan. I discussed this issue with the Pakistani authorities when I visited Pakistan in February. I urged them to use any influence they had with the Taliban and other factions to encourage a peaceful and lasting settlement in Afghanistan.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice he has given to the High Commission in Pakistan regarding relations with (a) MQM and (b) Mohajirs; and if he will make a statement. [82876]

Mr. Fatchett: In line with our policy of dialogue with all ranges of political opinion in Pakistan, the British High Commission in Islamabad and Deputy High Commission in Karachi regularly meet representatives of both the MQM and the wider Mohajir community.

Ministerial Visits

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has for ministerial visits to (a) Pakistan and (b) India. [82873]

Mr. Fatchett: Neither I nor my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has current plans to visit India and Pakistan.

Spain

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many United Kingdom citizens over the age of (a) 75 and (b) 80 years are serving jail terms in Spain. [82877]

Mr. Fatchett: There are at present no British prisoners over the age of 75 in Spanish jails.

Ikbalbhai Chandubhai Khalifa

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when a decision will be made on the settlement application made by Ikbalbhai Chandubhai Khalifa, Bombay reference AP/98/5/145. [82754]

Mr. Fatchett: A decision was made on this application on 19 April. We have asked our Deputy High Commission in Bombay for full details. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Baroness Symons, will be writing to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

EU Industry Council

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish the agenda for the forthcoming EU Industry Council of 29 April. [82178]

Mr. Byers: The Industry Council on 29 April 1999 covered a number of issues, the principal of which were:

Open debate on the competitiveness of EU industry in the light of globalisation.

Possible political agreement on proposals to amend Council Regulations 199/65/EEC and 17/62/EEC (Vertical Restraints Block Exemption Enabling Regulations).

Possible political agreement on a Common Position on draft Directive on the Late Payment of Commercial Debt.

Political Party Donations

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy to introduce legislation to require companies to undertake a ballot of all employees before making donations to political parties. [82640]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government do not see a case for requiring companies to ballot employees before making donations to political parties. They have accepted the recommendation of the Committee on Standards in Public Life that there should be a legal obligation on companies intending to make a political donation to have the prior authority of their shareholders, and have published a consultative document seeking views on the implementation of the Committee's recommendations.

Auditing Regulation

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many organisations will be (a) directly and (b) indirectly responsible for regulating auditors under his Department's proposals for regulating accountancy and auditing. [82548]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The new framework for the regulation of the accountancy profession, which I announced on 28 April, does not affect the bodies recognised under the Companies Act 1989 to supervise auditors, of which there are at present five. However, the framework establishes three new independent boards covering ethical standards, investigation and discipline, and auditing standards, which largely replace existing bodies and whose work will underpin particular aspects of auditor regulation. These bodies will come under the scrutiny of a new independent Review Board and appointments to them, and to the Review Board, will be made by an independent Foundation.

Inspectors (Accountancy Business Connections)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many inspectors currently deployed to carry out investigations under the Companies Acts, the Financial Services Act 1986, the Insolvency Acts and the Insurance Companies Acts have business connections with accountancy firms criticised in previous DTI inspectors' reports. [82651]

Dr. Howells: Currently, one Inspector is from a firm which was criticised in the Inspectors' report on The Bestwood plc, published in 1994. This report deals with events which took place before 1990.

Securities (Disclosure Compensation)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will seek to introduce a section equivalent to section 150 of the Financial Services Act 1986 to the Companies Acts. [82647]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government currently have no plans to introduce legislation to this effect. However, the roles and liabilities of directors and auditors will be examined as part of the Company Law Review.

Treaty of Amsterdam

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list each of the new responsibilities which he will assume when the signed Treaty of Amsterdam takes effect and for each (a) the likely effect on departmental staffing, (b) the bodies or persons in the European Union principally concerned and (c) the relevant section of that treaty and the consolidated treaties of the European Union and European Community. [80408]

Mr. Byers: The Treaty of Amsterdam will have minimal impact on the responsibilities of the Department.

PRIME MINISTER

Anglo-Spanish Working Group

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the (a) mandate, (b) membership and (c) frequency of meetings of the Anglo-Spanish Working Group on Employment and Economic Reform. [82235]

The Prime Minister: The British-Spanish Working Group on Employment and Economic Reform complements and builds upon existing British-Spanish bilateral co-operation on labour market reform. As stated in the Declaration on Employment and Economic Reform agreed at the British-Spanish Summit on 10 April, the Working Group will promote all aspects of co-operation between the two countries regarding economic reform.

The Working Group will be co-ordinated at Ministerial level. The UK co-ordinator will be my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to the Treasury. The detail and timing of meetings are currently under discussion with the Spanish government.

Cabinet Meetings

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Prime Minister for what reason the Cabinet meeting scheduled for 22 April was cancelled; and on how many occasions since 1969 Cabinet meetings have been cancelled. [82878]

The Prime Minister: It is established practice under section 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information not to disclose information relating to proceedings of Cabinet and Cabinet Committees. The Cabinet usually, but not invariably, meets once a week when Parliament is in session.

Steven Hayden

Mr. Hague: To ask the Prime Minister if he has decided to refer the case of Chief Petty Officer Steven Hayden to the Security Commission. [83230]

The Prime Minister: After consulting the Chairman of the Security Commission and the right hon. Gentleman, I have decided to refer this case to the Security Commission. The terms of reference will be:

> "To investigate the circumstances in which breaches of security have or may have occurred arising out of the case of Chief Petty Officer Steven Hayden, who was convicted on 23 October 1998 of offences under Section 1 of the Official Secrets Act 1989; and to advise in the light of that investigation whether any change in security arrangements is necessary or desirable."

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Judiciary (Speeches)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what advice his Department gives to members of the judiciary as to the content of speeches, with reference to language that could be interpreted as discriminating on grounds of sex, race or sexuality. [82825]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor expects judges to exercise personal responsibility in such matters, in order to ensure that nothing they say or do undermines the image of the judiciary as being impartial and even-handed towards all members of the community.

Conditional Fees (Insurance)

Sir Nicholas Lyell: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 20 April 1999, Official Report, column 534, if he will place in the Library copies of such written details of the insurance products to support the use of conditional fees as have been received by his Department from the providers listed. [82472]

Mr. Hoon: I have today placed in the Library copies of information on the relevant insurance products provided by:

First Assist;

Litigation Protection Ltd.; and Greystoke Legal Services.

Copies of information on the insurance products provided by:

Collegiate Insurance Brokers Ltd.;

Abbey Legal Protection;

Amicus;

Eastgate Assistance; and Saturn Professional Risks Ltd.

have been requested from the companies. These will be placed in the Library on receipt and I will write to the right hon. and learned Gentleman.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Macpherson Inquiry

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the implications for his Department of the Macpherson inquiry recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [80537]

Janet Anderson: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 14 April 1999, Official Report, columns 238–39.

My Department has a major part to play in helping to build an inclusive and diverse society. We are seeking to secure race equality and cultural diversity objectives in the funding agreements made between DCMS and its sponsored bodies; in monitoring the Lottery distributors' new strategies; in setting the agenda of the new DCMS regional consortiums and in encouraging the development of local authority cultural strategies. I am following developments in the media as broadcasters and programme makers examine their role in engaging ethnic minorities as audiences and in creative roles. My Department has enlisted the support of prominent sports people and clubs in portraying racism in sport as unwanted and unacceptable.

The Permanent Secretary has signed, on behalf of the Department for Culture, Media and Sport, the joint Charter for Action to redress the under-representation of ethnic minorities in the Senior Civil Service (SCS). The Department has adopted the targets for ethnic minorities in the Senior Civil Service (3.5 per cent. by 2005) published in the modernising government White Paper. The Department is considering a number of measures aimed at increasing representation in the higher grades, including the development of staff with potential in the feeder grades and more direct recruitment at higher levels.

Seaside Amusement Machines

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received regarding seaside amusement machines; and if he will make a statement. [82316]

Mr. Alan Howarth: My Department has received no recent representations. The Government recognise the popularity of amusement machines as entertainment for local residents and holidaymakers.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment his Department has made of the effects of an increase in the taxation of seaside amusement machines on his policy with regards to historic seaside piers. [82315]

Mr. Alan Howarth: My Department has made no such assessment. Questions on taxation are a matter for Treasury Ministers.

HEALTH

Residential Care

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his Department last reviewed the funding by local authorities towards the cost of people previously resident in their area who are in private residential or nursing home care; and if he will make a statement. [80026]

Mr. Hutton: Local authority funding was given priority in the Government's recent Comprehensive Spending Review of all public expenditure. The Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in July 1998 that almost £3 billion extra would be provided for Personal Social Services over the next three years.

These additional resources year on year will enable authorities to plan and commission more effectively the range of services, including residential and nursing home care, required by vulnerable people.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the change in the number of patients on NHS waiting lists waiting 12 months or longer since 1 May 1997. [80287]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 13 April 1999]: Between March 1996 and March 1997 (the latest figures available on 1 May 1997), the total number of patients on National Health Service waiting lists for 12 months or longer rose from 3,600 to 30,200. It continued to rise until June 1998 [to 72,100]. It has since fallen by 29 per cent. (21,200), to stand at 50,900 by the end of February 1999. We fully expect this downward trend to continue.

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the reports he has commissioned into reducing waiting lists, including the dates when they were received. [80280]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 13 April 1999]: In January 1998, the Department commissioned a report from Professor John Yates of the Inter-Authority Comparisons and Consultancy, at the University of Birmingham's Health Services Management Centre, on waiting times in the Ear, Nose and Throat specialty. The report was received by the Department in March this year.

Haemophilia and Hepatitis C

Sir Geoffrey JohnsonSmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what number of people with haemophilia and hepatitis C the assumptions are based on which his estimate of the cost of a financial assistance scheme is founded; if his estimate of the costs of such a scheme includes amounts of money for (a) payments for all and (b) a hardship fund; and how much he has assumed would be applied for each; over how many years such expenditure would be spread; what are the estimated costs in the first year; and what figure for first year start up costs he has included in his estimate. [80463]

Mr. Hutton: The estimate was based on approximately 3,000 people and the overall expenditure to date on the special payment scheme for those with haemophilia infected with HIV through national Health Service treatment with blood products. The estimates did not include start-up costs or the costs of managing the process.

Community Health Councils

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his policy regarding the future of community health councils; and if he will make a statement. [81708]

Mr. Denham: No immediate changes to the role of community health councils are planned.

NHSnet (Running Costs)

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the (a) development and (b) running costs of the NHSnet in each of the last five years; what are the forecast costs for the next two years; and if he will make a statement. [81644]

Mr. Denham: NHSnet is provided to National Health Service organisations as a service by commercial contractors who funded its development and meet its running costs: those costs are, therefore, confidential to the contractors.

Individual NHS organisations are charged by the contractors for NHSnet connections and for the messages they send over NHSnet.

Until 31 March 1999, bills for these charges were met by individual NHS users. The estimated total charges for the last four years are as follows (NHSnet has been in use only since 1995–96):

Estimated total charges (£ million)

Year	NHSnet connections	Messaging
1995–96	0.275	0.013
1996–97	1.900	0.113
1997–98	3.000	0.661
1998–99	4.400	1.500

From 1 April 1999, the charges for NHSnet are being met centrally, as recommended in "Information for Health", the new NHS Information Strategy published in September 1998. The estimates for the next two years are:

Estimated total charges (£ million)

Year	NHSnet connections	Messaging
1999–2000	8.800	4.300
2000–01	15.800	5.500

Primary Care Groups

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the annual reports on clinical governance from primary care groups will be required to include reports on the management of chronic illness. [81866]

Mr. Denham: Clinical governance reporting requirements for National Health Service organisations in 1999–2000 were set out in the document "Clinical Governance: Quality in the new NHS", published under cover of HSC 1999/065 on 16 March 1999.

Primary care groups are required to undertake an assessment of the current provision, produce plans to rectify shortfalls in quality and report on progress. Where there are quality shortfalls in the management of chronic illnesses, primary care groups will be required to report on them through this mechanism.

"National Framework for Mental Health"

Mr. Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects "National Service Framework for Mental Health" to be published; and if he will make a statement. [81984]

Mr. Hutton: An exact date has not been set for the publication of the mental health national service framework. We expect the framework to be published in the next couple of months.

Health Provision (Colchester)

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on his powers in relation to the decision of the former North Thames Regional Health Authority to retain a cancer centre at Colchester, and to build a new centre of excellence in the town, and the role of the Eastern Region Health Authority; [82219]

(2) what discussions his Department has held over the possible transfer of the cancer centre in Colchester to Ipswich. [82218]

Mr. Hutton: No decision was made by the former North Thames Regional Office of the National Health Service Executive to designate Colchester General Hospital as a cancer centre or to approve a capital investment programme.

Prior to receipt of any proposed business case, the Eastern Regional Office of the NHS Executive, in agreement with all interested parties, is conducting a review of cancer services across Suffolk and North Essex to determine the most appropriate way in which cancer services can be provided to local people.

Easington Primary Care Group

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how may GPs are expected to retire over the next five years in the Easington primary care group and if he will make a statement. [82299]

Mr. Denham: The information held centrally is classified by health authority and not by primary care group, and the latest figures for County Durham Health Authority are shown in the table. My hon. Friend may wish to approach the health authority for information about the Easington primary care group.

Age groups of unrestricted principals in County Durham Health Authority as at 1 October 1997

Age group	Number
Under 30	2
30–39	119
40–49	123

Pacemakers

Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Medical Devices Agency has a record of patients with pacemakers in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [82398]

Ms Jowell: Pacemaker patient records are not held by the Medical Devices Agency. Patients implanted with pacemakers are registered with the National Pacemaker Database (NPD), using data supplied by implanting hospitals on a voluntary basis.

In a survey conducted by the NPD in 1997, it was estimated that in 1996 approximately 94 per cent. of all pacemaker implants were recorded on the database.

Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many Siemens Sensolog 2033T pacemakers have been supplied by the NHS for use in England and Wales. [82402]

Ms Jowell: The Department does not hold this information. However, the National Pacemaker Database has 377 United Kingdom patients (including implants under the National Health Service and in private practice) registered as having received a Sensolog 2033 pacemaker implant, 268 of which are for the 2033T. The suffix T refers only to the configuration of the pacemaker connector into which the pacemaker lead is attached.

Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review the regulations regarding the recording of patients with pacemakers. [82397]

Ms Jowell: We have no plans to review current arrangements for the recording of patients with pacemakers. The maintenance of patient records is a matter of clinical practice and is not subject to regulation. The voluntary recording of pacemaker implants by clinicians with the National Pacemaker Database is endorsed by the British Pacing and Electrophysiology Group, the professional body for clinicians practising cardiac pacing.

Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list (a) the companies which manufacture pacemakers supplied by the NHS and which are used by patients in England and Wales, (b) the type of pacemaker supplied by the NHS and (c) the number of patients who use each type. [82403]

Ms Jowell: Information recorded by the National Pacemaker Database indicates that the following companies have, at some time, supplied pacemakers to United Kingdom pacing centres: Medtronic, Pacesetter (St. Jude Medical), Vitatron, CPI Guidant, Biotronik, Siemens, Sultzer Intermedics, Telectronics, Sorin Biomedica, ELA, Cordis, Biotec, Medico, Implantronik, APC Medical, Paladin, Precimed, Medcor, LEM, American Optical, Coratomic, Arco, Cardiac Control Systems, Lucas, Corporel. A number of these companies no longer supply pacemakers today.

Information relating to the types and numbers of pacemakers supplied by individual manufacturers is not published because of commercial sensitivity.

Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Siemens Sensolog 2033T pacemaker was withdrawn from sale; and when the Medical Devices Agency was informed of its withdrawal. [82400]

Ms Jowell: The manufacturer last sold this pacemaker in the United Kingdom in 1994, when it was superseded by a newer model. The Medical Devices Agency was not informed as the discontinuation was for commercial reasons and not in response to any known safety concerns.

Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the procedure for alerting patients who have pacemakers which are withdrawn from supply because of faults in manufacture. [82399]

Ms Jowell: Pacemaker manufacturers are primarily responsible for issuing information to hospitals if a fault associated with any of their products is identified. If the Medical Devices Agency determines that a significant risk remains to the safety of pacemaker patients, it issues advice to clinicians at all United Kingdom pacing clinics to assist them in patient management. Clinicians are responsible for providing appropriate advice to their patients.

Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many Siemens Sensolog 2033T pacemakers have been referred to the Medical Devices Agency as having faults. [82401]

Ms Jowell: Only one United Kingdom adverse incident involving the Sensolog 2033 pacemaker model (including the 2033T) has been reported to the Medical Devices Agency.

Oral Cancer

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list by health authority, ranked in descending order, the number of people, and the percentage of the population served by the authority, who have been diagnosed as having (a) treatable and (b) untreatable oral cancers in the last 12 months for which figures are available; [82332]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of oral cancers which were identified as such by a dentist (a) at an early and treatable stage and (b) at an advanced stage, in the last 12 months for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [82334]

Mr. Denham: The table gives details of hospital treatments for conditions which are usually described as oral cancers. Information is not routinely collected on sources of referrals or their prognosis.

Ordinary admissions and day cases combined: completed episodes by primary diagnosis and age
NHS hospitals, England, 1997–98

	All ages
C00 Malignant neoplasm of lip	454
C01 Malignant neoplasm of base of tongue	606
C02 Malignant neoplasm of other and unspecified parts of tongue	2,082
C03 Malignant neoplasm of gum	326
C04 Malignant neoplasm of floor of mouth	980
C05 Malignant neoplasm of palate	548
C06 Malignant neoplasm of other and unspecified parts of mouth	878
Total (C00-C06)	5,874

Note:
Figures are provisional, no adjustments have yet been made for shortfalls (i.e. the data is ungrossed). The table shows numbers of finished consultant episodes (FCEs) by primary diagnosis and age, in NHS hospitals in England for the financial year 1997–98. An FCE is defined as a period of patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that the figures do not represent the number of patients, as a person may have more than one episode of care within a year.

Dental Services

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dental practices have closed in each year since 1990 as a result of (a) retirement of the dentist and (b) the inability of the dentist to sell the practice as a going concern. [82331]

Mr. Denham: Dentists are independent contractors, and we do not therefore have information on the reasons for the closure of practices.

Princess Diana (Memorial)

Mrs. Organ: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps the Government are taking to ensure that the introduction of the Princess Diana Memorial Nursing Service does not harm the fundraising efforts of charities already providing community outreach nursing services for children with life threatening illnesses; [82277]

(2) what steps he plans to take to emphasise the distinction between the activities of the Princess of Wales Memorial Committee and the charitable activities of the Diana Princess of Wales Memorial Fund; [82278]

(3) what representations from other medical charities he has received concerning the introduction of the Princess Diana Memorial Nursing Service. [82279]

Mr. Hutton: Diana Children's Community Nursing Teams are funded by the Government to provide care and support in the home for children with life threatening illnesses and their families. The teams do not depend upon public subscription and will not impact upon the fundraising activities of charities already active in this area—who have welcomed this initiative for the additional resources it brings to this small but extremely vulnerable group of children. The distinction to be made between the Memorial Committee, which was formed to consider ways in which the Government might commemorate the life and work of Diana, Princess of Wales, and the Memorial Fund, which is a charitable foundation with its own trustees, has been expressed throughout discussions within the Committee and repeated in communications with the media.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Peterborough Chamber of Commerce

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussion the Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Mansfield (Mr. Meale), had with the hon. Member for Peterborough (Mrs. Brinton) concerning their respective times of departure from the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce's conference on transport on 16 April. [81675]

Mr. Prescott [holding answer 22 April 1999]: None.

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for what reasons the Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Mansfield, (Mr. Meale) withdrew his agreement to answer questions at the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce conference on transport, on Friday 16 April. [81671]

Mr. Prescott [holding answer 22 April 1999]: Because of the late starting of the conference, there was insufficient time for my hon. Friend to take questions. He therefore offered to respond in writing to any questions that people wished to raise.

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he instructed the Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Mansfield, (Mr. Meale) not to answer questions at the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce's conference on transport on Friday 16 April and to leave early; and what discussions he had with the Under-Secretary of State and the hon. Member for Peterborough (Mrs. Brinton) concerning their respective times of departure from the conference. [81676]

Mr. Prescott [holding answer 22 April 1999]: No; none.

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library copies of his replies to the correspondence he has received about the decision by the Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Mansfield (Mr. Meale), not to answer questions following his speech to the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce's conference on transport on Friday 16 April and to leave early. [81674]

Mr. Prescott [holding answer 22 April 1999]: No.

Ministerial Visit (Peterborough)

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the official engagements of the Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Mansfield (Mr. Meale), for Friday 16 April, stating in each case, what time each engagement was scheduled to start and finish and when the Under-Secretary actually arrived and departed. [81670]

Mr. Prescott [holding answer 22 April 1999]: My hon. Friend's official engagements on Friday 16 April were "The Southern North Sea—The Next 30 Years" Conference in Great Yarmouth and the Greater Peterborough Chamber of Commerce Transport Conference.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for what reason the Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Mansfield (Mr. Meale), travelled to the recent meeting of the Greater Peterborough Commerce, Training and Enterprise Council in a stretch limousine. [82073]

Mr. Prescott [holding answer 27 April 1999]: My hon. Friend travelled to Peterborough by public transport. The final two miles of his journey was by car, which was provided by the Greater Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, Training and Enterprise.

Energy-efficient Lighting

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what contribution he expects new lighting technologies to make to the achievement of his targets to reduce carbon dioxide emissions; and what plan his Department has to promote energy-efficient lighting: [82139]

Mr. Meale: Our UK Climate Change Programme Consultation Paper discussed and invited comment on ways in which the UK could meet its climate change objectives. Energy efficient lighting is included in this analysis as an element of the estimated potential for savings from energy efficiency more generally. The Government is now considering responses and will consult further on a new climate change programme for the UK later this year. Future initiatives to promote energy efficient lighting will be developed in the context of this process.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proportion of the budget of the Energy, Environment and Waste Directorate is allocated to the promotion of energy-efficient lighting. [82138]

Mr. Meale: Last year, 1998–99, my Department spent an estimated £109.2 million on programmes to promote energy efficiency. Of this, over £6 million can be identified as being specifically earmarked for promotion of energy-efficient lighting. In addition to this direct expenditure, the Energy, Environment and Waste Directorate has developed and provided finance for broader initiatives, including the Market Transformation Strategy and our high profile campaign, "Are You Doing Your Bit", which will have had a positive impact on the promotion of energy-efficient lighting.

During the same period, some £11.6 million was approved for expenditure on promoting energy-efficient lighting under schemes developed as part of the Standards of Performance set by the Director-General of Electricity Supply.

Road Hauliers

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he plans to issue observations on the petition from Shropshire's rural road hauliers presented to the House on 9 March; and if he will make a statement. [82001]

Dr. Reid: The Secretary of State has issued an observation today on the petition from Shropshire's rural road hauliers.

Disabled People (Local Authorities)

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review the regulations that prevent local authorities from accepting a financial contribution from clients towards the cost of adaptations for the disabled with the objective of allowing them a choice in how their needs are met. [82407]

Mr. Raynsford: Local authorities are responsible, under Part I of the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Act 1996, for paying disabled facilities grants towards the cost of disabled adaptations. Whilst the Act places no restrictions on the type of adaptation that may be eligible for grant assistance, it does require authorities to satisfy themselves that the works are necessary and appropriate for the occupant and that they are reasonable and practicable, given the age and condition of the building. These requirements are necessary to ensure that public money is used effectively, and we have no plans to change them. However, local authorities are required in Guidance to involve the disabled occupant in discussions about the adaptation scheme, and we would expect applicants to be offered a choice where this is appropriate. The amount that the applicant is expected to contribute towards the cost of the adaptations is determined by a means test, but there is nothing in the Act to prevent applicants from paying for additional work from their own resources.

Social Exclusion

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the fuel escalator's impact on social exclusion. [82257]

Dr. Reid: The Government recognise that transport issues are significant in considering the causes of social exclusion, and my Department has been giving priority to gathering information in this area. The Department is currently undertaking research to gain a better understanding of how transport affects social exclusion. Once this research has been completed, we will be in a better position to estimate the impact of different transport measures. In the meantime, we will continue to keep the impacts of the fuel duty escalator on social exclusion under review.

National Bus Company

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent representations he has received regarding the pension schemes of the National Bus Company; and if he will make a statement. [82532]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We have received a number of representations from former employees of the National Bus Company, and others, about the repayment of the surpluses from the company's pension schemes paid over to the Department of Transport in 1990. We are giving high priority to achieving without any unnecessary delay a just out-of-court settlement of the litigation commenced by the schemes' trustees on this matter.

Jubilee Line Extension

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to open the Stratford to North Greenwich phase of the Jubilee Line Extension. [82736]

Dr. Reid: As previously indicated in the answers given to the hon. Member by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Environment, Transport and the Regions on 27 November 1998, Official Report, columns 43–44, and 4 November 1998, Official Report, column 567, London Transport expects to open the Stratford to North Greenwich phase of the Jubilee Line Extension in late Spring.

Taxis

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the level of usage of taxi ranks within the Metropolitan Police district by taxis. [82280]

Ms Glenda Jackson: There are currently 523 taxi ranks in the Metropolitan Police District. There is no routine monitoring of their usage; individual ranks may be monitored from time to time, if a need to do so is identified.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will list (a) the number of licensed taxis entitled to ply for hire in (i) each of the current suburban sectors and (ii) each of the revised suburban sectors proposed by the Carriage Office and (b) the number of applications for licences that are currently being considered in suburban sectors; [82281]

(2) if he will list (a) the number of taxi ranks by (i) sector and (ii) category within (A) the current Metropolitan Police district and (B) the revised Metropolitan Police district, (b) the number of taxis allowed to wait at each rank and (c) the number of taxis licensed to ply in the area covered by each rank. [82282]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The number of licensed London taxi drivers entitled to ply for hire in each of the old suburban sectors is as follows:

Sector 1—627 drivers licensed of which*

337 may ply for hire in Sector 1A (Woodford area)

434 may ply for hire in Sector 1B (Romford area)

520 may ply for hire in Sector 1C (Ilford area)

Sector 2—228 licensed drivers of which*

142 may ply for hire in Sector 2A (Bexley area)

165 may ply for hire in Sector 2B (Bromley area)

Sector 3—607 licensed drivers of which*

425 may ply for hire in Sector 3A (Wimbledon area)

270 may ply for hire in Sector 3B (Carshalton area)

392 may ply for hire in Sector 3C (Croydon area)

*Sector 4—243 licensed drivers

234 may ply for hire in Sector 4A (Kingston area)

136 may ply for hire in Sector 4B (Hounslow area)

*Sector 5—314 licensed drivers

242 may ply for hire in Sector 5A (Ealing area)

216 may ply for hire in Sector 5B (Ruislip area)

229 may ply for hire in Sector 5C (Wembley area)

*Sector 6—133 licensed drivers

66 may ply for hire in Sector 6A (Finchley area)

94 may ply for hire in Sector 6B (Wood Green area)

59 may ply for hire in Sector 6C (Walthamstow area)

The number of licensed London taxi drivers entitled to ply for hire in each of the new suburban sectors (introduced on 31 March 1999) is as follows:

Barking and Dagenham, Havering, Newham and Redbridge Sector—627 drivers of whom*

612 may play for hire in Barking and Dagenham

451 may play for hire in Havering

520 may play for hire in Newham

513 may play for hire in Redbridge

*Bexley, Greenwich and Lewisham Sector

142 drivers may play for hire in Bexley

142 drivers may play for hire in Greenwich

228 drivers may play for hire in Lewisham

*Bromley Sector

165 drivers may play for hire in Bromley

Croydon Sector

392 drivers may play for hire in Croydon

Merton and Sutton Sector

452 drivers may play for hire in Merton

452 drivers may play for hire in Sutton

Hounslow, Kingston and Richmond Sector—243 licensed drivers of whom*

135 may ply for hire in Hounslow

233 may ply for hire in Kingston

243 may ply for hire in Richmond

*Hillingdon and Ealing Sector**

275 drivers may ply for hire in Hillingdon

242 drivers may ply for hire in Ealing

*Harrow, Brent and Barnet Sector**

255 drivers may ply for hire in Harrow

229 drivers may ply for hire in Brent

117 drivers may ply for hire in Barnet

*Enfield, Haringey and Waltham Forest Sector**

110 drivers may ply for hire in Enfield

59 drivers may ply for hire in Haringey

59 drivers may ply for hire in Waltham Forest.

The number of applicants for suburban licences who are currently studying the Knowledge are as follows:

Old sector for which applied	Area for which will ultimately be licensed	Total applicants
1A	Havering and Redbridge	15
1B	Barking and Dagenham and Havering	96
1C	Barking and Dagenham, Newham and Redbridge	211
2A	Bexley, Greenwich and Lewisham	71
2B	Bromley and Lewisham	84
3A	Merton and Sutton	156
3B	Merton and Sutton	43
3C	Croydon	157
4A	Kingston and Richmond	119
4B	Hounslow and Richmond	17
5A	Ealing and Hillingdon	68
5B	Harrow and Hillingdon	35
5C	Brent and Harrow	52
6A	Barnet	21
6B	Barnet and Enfield	34
6C	Enfield, Haringey and Waltham Forest	18

The number of taxi ranks appointed by the Commissioner in each suburban sector of the current Metropolitan Police District is as follows:

Sector 1A: 3

Sector 1B: 16

Sector 1C: 22

Sector 2A: 9

Sector 2B: 13

Sector 3A: 15

Sector 3B: 9

Sector 3C: 14

Sector 4A: 13

Sector 4B: 7

Sector 5A: 4

Sector 5B: 12

Sector 5C: 10

Sector 6A: 4

Sector 6B: 12

Sector 6C: 8.

The number of taxi ranks appointed by the Commissioner in each suburban sector of the revised Metropolitan Police District is as follows:

Sector	Number
Barking and Dagenham, Havering, Newham and Redbridge Sector	43
Bexley, Greenwich and Lewisham Sector	13
Bromley Sector	13
Croydon Sector	13
Merton and Sutton Sector	21
Kingston, Richmond and Hounslow Sector	18
Hillingdon and Ealing Sector	7
Harrow, Brent and Barnet Sector	28
Enfield, Haringey and Waltham Forest Sector	22

These figures exclude ranks on land privately owned at airports, railway stations, hotels, and shopping centres which are not appointed by the Commissioner. Details of such ranks are not available.

The number of taxis permitted to stand at each rank varies between 34 and 1.

The number of taxi drivers licensed to ply for hire in the area covered by each rank can be determined from the information above. All drivers licensed for a particular suburban sector may ply for hire on a rank within that sector, as may any driver licensed for the whole of the Metropolitan Police District.

Notes:

* Many suburban drivers are licensed to ply for hire in more than one sub-sector. In addition, all 20,498 All-London drivers are permitted to ply for hire in the whole of the Metropolitan and City Police Districts (therefore, for example, 21,125 drivers may ply for hire in the Barking and Dagenham, Havering, Newham and Redbridge Sector).

 There are 228 drivers licensed for the 2 sectors covering Bexley, Greenwich, Lewisham and Bromley.

 There are 607 drivers licensed for the 2 sectors covering Croydon, Merton and Sutton.

* There are 447 drivers licensed for the 3 sectors covering Hillingdon, Ealing, Harrow, Brent, Barnet, Enfield, Haringey and Waltham Forest. Separate figures are not currently available.

Housing Projections

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list by local authority the number of houses (a) under construction, (b) for which planning permission has been given and (c) estimated to be built in the next five years. [82708]

Mr. Raynsford: A table will shortly be deposited in the House of Commons Library showing estimates of the number of dwellings under construction for each local authority area in England.

Information on the number of dwellings with outstanding planning permission in England has been placed in the Library.

The Department does not produce forward estimates of the number of dwellings to be built.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list by local authority the projected figures of housing need in each of the next five years, indicating how the figures were produced and collated. [82709]

Mr. Raynsford: This Department does not produce projections of housing need by local authority.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Car Crime

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to reduce car crime; and if he will make a statement. [82649]

Mr. Boateng: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Halesowen and Rowley Regis (Mrs. Heal) on 15 December 1998, Official Report, column 467. Since then, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced to the House on 16 March 1999, Official Report, columns 902–04, that an additional £150 million is being allocated over three years to boost crime prevention in areas to which the public have access and where crime is highest. This will be used for closed circuit television systems and the infrastructure necessary to make them operate most effectively and a significant proportion will be used to improve car park security.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 19 April 1999, Official Report, columns 419–20, on remand prisoners, how many (i) untried and (ii) convicted remand prisoners spent (a) 0–10 days, (b) 11–20 days, (c) 21–30 days, (d) 31 to 50 days, (e) 51 to 100 days, (f) 101 to 150 days, (g) 151 to 250 days and (h) over 250 days in custody in 1998; and what percentage each category represented of the total prison population. [82488]

Mr. George Howarth: The available information relates to the length of time since first remanded into prison and is given in the tables.

Untried prisoners in prisons in England and Wales by length of time since first reception on 30 June 1998

Kosovar Asylum Seekers

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps he is taking to ensure that family members of Kosovar asylum seekers already in the United Kingdom will be granted family reunion; [81999]

(2) what steps he is taking to accelerate the processing of asylum applications from Kosovars who are already in the UK and have made such applications. [81997]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We remain committed to the policy of providing support for Kosovar refugees within the region. However, a special unit has been established in Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) to enable a flexible response to any requests from the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNCHR) to provide temporary refuge to evacuees from the Kosovo region. Kosovars recognised as refugees in the United Kingdom are entitled to be joined by their pre-existing spouse and minor dependant children under the terms of the family reunion concession. In compelling compassionate circumstances, the concession might be extended to other family members who formed part of the refugee's family unit before he fled to seek asylum. Arrangements are being made to deal with outstanding asylum applications, and to give particular priority to those where there are compelling compassionate circumstances, thus enabling families to be reunited under the terms of the concession.

Asylum Seekers

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum applicants from Pakistan have claimed membership of the MQM Party in each of the last two years. [82875]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We regret that the information is not available.

TREASURY

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the expenditure incurred by his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies on (a) the setting up and (b) the operation of web sites, indicating the cases in which the expenditure has been above that budgeted; and if he will list for each web site (i) the topics covered, (ii) the current average number of hits per month and (iii) the estimated expenditure on each web site for each of the next three years. [70963]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 15 February 1999]: HM Treasury currently operates two websites, HM Treasury (www.hm-treasury.gov.uk), and The Euro (www.euro.gov.uk). The UK Debt Management Office, an executive agency of HM Treasury operates the DMO site (www.dmo.gov.uk). All three sites are run from the HM Treasury server and share running costs. There are currently no non-departmental public body websites.

HM Treasury's website cost approximately £20,000 to set up in September 1994. Operation costs initially were £8,000 a year for a leased line, and one full-time Range C post (Internet Editor). The Euro site was set up in May 1998 at a cost of £7,000. Current operating costs for both sites are around £60,000.

Topics covered on the HM Treasury site include News Releases, Budget information, economic information, speeches, savings, guidance. The current average number of hits per month is 832,829.

The euro site provides information on business preparation for the euro. The average number of hits per month is currently 191,366.

The expenditure for each of the next three years is difficult to estimate, but server and personnel costs are likely to be around the current level.

The United Kingdom Debt Management Office website was set up in January 1999 at no additional cost. The website operates on the Treasury server with additional running costs of £50 per annum for domain name registration. The site is edited by DMO staff, with no additional staff costs.

Topics covered are news releases, publications and background information on the DMO. It is too early to establish hits per month, but the site has received 76,254 hits to date. Estimated costs for the next three years are nil.

Aggregates Tax

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the results of last year's consultation on the potential aggregates tax will be made available. [83278]

Ms Hewitt: HM Customs and Excise are issuing a summary of the results of the consultation today. At the same time, draft legislation for a possible aggregates tax, covering crushed rock, sand and gravel, is being made available for comment.

Productivity Road Shows

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many productivity road shows have been held to date; how many people attended; what was the cost of the road shows; and how many people contributed to the productivity debate. [80821]

Mrs. Roche: The productivity debate has been taken forward by the Chancellor and other Treasury Ministers' participation in a number of productivity focused events.

These included a series of ten productivity road shows held throughout the UK, at a cost of £95,000. These were attended by over 600 representatives of business, education and training providers. The debate has generated a widespread response from all these sectors and the public.

National Changeover Plan

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 14 April 1999, Official Report, column 247, on the National Changeover Plan, what types of non-IT expenditure he expects in the National Changeover Plan prior to any parliamentary decision to hold a referendum; and at what estimated levels of cost. [81747]

Ms Hewitt: It is for each organisation to decide for itself what resources to commit to preparations. The National Changeover plan provides an overall framework to help planning and encourage cooperation and consultation.

Departmental Staff (Ethnic Origin)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a breakdown, in numerical and percentage terms, of the ethnic origin, at 1 March, of (a) his private office, (b) Government special advisers, (c) his Policy Unit and (d) staff in total. [78515]

Ms Hewitt: At 1 March 1999, records for the Treasury's Ministerial support teams showed that, of those who have provided a self-declaration, there are nine members of staff who are in ethnic minorities. This represents 19.6 per cent. of those who have provided a self-declaration and 17.3 per cent. of the total of these teams.

There can be only up to four Special Advisers in the Treasury. In line with Cabinet Office guidance, information relating to fewer than five people is not disclosed. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave aggregated information on the ethnic origins of the Special Advisers in his written answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Brent, East (Mr. Livingstone) on 22 February 1999, Official Report, column 39.

There is no Policy Unit in HM Treasury. On ethnic origins of Treasury staff in total, I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 31 March 1999, Official Report, columns 710–11.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 31 March 1999, Official Report, column 686, how many times Ministers in his Department met their counterparts in the US Administration between 1 January and 1 June 1998, indicating the dates and locations of each meeting, the ministers involved and the name of the US counterpart. [82248]

Ms Hewitt: The Chancellor of the Exchequer met the US Treasury Secretary, Robert Rubin, on 21 February 1998 (London), 15 April 1998 (Washington) and 8 May 1998 (London).

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list (a) the place visited on each occasion when (i) departmental and (ii) non-department special advisers travelled abroad in an official capacity since 2 May 1997, (A) accompanied and (B) unaccompanied by Ministers and (b) the total travel cost of each occasion when a departmental and non-departmental adviser travelled abroad in an offical capacity since 2 May 1997. [82430]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 30 March 1999, Official Report, columns 669–70.

Vehicle Excise and Road Fuel Duties

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were (a) the rates of vehicle excise duty, (b) the levels of road fuel duty and (c) the annual receipts from each of these sources in each of the last 10 years. [82436]

Ms Hewitt: The rates of vehicle excise duty on typical vehicles for the last 10 years are:

£ per year

Effective date	Private and light goods	Lightest HGV[1]	2 axled articulated vehicle[2]
March 1990	100	130	3,100
March 1991	100	130	3,100
March 1992	110	150	3,100
March 1993	125	150	3,100
November 1993	130	150	3,100
November 1994	135	150	3,100
November 1995	140	150	3,100
November 1996	145	150	3,100
November 1997	150	160	3,210
March 1998	150	160	3,210
March 1999	155	160	3,210

[1] The rates apply to rigid and articulated goods vehicles between 3.5 and 7.5 tonnes

[2] The rates apply to articulated vehicles between 36 and 38 tonnes with a 2 axled tractive unit used with 3 or more axled semi trailer(s)

The levels of road fuel duty for the last 10 years, up to and including the increase on 17 March 1998, are published in the HM Customs and Excise Annual Report 1997–98, Table K1. The rates of duty applying since the Budget on 9 March 1999 are published in Customs and Excise Budget Notice 6/99.

The annual receipts from road fuels up to 1997–98 are published in HM Customs and Excise Annual Report 1997–98, Table K2. Provisional receipts for 1998–99 are £21,329 million.

The annual receipts for Vehicle Excise Duty up to 1997–98 are published in the Office for National Statistics publication, Financial Statistics, Table 2.1B. The provisional receipts for the financial year 1998–99 are £4,667 million.

Tax Returns

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the discount to be offered by the Government to taxpayers filing tax returns via the internet. [80819]

Mrs. Roche: The Budget proposed a discount on returns filed via the internet as part of the package of increased support for small businesses. The detail is currently being considered by the Government.

Millennium Gift Aid

Mr. Colman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will extend the Millennium Gift Aid scheme to support services provided in the UK by UK-based charities. [82260]

Ms Hewitt: In his document speech, the Chancellor confirmed that the consultation document on the Review of Charity Taxation, published on Budget Day, contains a proposal to extend the advantages of Millennium Gift Aid to all charitable causes supported by UK charities. This would take effect after 31 December 2000, when the present Millennium Gift Aid scheme comes to an end. Comments on this and the other proposals in the consultation document are invited by 31 August.

Median Earnings

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish an estimate of the current figure for half adult median earnings on a like-for-like basis with the hourly adult rate for the national minimum wage. [82045]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 26 April 1999]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Tim Boswell, dated 30 April 1997:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on adult median earnings.

The information requested is not available for 1999, nor on a like-for-like basis with the National Minimum Wage (NMW).

The preferred method for assessing the coverage of the NMW is to present adjusted New Earnings Survey (NES) and Labour Force Survey (LFS) data, in line with an article by David Wilkinson in the May 1998 issue of Labour Market Trends entitled Towards reconciliation of NES and LFS Earnings Data, which is available in the House of Commons Library. This method adjusts for the fact that the NES is based on a one per cent. sample of employees in the PAYE system and is therefore likely to under-represent relatively low paid staff earning below the tax threshold, in particular those who work part-time.

Using this methodology, which is not on a like-for-like basis when compared with the NMW, the estimate of half median earnings of full-time employees aged 22 and over was £3.83 in Spring 1998. The NMW for those aged over 21 has been set at £3.60 per hour. An estimate for all employees is not available, but were one to be calculated it would give a lower value because of inclusion of part-time employees.

Increased Fuel Duties

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the likely impact of the increased fuel duties imposed in his 1999 Budget on peak traffic flows on (a) the M25 and (b) other motorways; [80284]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effect of the increased fuel duties imposed by his first two budgets on peak-hour traffic flows on (a) the M25 and (b) other motorways. [80285]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 13 April 1999]: I have been asked to reply.

The pre-Integrated Transport White Paper National Road Traffic Forecasts published by the Department of Environment Transport and the Regions in 1997 make allowance for the impact of 6 per cent. per annum real fuel duty increases between 1996 and 2002 on car use and commercial traffic. By 2002, these increases are estimated to reduce total motorway traffic by nearly 2.5 per cent. below what it would otherwise have been. The reduction in traffic between 8 am and 9 am is about 2 per cent. The 1997 forecasts do not distinguish between individual roads and cannot therefore be used to provide a separate estimate for the M25.

CABINET OFFICE

Departmental Legal Business

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will make a statement on his Department's policy when (a) conducting legal proceedings and (b) seeking legal advice as to the circumstances in which Queen's Counsel should be instructed; and for each of the last three years (i) on how many occasions his Department instructed Queen's Counsel and (ii) what was the total cost of instructing Queen's Counsel. [81769]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him by my hon. and learned Friend the Solicitor-General, Official Report, 26 April 1999, column 1.

The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

DEFENCE

Economic Community of West African States

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what support his Department is giving to the moratorium on the import, export and manufacture of light weapons adopted by the Economic Community of West African States in October 1998. [80504]

Mr. Spellar: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd) on 15 April 1999, Official Report, columns 341–42.

Eurofighter

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what slippage in the Eurofighter programme has taken place since its inception. [82527]

Mr. George Robertson: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Robert Walmsley to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 4 May 1999:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the extent of slippage in the Eurofighter programme since its inception. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

Since the inception of the Eurofighter development programme in 1988, there has been slippage of 42 months against the original In-Service Date (the date of delivery of first aircraft to the Royal Air Force). This slippage was reported in the Department's Major Projects Report 1998, which I submitted to the Clerk to the Public Accounts Committee on 5 February 1999, and which was copied to the House of Commons Defence Committee.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes to the UK requirements for Eurofighter aircraft have been made since May 1997; and at what cost. [82523]

Mr. George Robertson: There have been no changes to our requirements for Eurofighter aircraft since May 1997.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Operational (a) Conversion Unit and (b) Evaluation Unit squadron of Eurofighters will be in service. [82525]

Mr. George Robertson: It is currently planned that the Operational Evaluation Unit will be formed in June 2002 following delivery of the first Eurofighter aircraft. This will be followed by the progressive build-up of the Operational Conversion Unit, which is currently planned to be complete by June 2004.

Service Pensions

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what basis the annual increase in ex-service pension rates are calculated; and if he will list the increases awarded in each of the last 10 years. [82574]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Starting rates of pension for newly-retired ex-Service personnel are linked to pay and increase each time there is a pay award. The pensions of people who have already retired are uprated annually in line with the Retail Price Index (RPI). The mechanism was set in the Pensions (Increase) Act 1971 and the Social Security Pensions Act 1975. The increase is determined by the movement of prices between September and September and is paid the following April. The last 10 years rates of increase are as follows:

Year	Percentage
1990	7.6
1991	10.9
1992	4.1
1993	3.6
1994	1.8
1995	2.2
1996	3.9
1997	2.1
1998	3.6
1999	3.2

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the rate of service pension currently paid to an Army major who retired at the age of 55 years after 34 years reckonable service on 1 April (a) 1975, (b) 1976, (c) 1977 and (d) 1978. [82576]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The current rates of Service Pension which would be paid to an Army Major who retired at the age of 55 years after 34 years reckonable service on 1 April of each of the following years are:

1975: £16,999

1976: £14,196

1977: £12,776

1978: £14,692.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what circumstances and for what reasons ex-servicemen, of the same rank and length of service, receive different rates of pensions under the Armed Forces Pensions Scheme. [82577]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Pension rates are directly linked to pay, and new starting rates of pensions are set each time there is a pay award. All those who retire will therefore have a different level of pension than those with the same rank and length of service who retire in a different pay year. After pensions are awarded they are uprated annually in line with the retail price index (RPI). Unless, therefore, military pay increases precisely in line with the RPI, the difference in pensions between two pay years will be permanent.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Moorland

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the moorland map of England drawn up by the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service can be used, in its present form, by the Countryside Agency in compiling its draft access maps of open countryside. [82153]

Mr. Meacher: The Countryside Agency and the Countryside Council for Wales will be responsible for producing maps showing land to which the statutory right will apply. In considering how best to do this, the agencies will be assessing the suitability of a range of sources of information, including the Moorland Map of England, and will be consulting the Farming and Rural Conservation Agency, along with other organisations.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how long it took the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service to map the moorland areas of England; and how much the exercise cost. [82154]

Mr. Meacher: The production of the Moorland Map of England was undertaken between May 1992 and March 1993, and required ten staff years of resources. The estimated overall cost was £603,000. The programme was preceded by a pilot project during 1991, involving the Scottish and Welsh agriculture departments, at an estimated cost to ADAS of about £30,000. The Moorland Map shows only moorland lying within the Less Favoured Areas.

Ballast Clearance

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how many incidents involving ships clearing out their ballast tanks there have been in (a) British waters and (b) Liverpool Bay in each year over the past 10 years; and how many prosecutions have resulted; [82170]

(2) what action he is taking to prevent ships from clearing out their ballast tanks in British waters. [82173]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Existing legislation imposes strict controls on the discharge of oily ballast water, which are enforced by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency surveillance aircraft and other means. From 1 August 1999 the NW European waters will be designated a Special Area under International Convention, and all discharges of oil cargo contamination in ballast water will be strictly prohibited. This designated Special Area will include the North Sea and its approaches, the English Channel and its approaches, the Irish Sea and its approaches, the Celtic Sea and the North East Atlantic immediately to the West of Ireland.

There is no requirement for ships to record the take-on or discharge of sea ballast water and there have been no prosecutions resulting from ships clearing out their ballast tanks. The United Kingdom is actively participating in work at the International Maritime Organisation to develop measures to minimise the introduction of unwanted aquatic organisms in ballast water. Pending the outcome of this work, the Maritime and Coastguard Agency has published guidance which urges owners to comply with IMO's "Guidelines for the Control and Management of Ships' Ballast water to Minimise the Transfer of Harmful Aquatic Organisms and Pathogens".

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what percentage of British ports have facilities for treating ballast from ships. [82174]

Ms Glenda Jackson: All ports are required to provide waste reception facilities which are adequate to receive the waste from ships normally using the port. However the discharge of clean ballast water is not controlled by legislation and it is not generally regarded as harmful, unless it has been contaminated by cargo on board an oil tanker. In these circumstances it is then strictly controlled by oil pollution regulations. Some oil terminals do have a local requirement that all ballast from tankers are discharged ashore and their reception facilities may include treatment to remove oil cargo residue. There are no facilities in the UK which are expressly designed for the treatment of clean ballast water.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the cost implications involved in ensuring that traffic lights within the UK are Year 2000 compliant. [82256]

Ms Glenda Jackson: There is no estimate of the cost implications involved in ensuring the Year 2000 compliance of traffic lights. Most are on local roads for which local highway authorities are responsible and costs are not available centrally. However, most of the equipment used at traffic lights has to have Statutory Type Approval, for which the Highways Agency are responsible. They have a budget of approximately £200,000 to establish the compliance of equipment in use and results are being made available to all highway authorities.

Tube Trains (Clapham Junction)

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to enable tube trains to run on existing lines to Clapham Junction. [82422]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Deputy Prime Minister gave permission for London Underground (LU) last August to do preparatory work for securing the legal powers necessary to build the southern extension to the East London Line.

Construction of the southern extension would open up a wide range of new journey opportunities and LU is consulting on possible routes through south London.

The Government and London Transport are looking at options for taking the project forward and we are clear that the future Mayor will have a role in the decision on the project.

Hedgerows

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many prosecutions have been brought by local authorities under the Hedgerow Regulations 1997, broken down by county. [82561]

Mr. Meale: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many miles of old hedgerow were removed in each of the last five years prior to the enactment of the Hedgerow Regulations 1997; and how many miles have been removed since its enactment, broken down by county in each case. [82560]

Mr. Meale: The last survey into changes in countryside hedgerows in England and Wales covered the years 1990 to 1993. This estimated that on average some 3,600 km of hedgerow were lost due to outright removal each year. A survey of hedgerow stock will be undertaken as part of Countryside Survey 2000. This will provide a basis for analysing changes which have occurred since the earlier survey.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what monitoring his Department carries out of local authorities with regard to their implementation of the Hedgerow Regulations 1997. [82562]

Mr. Meale: In 1997, the Local Government Association surveyed their members in order to inform the review of the Hedgerows Regulations. The results are included in the report of the review group, Review of the Hedgerows Regulations 1997 ISBN 1 85112 091 2, published in July 1998. Apart from this, while the current Regulations are under review, my Department has not devoted resources to gathering data from local planning authorities on how they are working in practice.

Motor Events

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what requirements are placed on organisations organising motorised sporting events and rallies to consult local communities and agencies. [82352]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 28 April 1999]: The RAC, as designated by the Secretary of State, is authorised to approve most events on the public highway and is required to consult the police and local highway authorities before they take place. In very limited circumstances applying to events with 12 or fewer competitors (as prescribed by article 5 of the Motor Vehicles (Competitions and Trials) Regulations 1969) there are no requirements.

A number of bodies have been given the power to authorise off-road events. It is a matter for those bodies to consider whether consultation is required for specific events.

Water (Contamination)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has and what targets he has set to reduce fat and oil contamination in the public water system. [82716]

Mr. Meale: Sewerage undertakers have powers to control and reduce discharges of fat and oil into sewers. If they consider the discharge constitutes trade effluent, their consent is required in accordance with the provisions of the Water Industry Act 1991. The consent may set conditions and require the elimination or diminution of any specified constituent of the trade effluent before it enters the sewer. Such a discharge without the undertaker's agreement is a criminal offence.

If the sewerage undertaker does not classify the discharge as trade effluent, it is still an offence under section 111 of the 1991 Act for a person to empty into a public sewer, or any drain or sewer connecting with a public sewer, any matter which is likely to injure the sewer or drain, to interfere with the free flow of its contents or to affect prejudicially the treatment and disposal of its contents. Any person who is found guilty of an offence is liable to a fine or imprisonment. I consider these statutory controls are sufficient to deal with and reduce the problem of fat and oil entering the sewers.

Environmental Appraisals

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what environmental appraisal his Department has undertaken of (a) the Water Industry Bill, (b) the Greater London Authority Bill and (c) the Local Government Bill; if he will make these appraisals available to the House; and what changes were made to these Bills as a consequence of the appraisals. [82565]

Mr. Meale [holding answer 29 April 1999]: (a) An environmental appraisal of the Water Industry Bill was published when the Bill was introduced on 26 November 1998.

(b) After careful consideration, the view was taken that no environmental appraisal for the Government's Greater London Authority proposals was necessary. This was because the proposal's impact would be upon the governance structures of London and, as such, would have no environmental impact.

However, promoting the objective of sustainable development will be an explicit and fundamental consideration for the Greater London Authority. The Greater London Authority's principal purposes are promoting economic development and wealth creation in London, promoting social development in London and promoting the improvement of the environment in London. The Authority's general purpose is conferred to enable it to further one or more of those purposes. In exercising the general power to do anything which it considers necessary to further any one or more of these purposes, it will be required to have regard to the effect its actions would have on the achievement of sustainable development in the United Kingdom. And where it does exercise its general power, it is required to do so in a way which is best calculated to contribute to the achievement of sustainable development in the United Kingdom.

(c) No environmental appraisal was undertaken of the Local Government Bill as its content has no direct implications for the environment. The Bill deals with local management and financial issues. Notes on the effects of the Bill on public sector finances and public sector manpower, a summary of the Regulatory Appraisal and a statement of the Bill's compatibility with the European Convention on Human Rights are included in the Explanatory Notes to the Bill.

Regional Development Agencies

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the names and qualifications of the individuals appointed to the regional development agencies in England. [82701]

Mr. Meale: The names of the members of the Regional Development Agencies were announced at the time of their appointment in answer to a parliamentary question on 14 December 1998, Official Report, columns 318–20. In conjunction with that announcement a Departmental press release was issued providing biographical details of the board members. A copy of this was placed in the Library of the House.

County Signs

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance he has issued to local authorities concerning the erection by (a) local authorities and (b) others of county signs at the historic boundaries of those counties. [82847]

Mr. Caborn: No guidance has been issued to local authorities relating specifically to signing of historic county boundaries. But signs erected for commemorative rather than traffic management purposes are controlled by district planning authorities under the Town and Country Planning (Control of Advertisements) Regulations 1992 in accordance with DOE circular 5/92.

Planning Applications

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list by local authority the number of planning applications that have been referred to his Department in each of the last 12 months. [82710]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 30 April 1999]: The numbers of planning applications referred to the Department under directions applying to departure applications, shopping development and playing fields, from April 1998 to March 1999, are shown in the table. Information relating to individual local planning authorities could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

M1 (North-east Link)

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received calling for a motorway link between the north east of England and the M1 motorway; and if he will make a statement. [82631]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Representations have been made over many years calling for the North East to be connected by a motorway link to a national motorway network.

Most recently, as part of the Government's Road Review, a number of representations were received identifying certain points and areas for action, including the need to offset the region's peripherality by better transport links, particularly in terms of providing a motorway connecting to the south.

Due account was taken of all views expressed in pulling together the targeted programme of improvements and the series of proposed studies as set out in "A New Deal for Trunk Roads in England" published in July 1998. These include a study of the non-motorway section of the A1 between Bramham and Barton.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his letter of 16 July 1998 (MR/PSO/8216/98), what progress he has made towards electronic publishing of carbon dioxide figures. [81910]

Mr. Meacher: Estimated UK emissions of carbon dioxide and other air pollutants for 1970–96 are available from the National Air Quality Archive on the Internet at the following address: (http: // www.environment.detr.gov.uk / airq / aqinfo.htm). The DTI also publish carbon dioxide emissions on their site (http://www.dti.gov.uk/epa). Later this month my department will be releasing 1997 emission estimates for all the main air pollutants and DTI will be releasing provisional 1998 emissions estimates for carbon dioxide.

Clean Development

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 19 January 1999, Official Report, column 451, what further proposals on the Clean Development Mechanism he has submitted to the UN Framework Convention. [81937]

Mr. Meacher: The EU submitted a first proposal on the modalities and procedures for the clean development mechanism to the Secretariat of the UN framework Convention on Climate Change on 2 March. This served as an input to the UNFCCC technical workshop on the Kyoto mechanisms which took place in Bonn 9–15 April. I have placed a copy of the submission in the House Library.

Haulage Industry

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he last met representatives of (a) the Road Haulage Association and (b) the Freight Transport Association; what plans he has to meet them in the future; and what proposals he has put to each organisation regarding the impact of increased duty and excise charges. [82777]

Dr. Reid: Ministers have frequent contact with representatives of the Road Haulage Association (RHA) and the Freight Transport Association (FTA) most recently. On 26 April my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister attended and addressed the FTA Annual Dinner. On 27 April I had an informal meeting with David Green, Director General and Lawrence Christersen, President of the FTA together with other FTA representatives. I also had an informal meeting at the House of Commons with Steve Norris, Director General of the RHA and with a number of individual road hauliers. Both the FTA and the RHA were represented at the inaugural meeting of the Road Haulage Forum on 8 April. I will be attending the RHA's Annual Dinner on 11 May, and I expect to continue to meet representatives of both Associations frequently.

I have put no proposals to them regarding the impact of increased duty and excise charges. Tax matters are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer. The Road Haulage Forum's main task is to establish the facts on the competitiveness of the industry but it will also be looking at a range of other issues.

Safeway Supermarket, St. Anne's

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to call in for further consideration the proposal to build a new Safeway supermarket in St. Anne's, Lancashire. [82673]

Mr. Caborn: The Secretary of State is waiting for further information from the Local Authority before he can begin to consider the application. I shall write and let the right hon. Gentleman know the Secretary of State's decision.

Highway Closures

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what procedures must be followed by a local authority seeking to close, on a permanent basis, a section of the public highway in connection with development. [82672]

Mr. Prescott: Section 247 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990, enables a developer to seek the stopping up or diversion of a highway to enable a development which has planning permission to proceed. A similar procedure exists under section 248 of the Act for side roads, and under S249 a local highway authority can apply to pedestrianise a road. All stopping up orders are subject to an objection procedure. Where there are unwithdrawn objections, the Secretary of State will usually call for a public inquiry to be held before deciding whether the order should be made or not.

Royal Train

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what costs were incurred by the Government in relation to the Royal Train in 1998–99; how many times it was used for official Government business; and at what cost on each occasion. [83078]

Mr. Prescott: The cost of the Royal Train is met as part of the Grant-in-aid which is the annual funding provided by the Department to meet the cost of official royal travel by air and rail. Figures for the use of the Royal train during 1998–99 (which include both a fixed and variable cost element) are currently being finalised but it is estimated that the total cost will be about £825,000. This represents a decrease of 29 per cent. on 1997–98 and 56 per cent. since the Grant-in-aid was established two years ago.

The Train was used once for official Government business during 1998–99—for a function hosted by Mrs. Blair for the wives of the G8 Heads of Government on 16 May 1998. The £11,382 variable cost of the use of the Train, plus a £4,250 contribution to fixed costs, was met by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Bus Service Tenders

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals London Transport has for publishing information about tenders for bus services in London. [83339]

Ms Glenda Jackson: London Transport Buses has recently reviewed its policy in this area and I welcome its decision to expand its disclosure of tender results. LTB intends to publish new information on the London Transport Web site and will also make hard copy versions available on request.

The relevant information will be the number of tenders, the successful bidder, the value of the selected bid and the range, and the cost per scheduled mile. In addition to basic information about the route and service, LTB will also publish information about any alternative service options which were considered.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Task Forces

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will publish a list of (1) task forces and (2) policy reviews established by his Department since May 1997 which (a) had external members recruited by way of public advertisement, and details of any person so appointed and (b) engaged in public consultation exercises, and the form that these took; [74456]

(2) if he will list all those task forces and policy reviews with external members established by his Department since May 1997 which have set up (a) sub-groups, (b) working parties and (c) other subsidiary committees; [79260]

(3) if he will list for all task forces and policy reviews with external members established by his Department since May 1997 (a) their dates of establishment, (b) those which have issued final reports and their dates of publication, (c) those which have been terminated and their dates of termination and (d) for those bodies still in existence, expected reporting and termination dates. [79283]

Mr. Morley: The following table sets out the details of Policy Reviews with external members established by my Department since May 1997. My Department has only one Task Force and this has no external members. None of these Reviews or the Task Force have any sub-groups, working parties or other subsidiary committees.

Rhizomania

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to prevent the spread of Rhizomania in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [82662]

Mr. Rooker: The Government apply statutory controls to minimise the spread of rhizomania, including a prohibition on the growing of beet on any fields where the disease has been found. Controls are applied to certain types of products brought into the UK, such as seed potatoes, to minimise the risk of further introductions of the disease. These arrangements are applied in accordance with the United Kingdom's status as a 'protected zone' for rhizomania under the EC plant health regime. The Government will be seeking an EC decision to continue the protected zone, which under existing legislation is due to expire on 1 November 1999.

Farmers (Kent)

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers farm in Kent; and how many farmed there in 1990. [82553]

Mr. Rooker: The numbers of principal farmers, spouses, other farmers, partners and directors working on agricultural holdings in Kent in 1998 are given in the table.

1998	Number
All principal farmers, spouses, other farmers, partners and directors (full time)	2,621
All principal farmers, spouses, other farmers, partners and directors (part time)	2,845
Total	5,466
(Salaried managers)	(453)

Agricultural and Horticultural Census—June 1998

Details of new questions are quoted in the Labour results statistics notice of 26 February 1999.

Fundamental changes were introduced to the labour questions in 1998, and the results may not be fully comparable with earlier years. The June 1990 census records that there were 5,894 principal farmers, farmers' spouses, other partners and directors and spouses with 396 salaried managers. Further information on labour figures in Kent are provided in the Digest of Agricultural Statistics.

Bovine Somatotropin

Mr. Lepper: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what trials of the synthetic genetically engineered dairy hormone bovine somatotropin are being conducted in the UK; and if any of the milk from these trials is entering the general milk supply. [82707]

Mr. Rooker: The use of recombinant bovine somatotropin (rBST) is subject to an EU moratorium which allows for a period for further practical tests. No such tests are being conducted in the UK. The moratorium is to be reviewed before the end of 1999.

Organophosphates

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the implications which the revocation of approval of Diazinon and other organophosphate substances by the Pesticides Safety Directorate, on the recommendation of the Advisory Committee on Pesticides, has for the continued use of (a) all OP sheepdips and (b) other OP products. [82778]

Mr. Rooker: The Government are reviewing all approvals of organophosphate and carbamate compounds used in pesticides approved by the Pesticides Safety Directorate and the Health and Safety Executive under the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985. The company concerned has chosen not to provide the data necessary to support two products containing diazinon. Approvals for these products have therefore been withdrawn. Companies that have indicated that they will support other organophosphate pesticides now have five months to submit complete data packages for the review.

A similar review of veterinary medicines, including those with an organophosphorus compound as an active ingredient was conducted in the early 1990s and companies produced full data packages for sheep dips and other veterinary medicines, the active ingredient of which is diazinon. In cases where the data packages satisfied the statutory requirements, products continued to be authorised. In addition, the Veterinary Products Committee (VPC) conducted reviews of the safety of OP sheep dips in 1993 and 1997.

The VPC is currently reviewing OP-based veterinary medicines other than sheep dips and the withdrawal of the two diazinon pesticides will be drawn to the Committee's attention.

School Milk

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of nursery (a) schools and (b) classes are taking up the subsidy for school milk. [82773]

Mr. Rooker: This information is not held centrally.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the latest figures for herd breakdown due to bovine TB. [82775]

Mr. Rooker: The latest available information for 1998 is as shown. There are a small number of laboratory test results still pending and the figures may increase slightly once these results are available.

Region	Confirmed incidents
GB Total	736
West Region	581
Wales	93
Rest of England	59
Scotland*	3

*West region includes the counties in SW England plus Herefordshire, Worcestershire and Shropshire

Organic Farming

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the growth in organic production in the UK in each of the last two years. [82774]

Mr. Morley: Information available to my Department suggests the following growth in the area of land farmed organically (fully converted or in conversion):

	Hectares
April 1997	50,772
April 1998	54,834
April 1999	274,519

HOME DEPARTMENT

Hedgerows

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on Government policy in respect of police investigations of offences under the Hedgerows Regulations 1997 (a) in general and (b) in cases where the offence may have been committed by public bodies, indicating how many investigations have occurred to date. [82563]

Mr. Boateng: Under the Hedgerows Regulations 1997, offences in respect of hedgerows may be prosecuted by the police (through the Crown Prosecution Service) local authorities or indeed any private person. Whilst the police may investigate these offences, normal practice is for local planning authorities to take responsibility for such matters.

The information requested is not held centrally.

Lancet Inquiry

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 13 April 1999, Official Report, column 11, on the Lancet Inquiry, if he will provide a breakdown of the costs of the Cleveland officers; under which budget those costs are accounted for; and if the costs of each of the 18 police officers from Cleveland referred to in his answer of 20 April 1999, Official Report, column 484, are included in those figures. [82564]

Mr. Boateng: The breakdown of the costs to the Lancet inquiry of the Cleveland officers, including travel and subsistence, is as follows:

	£(000)
Salaries including National Insurance and allowances	412
Overtime	280
Travel and subsistence	6[illegible]

All costs are initially charged to a holding account and recharged to a revenue account at the end of the financial year, in accordance with the force's normal accounting policies. The costs include the overtime and other expenses, but not the salaries, of 11 officers of the force's organised crime group who are tasked and funded to undertake major criminal investigations, which has included work on the Lancet inquiry.

Cleveland Police

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date the former Deputy Chief Constable of Cleveland Police Force was required to empty his office. [82538]

Mr. Boateng: The former Deputy Chief Constable of Cleveland Police retired from the police service on 7 March. He vacated his office on 18 February in order to take outstanding leave before the date of his retirement.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Police Complaints Authority is overseeing the carrying out of the Redwood Inquiry into the Cleveland Police Force. [82537]

Mr. Boateng: This is an ongoing investigation and, for operational reasons, it would not be appropriate at this stage to make any further comment.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the names of individuals who made the accusations against Detective Superintendent Ray Mallen of Cleveland Police Force which gave rise to the inquiry into his (a) role with the media and (b) expenses; and if he will make a statement. [82539]

Mr. Boateng: The inquiry into expenses arose from concerns about the circumstances during which a complaint was made by a member of the public following an incident which occurred in Leicester in May 1997, although the complaint itself did not relate to expenses. Matters arising from some statements made during the course of media interviews have been the subject of internal inquiries by the force and did not arise from a complaint by an individual.

Travellers

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to address the problem of travellers occupying open space in London suburbs. [82718]

Mr. Boateng: The Home Office and the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions (DETR) has recently issued good practice guidance on dealing with unauthorised camping by travellers. Operational guidelines on the use of police powers to remove trespassers under section 61 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 are issued by the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) and are currently under review. I have made clear to ACPO that I expect police powers to be used at an early stage where necessary, particularly where traveller encampments are associated with problems of crime, disorder or disruption to the local community. The use of police powers in individual cases is an operational decision for the senior police officer present at the scene. The 1994 Act also provides powers to local authorities to remove trespassers, and civil action for repossession may be taken by landowners.

In addition, the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 requires local authorities and the police to develop Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships, comprising the police, local authority, probation, health and other local agencies, which work in partnership to identify and resolve issues of crime and disorder in their area and to work to reduce it. These partnerships are relevant where criminal activity or disorder arise from unauthorised encampments.

The Home Office and DETR are currently holding a number of regional seminars to encourage the police and local authorities to work effectively together to deal with the problems that can be caused by unauthorised encampments.

Drug-related Crimes

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were jailed for drug-related crimes in 1997–98. [82693]

Mr. George Howarth: The Home Office statistical bulletin, "Drug Seizure and Offender Statistics, United Kingdom 1997" (Issue 8/99), was published on 29 April 1999. Table 3.10 shows that the number of offenders sentenced to immediate custody for drug offences in the United Kingdom in 1997 was 10,422.

Young Offenders

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many minors are currently housed in non-juvenile correctional institutions and prisons. [82691]

Mr. George Howarth: Provisional information indicates that, on 31 March 1999, there were a total of 366 persons aged 15–17 years in adult prisons. Young persons (15–21 year olds) in adult prisons are normally accommodated separately from adults.

Persons aged under 15 years are not held in Prison Service establishments, but are remanded to local authority accommodation. This information is published in a Department of Health statistical bulletin entitled "Children Accommodated in Secure Units". This information is presented on a financial year basis with the last report (Bulletin 1999–6) covering the year ending 31 March 1998.

Prisoner Services

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what services are provided to prisoners who serve less than one year in prison. [82694]

Mr. George Howarth: Short-term prisoners benefit from the range of services available to all prisoners. On drugs issues, these include detoxification, advice and treatment. As part of the Prison Service drug strategy, all prisoners will benefit from improvements in the quality and availability of drug services, including improved links with community agencies to ensure continuity of treatment on release. This aspect is of particular importance to short-term prisoners whose length of stay in prison often means that they cannot benefit from the more long-term intensive drug treatment programmes.

Prisoners (Restraint)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what circumstances prisoners may be shackled when receiving medical treatment or under medical supervision. [82692]

Mr. George Howarth: Arrangements for the security of prisoners receiving medical attention outside prison, including the circumstances in which they may be handcuffed, are contained in sections 37.114–159 of the Prison Service security manual, copies of which are held in the Library.

DNA Database

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his letter of 18 June 1998, FC/98 333/1039/3 PO 10689/98, what progress has been made in joint research on the National DNA database. [81935]

Mr. Boateng: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 25 January 1999, Official Report, column 68. The analysis backlog was eliminated by the end of March as planned, and the benefits arising from the joint projects between the Forensic Science Service (FSS) and individual police forces are being evaluated.

On the wider issue of DNA analysis which was also covered by the letter of 18 June 1998, the joint research programme is still in progress.

Cellphone Jammers

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 19 January 1999, Official Report, column 408, what study he is making of the use of cellphone jammers by the police. [81936]

Mr. Boateng: The Home Office is continuing to look at these devices to determine their suitability for police use.

Correspondence

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire dated 3 March on behalf of his constituents Mr. and Mrs. Smith. [83155]

Mr. Boateng: The right hon. Member will receive a reply to his letters of 3 March and 27 April within the next few days.

Secure Training Centres

Mr. Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the liaison between social services departments and the new secure training centres. [81817]

Mr. Boateng: Medway Secure Training Centre's main contacts are with home area supervising officers. The arrangements appear generally to be working well. Supervising officers are appointed as soon as possible following sentence and are involved with trainees during the custodial and community parts of the secure training order, providing continuity and consistency of approach to deliver the objectives of reducing offending and protecting the public.

Occasionally, supervising officers from distant areas cannot attend initial assessment meetings, which need to be held at short notice just after sentence. As more STCs come into operation—two more are due this year—the better geographical spread should reduce this problem.

Marriages of Convenience

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what written guidance is given to immigration officers when making unannounced visits to check if a marriage is one of convenience for immigration purposes. [82941]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: If the written guidance given to immigration officers involved in making unannounced visits to check whether a marriage is genuine and subsisting were to be published, it would enable those whose marriages were not genuine and subsisting to take measures that permitted the deception to continue.

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what types of evidence are considered relevant by immigration officers when making unannounced visits to investigate if a marriage is genuine for immigration purposes. [82940]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: When making an unannounced visit, immigration officers will consider any evidence that will assist in deciding whether a marriage is genuine and fulfils the requirements of the Immigration Rules.

Non-jurors (Human Aids)

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set out the timetable and the process of consultation for his review of the law which prohibits non-jurors from being present during a jury's deliberations with particular reference to human aids to communication. [82725]

Mr. Boateng: The review of the law which prohibits non-jurors from being present during a jury's deliberations raises issues both of principle and practicality. In order to provide statistical evidence to support the review, research has been commissioned and will begin in June into the composition of juries and the reasons for jury excusals, including deafness. This research is due to be completed in the autumn and in the meantime work is being carried out to prepare a paper which could be issued for public consultation next year.

Parole

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of prisoners serving four years or more in England and Wales were granted parole on (a) their first application and (b) their second application in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [82447]

Mr. George Howarth: The available data given in the table are for the proportions of determinate sentenced prisoners recommended for parole at first reviews and at all subsequent reviews. Data on the grant of parole are not readily available in this form, but the proportion of prisoners not granted parole following a recommendation for parole is insignificant.

Proportion of determinate sentenced prisoners recommended for parole at first and subsequent review 1989 to 1998/99

England and Wales	First Review	Subsequent Reviews (per cent.)
1989	15.3	47.6
1990	11.9	44.3
1991	12.3	47.1
1992	15.5	49.7
1993	20.1	48.2
1994	36.0	44.7
1995	48.4	33.7
1995/96	47.6	29.4

Probation Services (Funding)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total level of funding for each probation service in each of the last three years and the real terms change in funding levels over that period; and what is the planned real terms change in funding for 1999–2000. [81559]

Mr. George Howarth [pursuant to his reply, 26 April 1999, c. 76]: The table should have included a detailed breakdown of total revenue cash limit available to each probation area in this and the last three financial years; the real terms value of the last three years' cash limits at 1999–2000 prices using the latest Treasury deflators, and year on year changes. A copy has now been placed in the Library.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Decommissioning

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when she last received a progress report from General De Chastelain on the decommissioning of terrorist weapons; and if she will make a statement. [83070]

Mr. Ingram: The Secretary of State last met with the Decommissioning Commission on 22 March, the Prime Minister met them on 30 March and I met them on 22 April. The Commission also meets regularly and frequently with both Governments at official level. The Commission continues its discussions with representatives of the various groups and parties

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what have been the total costs associated with the International Commission on Disarmament established to oversee the decommissioning of terrorist weapons. [83071]

Mr. Ingram: The Independent International Commission on Decommissioning is funded jointly by the British and Irish Governments. The total expenditure associated with the Commission shared by both Governments, up to 31 March 1999, was IR £1,905,830.57. The British Government's share of this was STG £803,379.46.

NHS Pay Review

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the pay increases for 1999–2000 agreed by Her Majesty's Government following the NHS Pay Review Bodies' recommendations were included in April salary payments to staff; and if he will make a statement. [83153]

Mr. McFall: The pay increases effective from 1 April 1999 in respect of hospital medical and dental staff employed in the Health and Personal Social Services and covered by the Pay Review Bodies were included in April salaries. However, the salary increases recommended by the Review Body for Nurses and Midwives and Professions Allied to Medicine and Related Grades of Staff who are employed by or in the Health and Personal Social Services in Northern Ireland were not.

Staff employed in the Health and Personal Social Services in Northern Ireland are not subject to the terms and conditions of service negotiated nationally. However, national terms and conditions are replicated, on a parity basis to apply to staff employed in the HPSS.

The recommendations of the Review Body on Doctors and Dentists' Remuneration were agreed with the professions locally and issued to employers on 15 March for implementation. The recommended increase was included in April salaries.

The national Whitley agreements in respect of Nurses and Midwives and Professions Allied to Medicine and Related Grades of Staff were not issued until 8 April 1999 which did not allow sufficient time for a parity agreement to be reached for similar staff employed in the HPSS. Parity agreements are being promulgated and will be issued as soon as possible.

The pay increases for Nurses and Midwives and PAMs staff will apply from 1 April and arrears will be paid where appropriate.

RUC Barracks

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what date and by what legal authority RUC barracks were constructed on property of the Gaelic Athletic Association and grounds of Crossmaglen Rangers; what preparations have been made to vacate these barracks; what functions currently conducted at or from these barracks will be discontinued and what functions will be carried out from which other sites; what preparations for the transfer of functions are being made at other sites; what date has been set as the target for completion of these moves; what compensation or other payments have been made to the owners of this land; and what plans have been made to demolish the barracks and return the site to its previous use. [82503]

Mr. Ingram: The then Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, Merlyn Rees, signed a Requisition Order on 25 June 1974 to take possession of land belonging to Crossmaglen Rangers GAA Club under powers conferred by the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1973 for the purpose of extending the then existing joint RUC and Army Base. The Requisition Order conveys the right to build or do any other necessary works on the land. The existing Base is sited mainly on land owned by the Police Authority for Northern Ireland.

A portion of this requisitioned land which was outside the perimeter wall of the extended Base was handed back to the GAA Club in April 1995.

A further small strip of land belonging to the Club was requisitioned in May 1991 to create a 3 metre stand-off zone between the rear perimeter wall of the Base and the Club's newly built Social Club. This area was de-requisitioned in April 1995.

On return of the area still held under requisition none of the functions currently carried out at or from these barracks will be discontinued or transferred to other sites. They will be carried out from the reduced base.

Work to clear the site has commenced and will be completed as soon as possible. On completion of the restoration work, the land will be handed back to the GAA Club.

To date, the GAA Club has received £150,000 in compensation and £30,657.53 towards the costs of professional advisers' fees.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Employment Agencies

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will publish the consultation document on the reform of the regulations governing employment agencies. [R] [82395]

Mr. Ian McCartney: My right hon. Friend proposes to publish it during this month.

Foresight

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what plans he has for an announcement concerning the Foresight work programmes; and when the announcement will be made; [82724]

(2) if chairpersons have been appointed to each of the panels associated with the next round of Foresight. [82723]

Mr. Battle: The new round of Foresight began on 1 April 1999. A blueprint outlining the structure and remit of the new round was published in December 1998 alongside the Competitiveness White Paper.

Work in the new round is being taken forward by ten sectoral and three thematic panels. Chairs for twelve of the new panels have been appointed as follows:

Thematic panels	Panel chair
Ageing population	Jim Stretton, Chief Executive, Standard Life
Crime Prevention	Colin, Sharman, Chairman, KPMG International
Manufacturing 2020	Nicholas Scheele, Senior Vice President, Ford, Europe
Sectoral panels
Built Environment & Transport	Keith Clarke, Chief Executive, Kvaerner Construction
Chemicals	Dr. Joe Blaker, President, Chemical Industries Association
Defence, Aerospace & Systems	Sir Donald Spiers, Chairman Meggitt plc.
Financial Services	Tim Jones, Managing Director, Retail Banking Services NatWest
Food Chain & Crops for Industry	Deidre Hutton, Chair, Scottish Consumer Council
Healthcare	Sir Michael Peckham, Director, School of Public Policy, University College London
Information, Communications & Media	Joyce Taylor, Managing Director, Discovery Communications Europe
Materials	Professor John Wood, University of Nottingham
Retail & Consumer Services	Sir John Banham, West Country Management
Construction (associate programme)	Tim Broyd, Director, WS Atkins
Marine (form of association to be decided)	Tim Jones, Chief Executive, Lloyds Register

The Chair of the Energy and Natural Environment panel will be appointed shortly.

Work programmes for the panels and panel membership are due to be published in the next few weeks.

World Trade Organisation

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the dates and locations of quadrilateral meetings between representatives of the USA, Japan, Canada and the EU, to be held in preparation for the ministerial conference on the WTO in Seattle in November. [82680]

Mr. Wilson: The next quadrilateral meeting is to take place in Tokyo on 11–12 May 1999. No further meeting has yet been scheduled.

Gas-fired Power Stations

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will make a statement on his Department's progress in dealing with applications for gas-fired power stations in (a) Anglesey, (b) Baglan Bay and (c) Rassau; [82238]

(2) what assessment he has made of the employment involved in (a) construction of and (b) permanent employment at proposed gas-fired power stations in (i) Anglesey, (ii) Baglan Bay and (iii) Rassau; [82239]

(3) what estimates he has made of the possible investment in Wales resulting from the proposed gas-fired power stations in (a) Anglesey, (b) Baglan Bay and (c) Rassau. [82240]

Mr. Battle: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 7 April 1999 the decision not to use powers, under section 14(3) of the Energy Act 1976, to defer or halt the Baglan Bay project. No decision has yet been taken on Anglesey or Rassau. Planning, local and environmental issues will be considered as part of the process of obtaining clearance under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989, which has not yet been completed for any of the three proposals.

Employment Tribunals

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will provide a breakdown by race of the wing members available to sit at London employment tribunals. [79007]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The table gives details of the ethnic origin of each lay member available to sit in the London employment tribunals. The descriptions given are provided by the members.

Ethnicity
West Indian/Guyanese	8
Indian	12
Black Caribbean	11
Mixed origin	2
Chinese	2
Black African	2
Sri Lankan	1

Caparo Judgment

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will ask the Law Commission to investigate ways of reversing the effects of the House of Lords' decision in the Caparo judgment. [82930]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I have no plans to do so. However, the question of auditors' duties and responsibilities is an important issue which we need to keep under review and will be addressed within the Company Law Review which is due to report in the Spring of 2001.

Limited Liability Partnerships

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will estimate the number of businesses which could be incorporated as limited liability partnerships. [82934]

Mr. Ian McCartney: It is impossible to give an estimate. Provided they met the statutory requirements eventually set out in any legislation to allow for limited liability partnerships (LLPs), any business could incorporate as an LLP.

It is more helpful to consider how many businesses might be interested in LLP status, given that the vehicle will be voluntary and businesses will need to take a commercial decision about whether it is appropriate for them. The majority of interest is expected to come from those firms already operating as partnerships, though it may also be of interest to new businesses.

At present there are approximately 600,000 partnerships in the UK. These encompass the full spectrum of business and industry and only a minority are likely to seek to become LLPs. Public consultation on a draft Bill and regulations has so far revealed little or no interest from the retail, manufacturing, catering and health sectors. LLPs are therefore likely to be attractive primarily to professionals such as lawyers, actuaries, accountants, and those in the construction industry (including surveyors, architects and engineers). How attractive the vehicle proves in practice would depend on the statutory requirements which are made of it, and whether the structure is considered to be appropriate. However, if one assumes, for example, that 15 per cent. would eventually choose to become LLPs this would suggest a total of 90,000. This is, though, a best guess, and cannot be quoted with any authority.

Although it is impossible to calculate the speed of take-up of LLPs, we expect that it would take a number of years before a figure of 90,000 LLPs was reached.

Company Annual Accounts

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy to introduce legislation requiring public limited liability companies to file their annual accounts at Companies House within 90 days of the year end. [82639]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The case for requiring public limited companies to file their annual accounts sooner than the current seven months allows will be addressed in the next phase of the fundamental review of company law. The review is due to report in the spring of 2001.

Small Company Audits

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce legislation to make the definition of the threshold for small company audits consistent with the definition of small company contained in the Companies Acts. [82549]

Mr. Ian McCartney: We keep the current threshold for company audit of a turnover of £350,000 under review and would consult widely on any proposal to change this.

Nuclear Materials (Transport)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the implications of the declaration of the Association of Caribbean States concerning the transhipment of radioactive wastes and nuclear materials through the Caribbean for plans to send by sea nuclear materials from Sellafield to Japan. [82850]

Mr. Battle: The Government are aware of the declaration. All shipments by sea of nuclear materials are undertaken fully in compliance with all relevant international standards, regulations and recommendations relating to the transport by sea of hazardous cargoes and nuclear materials. Compliance with these standards and regulations, which are developed within, and regularly reviewed by, the International Maritime Organisation and the International Atomic Energy Agency, ensures that the risk to health, safety and the environment posed by the transport of nuclear materials is negligible. The right of innocent passage is a fundamental principle of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea. Ships operating in compliance with the Convention, and with all applicable international regulations, retain that fundamental right.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the preferred route to be used to transport by sea nuclear materials from Sellafield to Japan, indicating the criteria used in selecting the preferred routes. [82852]

Mr. Wilson: The choice of route for any such shipment is made taking account of a range of operational factors including weather forecasts and security considerations. The chosen route is normally announced two days after the ship departs from Europe.

Arms Exports (Yugoslavia)

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list UK arms exports to Yugoslavia or the former Yugoslavia (a) from 1989 to 1991 and (b) since May 1997. [82704]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

Extracting and quality assuring Customs and Excise information relating to UK arms exports to Yugoslavia between 1989 and 1991 could be done only at disproportionate cost.

The first Annual Report on Strategic Export Controls was published in March. Part 3 of the Report contains Customs' statistical information relating to exports of military equipment in 1997.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Birth Certificates

Mr. Beith: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list those purposes for which his Department and its executive agencies require a birth certificate to be furnished by (a) employees, (b) contractors, (c) those applying for employment or contracts and (d) other persons. [82822]

Mr. Hoon: Birth certificates are seen only in the case of new recruits. They are used to check the age and identity of the individual, and for nationality purposes. A passport will sometimes be sufficient.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

English Sports Council

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he plans to appoint a permanent chair of the English Sports Council. [82326]

Mr. Banks: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has now announced that Trevor Brooking has been appointed as the Chair of the English Sports Council for a period of three years.

Youth Sports Unit

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what (a) recommendations and (b) reports the Youth Sports Unit has made to date. [81805]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 28 April 1999]: The Youth Sports Unit is a part of my team of advisers in DCMS. It does not have an identity separate from Government or publish its own recommendations or reports. Its remit is to work closely with other Government Departments, Sport England (the Sports Councils) and other providers to ensure that youth sport and play maintains a high profile and features in other Government Departments' policies.

The Unit works closely with the Department for Education and Employment on PE in the National Curriculum as well as feeding into initiatives such as Surestart and childcare issues. The Unit liaises with the Department of Health on initiatives to encourage physical activity amongst young people, and officials sat on the Home Office inter departmental working group on Preventing Unsuitable People from Working with Children and Abuse of Trust (PUWCAT). The Unit works to ensure that Sport England has policies that reflect the Government's aim to encourage more young people to participate in sport. It also works alongside Sport England's young people team representing the department on steering groups on schemes such as Sporting Ambassadors, a new Activity Award for primary schools and Sportsmark.

The Unit is represented on the Departmental Policy Action Team (PAT10) Arts and Sport, which has been asked to report on best practice in using arts, sport and leisure to engage people in poor neighbourhoods, on how to maximise the impact on poor neighbourhoods of Government spending and policies on arts, sport and leisure, and to draw up an action plan with targets to maximise the impact of arts, sport and leisure policies in contributing to neighbourhood regeneration and increasing local participation. It has also contributed to work on the forthcoming sports strategy paper, which will promote participation in sport by children and young people.

The Unit is currently considering the responses from the play field to the recent children's play consultation exercise asking about The focus of future centrally funded play services. They were also involved in the Lottery play leaflet issued in May last year and the recent New Opportunities Fund initiatives.

English Tourism Council

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he intends to appoint the new chairman of the English Tourism Council. [83032]

Janet Anderson: The recruitment process is under-way and the chairman will be appointed as soon as possible.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what will be the remuneration of the new chairman of the English Tourism Council. [83033]

Janet Anderson: The chairman of the English Tourism Council will be paid £36,000 per annum.

Tourism

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which organisation will in future be responsible for handling consumer inquiries about tourism in England. [83035]

Janet Anderson: As at present, the primary sources of information will be the regional tourist boards and the tourist information centres. The English Tourism Council will have a strategic role to play and will oversee information systems and how their use is developed.

SCOTLAND

CCTV

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many publicly funded CCTV schemes are operating; if he will list them (a) by each local authority area and (b) by the date they started operating; and how many schemes are planned to be introduced over the next year. [82444]

Mr. McLeish: Table 1 lists only those schemes (by local authority area) which have been awarded funding from The Scottish Office CCTV Challenge Competition between 1996–97 to 1998–99. Information on other CCTV systems is not held centrally. Information regarding the dates when systems became operational is also not held centrally but the table details the financial year in which grant was awarded to each scheme. Table 2 lists the 18 schemes (covering 14 local authority areas) awarded grant in the 1999–2000 round of the Competition.

Ministerial Meetings (US)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many times Ministers in his Department have held meetings with members and officials in the US Administration since 1 June 1998, indicating the dates and locations of each meeting, the Ministers involved at each meeting and the US department involved in each meeting. [82264]

Mr. Dewar: I met the Under Secretary for Economics, Agriculture and Business Affairs, State Department, and the Special Trade Negotiator, US Trade Representative, on 17 March 1999 in Washington.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 24 March 1999, Official Report, column 321, on special advisers, if he will give the total travel cost of each occasion when (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity since 2 May 1997 and the place visited. [82414]

Mr. Dewar: For the period 2 May 1997 to 31 March 1999, Special Advisers in my Department have travelled overseas in an official capacity on four occasions to Brussels, Strasbourg, Bonn and the United States. The total cost of travel and any hotel accommodation is £6,530. All travel complied with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

Registers

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the proposed fee structure for searches of the registers of Scotland by (a) solicitors and search lawyers and (b) the general public. [82501]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 29 April 1999]: The fee structure for searches in the Registers of Scotland is set out in the Fees in the Registers of Scotland Amendment Order 1999, S1 1999/1085 (S87) which was made on 7 April and came into effect on 21 April 1999. The order introduces uniform fees for searching the Registers for all customers. No distinction is made between solicitors, searchers and the general public. The pertinent fee rates are as follows:

A search includes a print disclosing relevant entries if requested within 7 working days of the date of the original search.

NHS Pay Review

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the pay increases for 1999–2000 agreed by Her Majesty's Government following the NHS Pay Review Bodies' recommendations were included in April salary payments to staff; and if he will make a statement. [83152]

Mr. Galbraith: Authorisation to implement in full the pay increases for 1999–2000, recommended by the NHS Pay Review Bodies, was given to NHS Trusts in Scotland by 8 April. It is for NHS employers to implement the new pay scales as quickly as possible. Some employees have received the pay increases in their April salary. In some trusts this has not been possible but payment will be backdated to 1 April.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Woodland Assurance Scheme

Mrs. Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he made of the links between Société Générale de Surveillance (Switzerland) and SGS Qualifer prior to granting approval to audit Forestry Commission woodlands for inclusion within the UK Woodland Assurance Scheme. [82938]

Mr. Macdonald: The subject of this question relates to matters undertaken by Forest Enterprise. I have asked its Chief Executive, Dr. Bob McIntosh, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Bob McIntosh to Mrs. Gillian Shephard, dated 4 May 1999:

The Secretary of State for Scotland has asked me to reply to your Question No 8293 regarding the links between Societe Generale de Surveillance (Switzerland) and SGS Qualifer.

We were aware when accepting the tender for contract that SGS UK Limited is a UK registered company owned by the British SGS Holding UK Limited. They, in turn, are owned by the holding company, Societe Generale de Surveillance (Switzerland). The term QUALIFOR (Quality Forest Management) is the registered trademark used to identify the Group's Certification Programme.

CABINET OFFICE

Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many times the United Kingdom Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator has met members and officials of the US Government since he took up his post; and if he will list the dates and locations of each meeting, the US departments involved on each occasion and the names of the US members and officials at each meeting. [82265]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: The United Kingdom Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator and US Government officials and members met on five occasions as follows:

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Schengen Agreement

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the bearing of the letter from the Dutch Government of 16 July 1997, regarding the Amsterdam Treaty negotiations, on the United Kingdom's declaration of intent at the Justice and Home Affairs Council to join elements of Schengen. [82298]

Ms Quin: The letter from the Permanent Representative of the Netherlands to the UK Permanent Representative of 16 July 1997 concerned negotiations of the Schengen Protocol to the Amsterdam Treaty.

Following the Home Secretary's statement at the Justice and Home Affairs Council on 12 March, the Government expect shortly to be submitting a formal request to participate in provision of the Schengen aquis, under the terms of the Schengen Protocol and Declaration 45 annexed to the Amsterdam Treaty Final Act. Under this Declaration, the Council is invited to seek the opinion of the Commission before it decides on a request from the UK or Ireland to take part in Schengen provisions, and the Member States undertake to make their best efforts to facilitate such participation.

General Affairs Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the outcome of the General Affairs Council held in Luxembourg on 26 and 27 April; and if he will make a statement. [82684]

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on negotiations on the establishment of a common statute for MEPs. [82481]

Ms Quin: I attended the General Affairs Council on 26 April and the Association Councils on 27 April, in Luxembourg. The Council adopted the A points listed in document 7517/99 and noted the resolutions, decisions and opinions adopted by the European Parliament in its sessions of 22–23 March, listed in document 6450/99, and 12–16 April. Copies of the documents listing the A points and resolutions will be placed in the House Libraries as soon as they become available.

Western Balkans

The Council expressed its strong and continuing support for maximum pressure on Milosevic's regime to accept the international community's five demands and stop the brutal campaign of torture, forced deportation and murder in Kosovo. It reaffirmed the EU's commitment to contributed fully to the humanitarian effort to relieve the plight of the refugees displaced by Milosevic's policy.

Following the adoption of a Common Position for an EU oil embargo against the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY) on 23 April, the Council agreed to extend the existing EU sanctions regime in the following ways: a travel ban on Milosevic, his government, senior officials and their families, and on other persons close to the regime; extension of the scope of the freeze of funds; prohibition on private sector provision of export finance in addition to the existing ban on government financed export credit support; extension of the investment ban; widening the scope of the prohibition on the export of equipment for internal repression, and its extension to include goods, services, technology and equipment for the purpose of restoring/repairing assets damaged in the air strikes; discouragement of Member States and sporting organisations from organising sporting events with the FRY; and imposition of a comprehensive flight ban between the EU and the FRY.

The Council also reiterated its strong support for Montenegro, Albania and the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (FYROM). It welcomed the intention of the European Commission to examine urgently the upgrading of relations between the EU and Albania and the EU and FYROM towards an Association Agreement.

The Council adopted a separate declaration in support of Romania and Bulgaria and agreed to continue work on a possible stability pact for South Eastern Europe.

East Timor

The Portuguese Foreign Minister briefed the Council on the latest round of tripartite talks on East Timor in New York (22–23 April) which concluded that the East Timorese would be consulted on their future status on 8 August. The Irish Foreign Minister also briefed the Council on his recent visit to East Timor.

The Council reiterated its concern at the continuing violence in East Timor and reminded the Indonesian Government of its obligation to maintain security in the territory. The Council asked its relevant bodies and the Commission to consider urgently possible measures to support the consultation process, provide humanitarian assistance, and develop economic and social programmes for the East Timorese.

Niger

The Council agreed that the assassination of President Bare of Niger on 9 April constituted a breach of the essential elements of the Lomé Convention, and that Article 366a procedure should be set in motion. This may lead to the full or partial suspension of co-operation with Niger under the Lomé Convention.

Statute for Members of the European Parliament

The Council reached agreement on a Statute for MEPs. The main elements of the package are: a monthly gross salary of 5,677.22 euro for all MEPs paid by the Community and annually updated in line with inflation; salary to be subject to Community taxation, with an option for Member States to impose an additional top-up national tax; reimbursement of expenses actually incurred in the performance of Parliamentary duties, duly justified by the presentation of invoices; new Community pension scheme; social security provision; and a publicly available Register of MEP's interests.

The text will now be transmitted to the European Parliament for approval. We hope the Statute can enter into force on 20 July, when the new European Parliament meets.

Implementation of the Amsterdam Treaty

The Presidency presented a paper on work in progress to prepare for entry into force of the Amsterdam Treaty. There was some discussion on ECJ preparations for the new Treaty and Commission plans to implement the new data protection and transparency provisions.

Implementation of the Schengen Protocol

The Council gave political agreement to the draft decisions defining and determining a legal base for the Schengen acquis, subject to any technical amendments necessary as a result of the Schengen Executive Committee meeting on 28 April. The Council also approved the draft Schengen/Norway and Iceland agreement, the draft rules of procedure of the Norway/Iceland Mixed Committee and the draft decision on arrangements for implementing the Norway/Iceland agreement.

Russia: Common Strategy

The Council considered preparation of the EU Common Strategy on Russia and welcomed the progress made. It agreed to take work forward so that the Common Strategy could be adopted at the Cologne European Council on 3–4 June.

EU/US Relations

There was discussion of current EU/US trade disputes. Sir Leon Brittan reported on his discussions in Washington on the bananas, hormones and hushkits disputes. On bananas, the Council welcomed the WTO's decision considerably to reduce US sanctions against the EU, and underlined the importance of fully respecting the WTO's rulings without delay. The Council invited the Commission to submit proposals for amending the banana regime by the end of May. On hormones, the Council urged the Commission to intensify its negotiations with the US and Canada with a view to reaching agreement on a compensation package and future possible options for the labelling of meat from hormone-treated cattle. On hushkits, the Council underlined the importance of quickly reaching a mutually satisfactory solution with the US on this issue.

Burma

The Council renewed the Common Position on Burma for a further six months, expressing its deep concern at continuing human rights violations and repression of the democratic opposition in Burma. It called again on the Burmese regime to take early and concrete steps towards democracy, respect for human rights, and national reconciliation.

Co-operation Council with Ukraine

The Ukrainians described recent developments in the economic situation and noted the need for suitable arrangements for Ukraine's free trade arrangements with Poland and Estonia post enlargement. There was also discussion about the closure of Chernobyl, Justice and Home Affairs issues and Kosovo.

Association Councils

Following the GAC there were successful meetings of the Association Councils with Slovakia, Romania and Estonia on 27 April. They took stock of the preparations for EU membership, and considered the operation of the Europe Agreements. Over lunch the participants discussed Kosovo, Russia and relations with neighbouring countries, including regional co-operation—this included Black Sea Economic Co-operation, Moldova and the Northern dimension.

South Africa

The Commission expects to have its proposal to allow signature of the EU/South Africa Trade, Development and Co-operation Agreement ready in May. The Commission noted that the majority of Member States want a mixed Agreement.

Twinning

The Commission announced that internal problems which have caused delays in paying pre-accession advisers funded under the EU twinning programme with candidate countries in Central Europe have been solved. The Commission anticipate that 80 to 100 advisers will be in place in the candidate countries by the end of the year.

Association of Caribbean States

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Her Majesty's Government received the text of the Final Declaration of the Second Summit of Heads of State of the Association of Caribbean States, held in the Dominican Republic; and if he will make a statement. [82851]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We received the text of the Final Declaration following the conclusion of the Summit, the British Ambassador in Santo Domingo having represented Her Majesty's Government in the capacity of Special Guest. I also refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him today by the Minister for Energy and Industry. We continue to follow with interest the work of the Association as it builds on its role as a vehicle for regional integration and co-ordination.

Geneva Convention (Article 3)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the implications of NATO's policy of targeting Serbian television stations for the United Kingdom's commitments under Article 3 of the Geneva Convention (IV) relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War. [83029]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: All military actions taken by the UK armed forces are, and will continue to be, conducted in strict accordance with the laws of armed conflict, including the relevant provisions of the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and Additional Protocol 1 (1977).

Sakina Bibi

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when a decision will be made on the application for entry clearance by Sakina Bibi, Islamabad reference F1777. [83028]

Mr. Fatchett: A decision was made on the application for entry clearance made by Sakina Bibi on 26 April. The Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, my noble Friend Baroness Symons, will be writing to my hon. Friend as soon as possible to inform him of the outcome of this application.

WALES

Deep Mines

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many coal miners are employed in deep mines in Wales. [82241]

Mr. Hain: About 600.

Assisted Areas Maps

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to announce the new assisted areas maps; and if he will make a statement. [82731]

Mr. Hain: We are working to complete the assisted areas map review as soon as possible. The Welsh Office is fully involved alongside other Departments to seek the best possible outcome for Great Britain. This is the key objective, rather than an early announcement. As the Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, my hon. Friend the Member for North Swindon (Mr. Wills), said in an Adjournment debate on 26 April 1999, Official Report, column 124, we do not expect an announcement before mid-June.

Objective 1 Status

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the population of the area covered by Objective 1 status in West Wales and the Valleys; and if he will make a statement. [82732]

Mr. Hain: The Office for National Statistics mid-year estimates for 1997 give a population of 1,869,000 for the West Wales and the Valleys area.

Modern Apprenticeship Scheme

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the modern apprenticeship scheme in (a) Wales and (b) Flintshire; and if he will make a statement. [82726]

Mr. Hain: The modern apprenticeship programme is one of the main planks in our agenda for improving skills in Wales. Latest figures indicate that Wales has, at over 7 per cent., a proportionately higher than population share of the total of modern apprentices in training in England and Wales. It is our aim to increase the numbers in training from the current 9,100 to 14,000 by the year 2002.

Following the transfer of functions, the modern apprenticeship programme will be a matter for the National Assembly. However, evaluation of the modern apprenticeship programme is undertaken on an England and Wales basis by the Department for Education and Employment and no separate assessment has been made for Flintshire.

Assisted Area Status

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning (a) assisted area status and (b) Objective 2 status in North East Wales; and if he will make a statement. [82734]

Mr. Hain: (a) We received 9 representations on assisted area status for North-East Wales in response to the consultation launched on 30 July 1998.

(b) There is currently a consultation process underway on the criteria that should be used for identifying Objective 2 areas across Great Britain. All areas of East Wales not likely to be designated as Objective 1 are eligible for consideration for Objective 2 status. The consultation closes on 25 May.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the impact of the loss of assisted area status for Deeside upon the aerospace industry at Broughton, Deeside; and if he will make a statement. [82735]

Mr. Hain: The assisted areas map has not yet been decided. In responding to the consultation document, Flintshire County Council and British Aerospace set out the case clearly for retaining assisted area status for Broughton. This case is being considered.

Welsh Management Council

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many times the Welsh Management Council has met; and what are the Council's current membership and terms of reference. [82933]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Management Council was relaunched on 30 November 1998, since when it has met in plenary session only once more. In the meantime, however, a sub-group of members has also met four times to oversee a research project commissioned to inform the preparation of a draft 5-year Business Plan.

The Council currently comprises eighteen members—8 employers and 10 representing a variety of constituencies, ranging from education to government. However, the Council is also considering recruiting additional members in order to bring industry/employer representation into the majority.

The Council's Mission is "To shape and promote the development of managers and management in Wales for the benefit of organisations, individuals, and the wider community; in particular, to expand the pool of well qualified managers able to provide effective leadership."

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

NHS (Strategic Plan)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to publish a strategic plan for the NHS in Wales. [83187]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The intention is to produce a long-term corporate strategy and priorities for NHS Wales and its partners. It will be informed by an examination of the issues bearing upon key service areas. The outcome of the first review, into acute general hospital services, is expected in mid-2000.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

NHS (Allocations)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what sums have been allocated to each (a) health authority and (b) NHS trust in Wales for 1999–2000; on what date the allocation was made; and on what dates the moneys will be received by health authorities and NHS trusts. [83255]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced our plans for spending on the NHS in Wales, and for health authorities in 1999–2000, on 30 March. He referred to this in his answer of 31 March 1999, Official Report, column 718. The detailed health authority resource allocations will be issued following the National Assembly elections. In the meantime, health authorities and trusts have been authorised to draw down funding on an interim basis.

Following the transfer of functions, this will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Morriston Hospital

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will announce his decision on the outline business case submitted by Swansea NHS Trust for the development of Morriston Hospital. [83151]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The Swansea NHS Trust have submitted an initial strategic outline of their proposals for the development of Morriston Hospital. This was received on 26 April. The Department will be discussing these proposals with the Morgannwg Health Authority and the Trust and will determine whether the business case should undergo further development.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

NHS Pay Review

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if the pay increases for 1999–2000 agreed by Her Majesty's Government following the NHS Pay Review Bodies recommendations were included in the April payments to staff; and if he will make a statement. [83154]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Following the agreement reached with the respective negotiating councils, the Advance Letters promulgating the new salary scales for staff covered by the NHS Pay Review Bodies were issued on 12 March for hospital medical and dental staff and on 8 April for nurses and midwives and the professions allied to medicine. It is then up to individual employers to arrange for the pay increases to be made to their staff as soon as practicable.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Accident and Emergency Departments

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money for improvement of A&E departments has been allocated to the NHS in Wales (a) in total and (b) by NHS trusts; and on what date the allocations were made for 1999–2000. [83256]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: On 9 March, following the Budget, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced a Capital Modernisation Fund for Wales of £80 million, over the three years from 1999–2000, to take forward the Government's priorities in Wales, including health, education and preventing crime. The amount to be allocated to the NHS will be announced in due course and will address specific priorities for NHS Wales, not necessarily (as in England) A&E departments.

Following the transfer of functions, this will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Clothing Industry

Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many jobs were (a) created and (b) lost in the clothing industry in Wales in the last 12 months. [82051]

Mr. Hain: The Welsh Office Record of Manufacturing Employment shows that since mid 1997, 900 jobs were created in the manufacture of textiles, apparel and dressing of fur and some 2,200 jobs lost.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

TREASURY

Stamp Duty

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much stamp duty and stamp duty reserve tax the Inland Revenue (a) received from managers or authorised corporate directors and (b) repaid to managers or authorised corporate directors, in connection with (i) dealings in the units of unit trust schemes and OEICS and (ii) dealings in the units of unauthorised unit trusts, over the last three financial years; and how much he anticipates it will receive and repay in the first full year of operation of the new SORT regime announced in Budget Day press release IR17. [R] [79347]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 30 March 1999]: Estimated total gross receipts, repayments and net receipts of Stamp Duty from trading in units of unit trusts and in OEIC shares are shown in the table. The available information does not distinguish between authorised unit trusts, unauthorised unit trusts, and OEICS.

£ million

Stamp duty receipts	Gross receipts[1]	Repayments[2]	Net receipts
1996–97	61	27	34
1997–98	81	43	38
1998–99
First half year	90	60	30
Second half year	83	76	7
Total 1998–99	173	136	37

[1] Including Stamp Duty liabilities presented to the Stamp Office with matching claims for refunds.
[2] Including the matching refund claims as described in the footnote above.

Receipts of Stamp Duty Reserve Tax under the Budget proposals to replace the current Stamp Duty regime will depend on the future volume of trading in units of unit trusts and in OEIC shares. The new system is designed to be more straightforward to administer and to pave the way for electronic trading of units, while maintaining a broadly consistent approach between dealings in units and dealings in shares. Total tax liabilities under the new system should be broadly similar to the overall net liabilities that would arise from applying the principles underlying the current rules—under which Stamp Duty is charged on surrenders to trust managers and refunds made to avoid a double charge when, as a consequence, the units are cancelled and corresponding amounts of the trust's underlying assets are sold.

Endowment Policies

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with the Financial Services Authority and the Personal Investment Authority to ensure that policy-holders surrendering endowment policies are informed of the existence of the traded endowment market. [83100]

Ms Hewitt: None. However, the Treasury keeps under review the case for extending the scope of the Financial Services Act 1986 to include all dealings in traded endowment policies. I am not yet persuaded that the benefits of doing so would outweigh the costs.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of (a) the number of consumers who have lost money as a result of surrendering their endowment policies rather than trading them on the open market in each of the last 10 years and (b) how much money has been lost by consumers surrendering their endowment policies rather than trading them on the open market in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [83099]

Ms Hewitt: No such estimates have been made. The traded endowment market is small. Prices offered for second hand endowment policies are tending to converge with surrender values.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to accept the recommendations contained in the Office of Fair Trading report, "Vulnerable Consumers and Financial Services", in respect of traded endowment policies. [83101]

Ms Hewitt: None of the recommendations relates to traded endowment policies.

Petrol Prices

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the average retail price of petrol per litre in each member country of the European Union in (a) 1993 and (b) 1995. [82942]

Ms Hewitt: The average retail prices of petrol in each country of the European Union for the years 1993 and 1995 are published in the DETR publication, Transport Statistics Great Britain 1998 Edition, Table 8.8 (a).

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the oral statement by the Economic Secretary on 27 April 1999, Official Report, column 242, relating to the price of petrol in European Union member states in 1993, if he will publish the statistics referred to. [82943]

Ms Hewitt: The figures referred to were part of a table, based on OECD data, compiled by the House of Commons Library and were as follows:

Petrol and diesel prices in the European Community: Retail prices per litre

	Petrol 1993 Q3	Diesel 1993 Q3
Belgium	0.63	0.38
Denmark	0.56	0.32
France	0.64	0.36
Germany	0.60	0.36
Greece	0.54	0.32
Ireland	0.56	0.41
Italy	0.69	0.44
Luxembourg	0.51	0.32
Netherlands	0.71	0.38
Portugal	0.61	0.39
Spain	0.54	0.36
United Kingdom	0.55	0.42

I regret that I inadvertently misinterpreted the data relating to petrol prices in the exchanges across the floor of the House on 27 April. I am writing to the hon. Member in full clarification and will place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Maintenance Payments

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the treatment of maintenance payments for income tax, working family tax credit and disabled tax credit purposes. [81725]

Dawn Primarolo: Recipients of payments under maintenance arrangements set up on or after 15 March 1988 are not taxable on the payments they receive.

There are different rules for those with maintenance arrangements set up before 15 March 1988. Recipients are taxable on the payments they receive, save that a former wife or husband is not taxable on the first slice of payments up to the level of the married couple's allowance.

From 6 April 2000, people receiving payments under pre 15 March 1988 arrangements will no longer be taxable on them.

For WFTC and DPTC, maintenance payments received by an applicant will be fully disregarded for the purposes of calculating their income in assessing entitlement to WFTC and DPTC.

Lower Earnings Limit

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of (a) men and (b) women working (i) less than 16 hours and (ii) 16 hours or more and receiving an income below the lower earnings limit. [82700]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 4 May 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on earnings.

The latest estimates available from the UK Labour Force Survey are for the winter 1998–99 (ie December 1998—February 1999) quarter and are shown in the table below. The lower earnings threshold for Class 1 National Insurance contributions in the 1998–99 tax year was £64 per week.

Employees earning less than £64 a week, by total usual weekly hours[1] of work and sex. United Kingdom, winter 1998–99, not seasonally adjusted

Thousands

Usual weekly hours	All	Men	Women
Less than 16 hours a week	1,792	393	1,399
16 or more hours a week	642	184	457
All employees earning less than £64 a week[2]	2,456	590	1,866

Private Pensions

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the regulation requiring the conversion of private pensions, on maturity, to annuities. [82717]

Ms Hewitt: The purpose of private pension schemes is to provide an income throughout their members' retirement. So pension schemes that cannot themselves guarantee payment of lifetime pensions provide this security by buying annuities.

Bank Charges

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what evidence his Department has evaluated of the charging practices of United Kingdom high street banks with particular reference to small business customers. [81647]

Ms Hewitt: None at present, though the relationship between the high street banks and small business is one of the issues on which the Banking Review led by Don Cruickshank will be seeking evidence as part of their wider review of the levels of innovation, competition and efficiency in the United Kingdom banking market.

Literacy Skills

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 21 April 1999, Official Report, column 587, on literacy skills, when he expects comparable figures for later years to be available. [82189]

Mr. Mudie: I have been asked to reply.

There are currently no specific plans to repeat the International Adult Literacy Survey in Britain. The Government are considering "A Fresh Start", the recent report about adult basic skills by Sir Claus Moser. As part of that work we will consider how best to measure levels of literacy and numeracy in the future. This could involve participation in the International Life Skills Survey, which includes a literacy and numeracy element, and is planned to take place in 2001.

Training for Work

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for the future of Training for Work. [82162]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 26 April 1999]: I have been asked to reply.

Training for Work is now known in England as Work Based Learning for Adults (WBLA). The key objective of the programme is to help long-term unemployed people to move into sustained employment by boosting their skills.

A recently published evaluation study shows that clients who participated in the programme spent an average of around 50 per cent. more time in work over the first 18 months after training than others with similar characteristics who did not.

In the light of this, we have allocated a budget of £328 million this year for WBLA in England. This is sufficient to provide opportunities for over 100,000 adults over 25. We have also extended the help available for disabled people and those with basic skills needs.

My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales have separate responsibilities for adult training and programmes. These are operated along broadly similar lines to those in England.

HEALTH

Diabetes

4. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to publish a national service framework for patients with diabetes. [81811]

Mr. Hutton: We plan to publish National Service Framework for diabetes in Spring 2001.

Patient Services

18. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to widen the range of services available within GPs' surgeries and primary care centres. [81826]

Mr. Denham: We are committed to modernising the National Health Service and have introduced new arrangements to give patients improved access, convenience and improved range and quality of services. These schemes include Primary Care Groups, Primary Care Trusts, Personal Medical Service Pilots, Local Development Schemes, Health Improvement Programmes, Health Action Zones and NHS Primary Care Walk-in Centres.

Organophosphates

19. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate his Department has made of the number of people currently suffering from the toxic effects of exposure to organophosphate compounds; and if he will make a statement. [81827]

Ms Jowell: Organophosphate compounds are used in many different ways; principally as veterinary medicines and pesticides. There are adverse reactions schemes relating to these products and figures of reported past incidents are published annually. It would not be possible from these data to asses the number who are currently suffering.

Renal Services

20. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the provision of renal services in Lancashire and South Lakeland; and what expenditure per head is planned (a) in this area and (b) nationally over the next three years. [81828]

Mr. Hutton: Funds for specific services are not separately identified either nationally or within individual Health Authority or NHS Trust allocations. I can confirm, however, that the four health authorities in Lancashire and South Cumbria, working in collaboration with the NHS Executive North West, have identified capital investment of £1 million and revenue spending of about £1 million for next year, to provide 15 new dialysis stations which are expected to be in place by the spring of next year.

NHS Consultants

21. Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to address the discrepancies between the number of accredited specialists in several medical and surgical specialties and the number of consultant posts available in the NHS. [81829]

Mr. Denham: We intend to improve National Health Service workforce planning processes. We are studying the Health Committee's Report on Future NHS Staffing Requirements. Our proposals for further action will be published in due course.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to encourage cross-disciplinary working between consultants in NHS hospitals; and if he will make a statement. [81809]

Mr. Denham: The Government's main concern is to ensure that National Health Service patients receive the best quality medical care. The arrangements for clinical governance make it clear that quality is everyone's business and can be delivered only through effective team-working involving all health professionals. We want trusts to pursue optimum flexibility to meet local needs.

NHS Direct

22. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the level of impact of the creation of NHS Direct on the recruitment and retention of nurses in the community and in hospitals. [81830]

Mr. Denham: NHS Direct has recruited nurses from many sources including the private sector. NHS Direct offers an exciting new career opportunity for nurses, which the Government believe will help to retain nurses in the National Health Service.

23. Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase the range of services available through NHS Direct. [81831]

Mr. Denham: In April, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced that NHS Direct will develop in six new ways: to provide integrated out of hours access to other services; to develop an outreach service for people who may need help or advice; to introduce an online service to other health information; to provide a range of public access points for NHS Direct; to produce a new healthcare guide and a related healthcare education programme. These new services which will be developed and piloted in coming months provide further evidence of this Government's commitment to modernise the National Health Service.

Contraceptive Pill

24. Kali Mountford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice his Department plans to issue to young women about the long-term health effects of the contraceptive pill. [81832]

Ms Jowell: Information on the risks and benefits of the Pill are given in the information provided to doctors and patients by pharmaceutical companies, the Family Planning Association and the Contraceptive Education Service. Millions of women around the world use oral contraception and there is abundant evidence that taking the Pill appropriately poses less risk to healthy women than pregnancy itself.

Toxic Waste

25. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what health advice his Department issues to people who live near toxic waste tips, with particular reference to pregnant women; and if he will make a statement. [81833]

Ms Jowell: The Department does not consider that current evidence shows that landfill sites taking hazardous waste pose a risk to the health of people living nearby. However, the Government recognise the concern caused by recent reports of an association between birth defects and landfill sites and has commissioned research to investigate this further.

Caesarian Births

26. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the impact of the "Changing Childbirth" Government document on the role of midwives and the level of Caesarian births. [81834]

Mr. Hutton: The Department has made no formal assessment. However, information on elective and emergency caesarean section deliveries by Health Authority and individual hospitals is set out for the first time in the statistical bulletin "NHS Maternity Statistics, England: 1989/90 to 1994–95". This information has strengthened the local audit process. A copy of the bulletin is available in the Library. On the role of midwives, we know from Changing Childbirth pilot project reports that there has been a significant change in midwives' working patterns in both hospitals and the community to ensure that women receive continuity of care in their preferred environment whenever possible.

NHS Dentistry

27. Mr. Beard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the availability of, and access to, national health service dentistry. [81836]

Mr. Denham: The Government are aware of the existence of problems of access to National Health dental services in some parts of the country, particularly in some rural areas, which we inherited from the previous administration, and which we have taken positive steps to address through the Investing in Dentistry and Personal Dental Services initiatives.

NHS Staff

28. Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to improve the health of NHS staff. [81837]

Mr. Denham: The National Health Service Executive has produced a wide range of guidance and examples of good practice covering every aspect of improving the health of all staff working in the NHS. Virtually all NHS staff have access to an occupational health service.

NHS Superannuation

29. Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the total cost to the health service of the proposed changes in NHS superannuation. [81839]

Mr. Denham: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave the right hon. Member for Maidstone and The Weald (Miss Widdecombe) on 26 April 1999, Official Report, column 28.

Healthy Living Centres

30. Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made with the establishment of Healthy Living Centres. [81840]

Ms Jowell: The Healthy Living Centre initiative was launched on 29 January 1999. The initiative is being administered by the New Opportunities Fund from £300 million of Lottery money. The application process is underway. The New Opportunities Fund hopes to announce the first successful applicants later this year.

Osteoporosis

31. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his Department intends to publish clinical guidelines on the prevention and treatment of osteoporosis. [81841]

32. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to publish clinical guidelines on osteoporosis prevention and treatment. [81842]

Ms Jowell: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Selly Oak (Dr. Jones) on 27 April 1999, Official Report, column 101.

Primary Care Groups

33. Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost to the NHS of new information systems for primary care groups in the years (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02. [81843]

Mr. Denham: £20 million has been allocated to health authorities in 1999–2000 from the modernisation fund to support the initial information technology and informatics needs of primary care groups (PCGs).

No new information systems have been provided centrally to PCGs. Information management and technology guidance issued to PCGs in March 1999 established that the short term information needs of the PCGs would require them to make the best use of existing information systems and analytical skills.

PFI

34. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the long-term implications for the health service of the use of the private finance initiative for major capital projects. [81844]

Mr. Denham: An assessment of the long term costs of providing facilities funded by the private finance initiative is made in the Full Business Case. Approval is only given if the scheme demonstrates value for money to the tax payer.

Child Abuse

35. Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he intends to take to ensure more effective liaison between health services and other agencies to tackle child abuse. [81845]

Mr. Hutton: The Government are producing new guidance on inter-agency working to protect children, and have made children's welfare a national priority for both the National Health Service and social services. New partnership provisions have been included in the Health Bill to make it easier for the NHS and local government to work together, and the Government have issued a discussion document "Partnership in Action" to consider how to improve joint working in general.

Eye and Dental Checks

36. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to introduce universal free eye and dental checks. [81846]

Mr. Denham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam (Mr. Burstow).

Ambulances (Mental Patients)

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many times ambulance staff were involved in conveying people to hospital under the Mental Health Act 1983 in 1998; [79680]

(2) what costs were incurred by the Ambulance Service in assisting in the conveying of people to hospital under the Mental Health Act 1983 in 1998. [79681]

Mr. Hutton: No central records are held that would enable determination of how many times ambulance services convey patients to hospital under the Mental Health Act 1983. Nor is there any requirement for ambulance services to keep local records of this sort.

Psychiatric Services

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of patients treated by the psychiatric sector of the NHS for the last five years; and if he will give a breakdown by ethnicity. [80661]

Mr. Hutton: Information on ethnicity available centrally is not currently of sufficient quality to publish reliable national figures. We are working with the National Health Service to improve the quality of the data and will publish the results when reliable estimates are available.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has any plans to introduce a chief officer rank for the Ambulance Service; and if he will make a statement. [80760]

Mr. Hutton: Ambulance service ranks, including the title of chief officer, are matters for individual ambulance National Health Service trusts. There are no plans to alter this.

Women (Safety)

Ms Beverley Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government have to tackle the problems of (a) sexual harassment and (b) women's safety in public places. [81711]

Ms Jowell: The Government take the issue of sexual harassment and women's safety in public places very seriously.

In employment law it is well established that sexual harassment constitutes a form of detriment under the Sex Discrimination Act 1975. In addition an Equal Opportunities Commission Code of Practice includes recommendations on how employers can prevent sexual harassment. The Department for Education and Employment has also published leaflets for employers and employees on how to deal with the issue.

In criminal law, the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 makes it an offence for a person to pursue a course of conduct that they know, or ought to have known, causes another harassment. It carries a maximum sentence of six months imprisonment. A person found guilty of this offence can be made the subject of a restraining order which will prohibit further harassment.

Under section 4A of the Public Order Act 1986 (inserted by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994) it is an offence intentionally to behave in a way which is likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress. In addition, section 5 of the 1986 Act makes it an offence to behave in a way which is likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress, even when no intent is involved.

On women's safety in public places, the booklet "Your Practical Guide to Crime Prevention" published in 1998 and available from police crime prevention officers, includes advice to women on minimising the risk of assault.

In a statement to the House on 16 March 1999, Official Report, columns 902–14, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary gave details of an additional £150 million being allocated over 3 years to boost crime prevention in areas to which the public have access and where crime is highest. This will help improve women's safety in public places.

The Government are publishing a document in June which will cover all forms of violence against women.

Departmental Legal Business

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his Department's policy when (a) conducting legal proceedings and (b) seeking legal advice as to the circumstances in which Queen's Counsel should be instructed; and for each of the last three years (i) on how many occasions his Department instructed Queen's Counsel and (ii) what was the total cost of instructing Queen's Counsel. [81762]

Mr. Denham: The Department does use Queen's Counsel in the conduct of its litigation. They are used for important and complex cases. For the remaining cases the Department's position would be as stated in the reply given to my hon. Friend by my right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General on 26 April 1999, Official Report, columns 1–2. Approval for off panel counsel is sought from the Attorney-General as necessary.

Information on the number of occasions in the last three years on which the Department has instructed Queen's Counsel could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Buprenorphine

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the methadone substitute buprenorphine will be available on prescription in the UK. [82556]

Mr. Denham: Three medicinal products, Subutex 0.4mg sublingual tablets, Subutex 2mg sublingual tablets and Subutex 8mg sublingual tablets, containing buprenorphine were granted marketing authorisations on 21 December 1998. The indications for these authorisations are "Substitution treatment for opioid dependence, within a framework of medical, social and psychological treatment".

Chronic Fatigue Syndrome

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies his Department has (i) commissioned and (ii) evaluated on sufferers from chronic fatigue syndrome/myalgic encephalomyelitis, with particular reference to the proportion who eventually return to (a) full-time employment and (b) part-time employment. [82653]

Mr. Hutton: We have not commissioned or evaluated any studies that specifically look at the proportion of people with chronic fatigue syndrome/myalgic encephalomyelitis who eventually return to full-time or part-time employment. The main agency through which the Government support medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council. The Council is always willing to consider new ideas for research and will consider applications on their scientific merits.

The CFS/ME Working Group which began meeting in January this year will also look at the need to identify and commission further research.

Housing Conditions

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many press releases his Department has issued publicising action taken by health authorities to prevent illness caused by cold and damp housing; and on what dates they were issued; [82748]

(2) what guidance he has issued to health authorities on ways in which they may promote or assist with schemes to prevent illness caused by cold and damp housing; [82747]

(3) if he will list the health authorities which are currently assisting or promoting schemes to prevent illness caused by cold and damp homes; and if he will make a statement on his policy towards such schemes. [82753]

Ms Jowell: The Department has issued no such press releases. In terms of guidance in this area, the Department has issued a joint Health Service/Local Authority Circular to the National Health Service and local government on the introduction of Health Improvement Programmes (HImPs). HImPs provide the framework for health authorities to bring together all local players to assess local health needs, identify what needs to be done to address national and local priorities and agree how each can contribute. Through this process, health authorities will develop comprehensive local programmes to tackle the wider determinants of ill health, of which cold and damp housing is one. The Department is aware of a number of projects where health authorities and local agencies have taken joint action to tackle ill health exacerbated by cold and damp housing, although no central record is kept of all such schemes. The Government welcome such projects as positive examples of the kind of joint working at the local level that HImPs are designed to establish.

Ward Closures

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the community hospitals where one or more wards have closed since 1 May 1997, indicating the date of each closure; [82758]

(2) if he will list the community hospitals where there have been bed closures since 1 May 1997, indicating the date and number of beds closed in each instance; [82757]

(3) if he will list each community hospital where closure of one or more wards has been agreed but has not yet taken place, indicating the proposed date of closure in each instance; [82759]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 30 April 1999]: Information is not collected centrally about beds or wards at hospital level. Data on beds by ward type are collected annually from National Health Service trusts and are published in Bed Availability and Occupancy, 1997–98, copies of which are available in the Library.

Warminster Hospital

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he will reply to the letter of 23 March from the hon. Member for Westbury concerning Ward 2 at Warminster Hospital; [82760]

(2) in what official capacity his Parliamentary Private Secretary met representatives of Warminster Hospital on 21 April; and if he will make a statement; [82762]

(3) if he will list the representations he has received from (a) public bodies and (b) members of the public concerning the proposed closure of Ward 2 at Warminster Hospital; [82764]

(4) what representations he has received from (a) officials of the General and Municipal Boilerworkers Union and (b) Bath and District Community Health Council concerning the proposed closure of Ward 2 at Warminster Hospital; [82761]

(5) what discussions he has had with the Wiltshire Health Authority concerning the proposed closure of Ward 2 at Warminster Hospital; [82763]

(6) if he will meet the hon. Member for Westbury and representatives of Warminster Hospital to discuss the proposed closure of Ward 2. [82765]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 30 April 1999]: I will be replying to the hon. Member shortly and am giving consideration to his request for a meeting. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received 52 letters concerning the closure of Ward 2 at Warminster Hospital. One of these was from Warminster Town Council, the remainder were from members of the public. No representations have been received from the General, Municipal and Boilerworkers Union or the Bath and District Community Health Council. In addition there have been 319 standard letters received on this matter from members of the public.

My right hon. Friend has had no discussions with Wiltshire Health Authority about the closure of Ward 2 at Warminster Hospital.

My right hon. Friend's Parliamentary Private Secretary, my hon. Friend the Member for Brentford and Isleworth (Ann Keen), met with a GMB sponsored delegation in her capacity as Secretary to the GMB group of members.

Gloucestershire Health Authority

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the percentage of the settlement for Gloucestershire health authority which will be used to fund the pay award for 1999–2000. [82766]

Mr. Denham: [holding answer 30 April 1999]: 35.8 per cent. of the 1999–2000 increase in financial allocation for Gloucestershire health authority will be required to fund the pay review body awards for 1999–2000.

GM Foods

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the recent report, commissioned by the Government, on the potential health risks of genetically modified foods; if he will place a copy in the Library; and if he will make a statement. [83136]

Ms Jowell: The Chief Medical Officer and the Chief Scientific Adviser were commissioned to prepare a paper on the public health implications of genetically modified foods and this was considered by a recent meeting of the Cabinet Committee on Biotechnology and Genetic Modification. The paper considers how genetic modification is used in the production of food; the theoretical risks that may arise from the introduction of GM foods in the diet and an assessment of the likelihood that these may become real problems.

The draft paper is not yet completed. Work is still being undertaken on it, including the recommendations.

When the paper has been finalised it will be published and copies will be placed in the Library.

South-west Health Authorities

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the expenditure plans for each health authority in the south west region, indicating those authorities that are making reductions in service; and by how much. [82776]

Mr. Denham: The financial plans of health authorities for the financial year 1999–2000 have not yet been finalised.

Long-term Care

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to set out the Government's proposed course of action following the report of the Royal Commission on long-term care. [82657]

Mr. Hutton: While the Commission has been sitting, work has already taken place in many of the areas which their report highlights, such as developing a national strategy for carers and the extension of the direct payments scheme to people aged 65 and over. Where the Commission is recommending new policies for the future, these proposals will require more detailed consideration over the coming months.

NHS Pay Review

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the pay increases for 1999–2000 agreed by Her Majesty's Government following the NHS Pay Review Body recommendations were included in April salary payments to staff; and if he will make a statement. [83140]

Mr. Denham: The Advanced Letters promulgating the pay increases for 1999–2000 were issued to the National Health Service on 12 March 1999 for hospital doctors and dentists, and on 8 April 1999 for nursing staff, midwives, health visitors and professions allied to medicine. It is for NHS employers to implement the new payscales as quickly as possible and some employees have received the pay increases in their April salary. In some trusts this has not been possible but payment will be backdated to 1 April.

Patient Nutrition

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make it his policy to require hospitals to draw up nutritional plans for patients as part of their clinical management; [82770]

(2) what action he is taking to raise awareness of the nutritional needs of patients among NHS trust managers; and if he will ensure that the National Institute for Clinical Excellence develops nutritional standards for hospital nutrition. [82771]

Ms Jowell: Clinical governance is central to the clinical care of patients, and will cover issues such as hygiene and nutrition where they have a direct impact on clinical outcomes. The current Patients' Charter includes standards about food in hospitals. Consideration is being given to how these can be taken forward in the new National Health Service Charter, enabling all aspects of nutritional care to be included in the quality agenda.

Standards of nutrition will not be set by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence. NICE will set clear quality standards which will help the NHS by providing information on clinical decision making and best practice and by ensuring that patients have faster access to effective modern treatments.

Long-term Locums

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on developing an accreditation system for doctors who are long-term locums; and if he will make a statement. [82769]

Mr. Denham: The Audit Commission recommended an accreditation system for long-term locum doctors in its report "Cover Story: the use of locum doctors in NHS trusts" which was published on 21 April.

We are committed to quality assurance and support for all doctors, not just locums. We have already confirmed our support for the General Medical Council's proposals. These will require all doctors to demonstrate that they remain fit to practise in their chosen field, whether employed in a substantive or a locum post in hospitals or general practice. This will be achieved by a process of revalidation of each doctor's GMC registration. The GMC has identified locum doctors as a specific group to which it will need to pay particular attention. We will be working closely with the GMC over the next two years as these proposals are developed.

The Audit Commission makes clear that full and consistent implementation of our "Code of Practice" by trusts will help to assure the appointment, management and quality of locum doctors. We will be looking very carefully at the Audit Commission's findings and their recommendations to see whether we need to take further action to encourage implementation of our Code and whether any changes are required.

Nurses (East Sussex)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about NHS staffing levels for nurses in East Sussex. [81838]

Mr. Denham: Since the beginning of April we have received representations from the hon. Members for Eastbourne (Mr. Waterson) and for Lewes (Mr. Baker), and also the Group Editor of the Eastbourne Herald and the Eastbourne Gazette about National Health Service staffing levels for nurses in East Sussex.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people claimed incapacity benefit directly after a period of work, or after a period receiving statutory sick pay, in 1998–99; and of these, how many would not qualify for incapacity benefit under the Government's proposed changes to the contribution conditions. [82695]

Mr. Bayley: Figures for 1998–99 are not yet available. For 1997–98, information on the employment status of claimants is available but is not yet correlated with details of their contributions records.

In 1996–97, the number of new claims for Incapacity Benefit where the employment status was shown as either employed or self employed was 357,000; of these 236,100 came directly from employment and 120,900 after receiving Statutory Sick Pay.

20.7 per cent. of these claims failed to qualify for Incapacity Benefit because they did not meet the current contribution conditions. Had the proposed new contribution conditions applied, 28.5 per cent. of them would not have qualified.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what data he has collated on the number of people receiving incapacity benefit who are capable of work; and what assessment he has made of the implications of this for the reform of the all work test. [82720]

Mr. Bayley: In order to qualify for Incapacity Benefit a person must satisfy a test of incapacity for work, either for their own occupation, (in some cases, and in the shorter term), or under the All Work Test. This does not mean that people who satisfy the All Work Test are unable to do any work at all; it simply establishes that their incapacity is such that it would be unreasonable to expect them to seek work as a condition for getting benefit. In practice, many people who satisfy the All Work Test may be able to do some work if they have the right help and support. Survey evidence shows that around two million disabled people already work and over one million more would like to do so.

Measures in the Welfare Reform and Pensions Bill replace the All Work Test with the Personal Capability Assessment (PAC). The PCA will continue to assess the extent of people's incapacity in order to determine their benefit entitlement, using the same criteria as now. There will be no change in the way in which people qualify for benefit and there is no intention to tighten the gateway.

However, the PCA will also be able to provide information about what a person is capable of doing, despite their medical condition. This information can then be used by Personal Advisers to help them provide the support which disabled people need if they want to return to work.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people a year he estimates will lose entitlement to incapacity benefit as a result of the changes provided for in the Welfare Reform and Pensions Bill; and what proportion will be entitled to income support. [82722]

Mr. Bayley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my right hon. Friend the Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 22 February 1999, Official Report, column 169.

Benefits Agency

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of total payroll for Benefits Agency staff is paid as performance-related pay. [82568]

Angela Eagle: Since 1995 all pay increases have been performance related. Information on the proportion of the total payroll that is paid as performance-related pay is available only at disproportionate cost. To obtain such information would involve looking at each individual member of staff's starting date, pay records, and performance appraisal markings.

Anti-fraud Staff

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many dedicated anti-fraud staff there are in (a) the Benefits Agency and (b) the Child Support Agency. [82696]

Mr. Timms: All staff in both Agencies have a vital role to play in reducing fraud and error. In addition, the Benefits Agency has two specialist fraud investigation teams, the Benefit Fraud Investigation Service and the Benefits Agency Security Investigation Service, with 5,472 staff in total. The Child Support Agency has fraud liaison officers who refer cases where fraud is suspected to the Benefit Fraud Investigation Service.

Jobseekers

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what proportion of jobseekers who have been unemployed for (a) one year, (b) two years and (c) five or more years and who return to work become unemployed again after (1) less than 12 weeks and (2) more than 12 weeks but less than 52 weeks; [82634]

(2) what proportion of jobseekers who have been unemployed for (a) one year, (b) two years and (c) five or more years and who subsequently return to work for more than 12 weeks but less than 52 weeks qualify for contributions-based jobseeker's allowance. [82633]

Angela Eagle: Information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

4. Figures are subject to the reliability of JSA termination codes
5. The proportion who qualify for JSA(C) on their return to benefit is based on the number of claimants in receipt of JSA(C) and those in receipt of income-based JSA who would also qualify through the contributory route.

Mortgage Interest Relief

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the costs of covering mortgage interest relief of income support claimants for each of the last 10 years. [82567]

Angela Eagle: The information is in the table. Income Support for the unemployed was replaced by income-based Jobseeker's Allowance from October 1996 and the figures are contained in a separate table.

Income Support/Supplementary Benefit cases in Great Britain with mortgage interest 1988–98

Income Support/Supplementary Benefit cases in Great Britain with mortgage interest 1996–1998

£ million

Year	Number of claimants	Estimated annual expenditure
1996–97	94,000	99
1997–98	67,000	144

Notes:

1. Figures are based on a 1 per cent. sample up to and including May 1993 and a 5 per cent. sample thereafter.
2. Figures for 1992–93 onwards are based on an average of payments and numbers of claimants in the inquiry week using an average of the four quarters of the financial year.
3. Figures prior to this are based on numbers and average amounts paid in May of each year.
4. Figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand, and the estimated annual expenditure is rounded to the nearest million pounds.
5. Prior to November 1995 figures on amounts of Income Support Mortgage Interest paid to claimants were published in the Quarterly Statistical Enquiry. From November 1995 onwards these have been replaced by figures on housing costs payable to claimants with mortgage interest payments. This change is due to alterations in Income Support rules and provides a more accurate reflection of the help actually provided to claimants under the housing cost rules. From 1992–93 onwards the estimates that have been used for this answer have been based on amounts of housing requirements payable to claimants with mortgage interest payments, and will include amounts for ground rent and other miscellaneous housing costs, although the majority of the amount is paid for mortgage interest. Figures prior to 1992–93 are not directly comparable with data after this date for this reason.
6. Income Support figures exclude the unemployed from October 1996, as Income Support for the unemployed was replaced by Income-based Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) from this point.
7. The February 1998 quarterly figure used in the annual 1997–98 JSA figure includes nil mortgage cases (i.e. cases with housing requirements only).
8. JSA estimated expenditure for 1996–97 represents a 6 month estimate from the introduction of income-based JSA, the 1997–98 is an annual estimate.

Girocheques

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will estimate the number of girocheques lost nationally every week; [82626]

(2) if he will estimate the number of Girobank benefit cheques reported lost each week. [82569]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available shows that there is an average of 7,263 girocheques reported as either not received, lost, stolen or destroyed, nationally each week.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of girocheques are cashed (a) in post offices and banks and (b) in shops which offer to cash cheques on the spot. [82625]

Mr. Timms: Of the total number of girocheques cashed, 93 per cent. are cashed at post offices and 7 per cent. are presented to banks or building societies for clearance. Information on the proportion of the latter, which have initially been cashed in shops which offer to cash cheques on the spot, is not available.

Angina Sufferers

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what criteria in relation to (a) the all work test and (b) incapacity benefit appeals determine entitlement to (i) benefit and (ii) fitness for work in the case of sufferers from angina; and how assessment is carried out. [82555]

Mr. Bayley: The All Work Test determines entitlement to all benefits which depend on incapacity for work, including Incapacity Benefit, Severe Disablement Allowance and Income Support paid on the basis of incapacity.

The test does not assess the condition itself but focuses on the effects of the condition on the person's ability to carry out a range of work related activities such as walking, lifting and carrying, vision and so on. Factors such as pain, fatigue and stress in carrying out the activities are taken into consideration. The test is satisfied when a set threshold of incapacity is reached.

Some people with specified severe conditions or disabilities (such as blindness) are automatically treated as "incapable of work" and are exempted from taking the all work test. Some people with angina may satisfy one of the conditions for exemption defined in legislation as a progressive impairment of cardio-respiratory function which severely and persistently limits effort tolerance. In some cases the adjudication officer will decide, in the light of medical advice, that the written evidence shows that the test is satisfied. Other claimants will need to undergo a medical examination in order to assess the level of their incapacity.

There are no separate criteria used by appeal tribunals.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of people aged under 25 years who have been affected by changes to the housing benefit rules introduced since May 1997. [82675]

Angela Eagle: The rules which restrict the amount of rent for Housing Benefit purposes for single young individuals aged under 25 years of age living in the private rented sector, were introduced in October 1996. As of May 1998 33,000 single young people aged under 25 were assessed under the Single Room Rent scheme. Of those, 10,000 were restricted to the single room rent.

PRIME MINISTER

Geneva Convention

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, what are the responsibilities of (a) the Home Office, (b) the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, (c) the Lord Chancellor's Department and (d) the Ministry of Defence for matters relating to the Geneva Convention. [83030]

The Prime Minister: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has overall responsibility for International Law including International Humanitarian Law, of which the Geneva Conventions of 1949 form a major component. It maintains close relations with the Red Cross movement including the International Committee of the Red Cross. The Ministry of Defence has responsibility for the application of International Humanitarian Law by the UK's armed forces. The Home Office is responsible for legislation implementing the Geneva Conventions and their Additional Protocols (1977), that is the Geneva Conventions Act (1957) as amended by the Geneva Conventions Amendment Act (1995). The Lord Chancellor's Department has no direct responsibility for the Geneva Convention.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Early Years Education

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to the oral answer to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) of 18 March 1999, Official Report, column 1257, on early years education, if he will provide a breakdown of the £8 billion of expenditure on pre-school education over the next three years. [83031]

Ms Hodge: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 23 March 1999, Official Report, columns 200–01.

New Deal (Young People)

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what factors led to people on the pilot of the New Deal for 18 to 24-year-olds remaining on the four month Gateway for over a year. [82573]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Earlier analysis of the small group of young people who are shown as being on the Gateway a year after they started New Deal indicates that the majority have had significant breaks from New Deal. Reasons for breaks include sickness and short-term employment; if a young person leaves the Gateway and subsequently returns within 13 weeks, they will re-enter the Gateway at the point which they left.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many employers have agreed to take on one or more subsidised employee from the New Deal for 18 to 24-year-olds in each month since January 1998; [82570]

(2) how many employers have agreed to take on their first subsidised employee from the New Deal for 18 to 24-year-olds in each month since January 1998. [82571]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Information about the number of employees taken on by any one employer is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

However, when agreeing to take on at least one New Deal employee the employer will give their commitment by signing a New Deal Employer Agreement. They are included in the following table showing the number of New Deal Agreements signed each month since January 1998.

Month	Number of employer agreements signed
	In month	Cumulative
January 1998	858	—
February 1998	1,010	1,868
March 1998	2,426	4,294
April 1998	5,034	9,328
May 1998	5,347	14,675
June 1998	4,237	18,912
July 1998	3,267	22,179
August 1998	3,467	25,646
September 1998	3,419	29,065
October 1998	3,850	32,915
November 1998	2,476	35,391
December 1998	4,447	39,838
January 1999	2,159	41,997
February 1999	2,350	44,347
March 1999	2,610	46,957

The in-month figure for December 1998 included retrospectively amended data

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for the most recent period for which figures are available the proportions of (i) black and ethnic minority and (ii) white participants in the New Deal for Young People programme at (a) national, (b) London and South East Region and (c) Hammersmith and Fulham/Kensington and Chelsea levels, who have (1) joined the Gateway, (2) remained in the Gateway for four months or more, (3) moved into sustained employment and (4) left the New Deal with no known destination. [82745]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The information set out in table 1 shows the number of young people who have joined New Deal since January 1998, the proportion of them moving into sustained employment and the proportion who have left New Deal with an unknown destination for each of the areas requested, up to the end of February 1999.

Table 2 shows the proportion of young people who remained on the Gateway for more than four months. This information is drawn from the latest available cohort who joined New Deal in October 1998.

Table 1

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action he is taking to (a) identify and (b) track the clients leaving the New Deal for Young People; and if he will make a statement. [82736]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The destinations of young people leaving New Deal are identified and reported in the New Deal Statistical First Release published monthly.

Clients who leave New Deal with an unknown destination are followed through regular monthly surveys to ascertain their destination. In addition, as part of the ongoing evaluation of New Deal, surveys of samples of leavers will be carried out to collect more detailed information about their activities and experiences.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment the Government have made of the relative merits of using (a) off-flows from the claimant count in the target category and (b) an absolute fall in the unemployment count in the target category, to measure the Government's progress in meeting its targets for the new deal for young people; and if he will make a statement. [81749]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Both these measures will be used as part of the comprehensive evaluation of the effect of New Deal on the labour market. However, our full assessment also includes the use of a range of performance measures such as movement from welfare into employment and whether that employment is sustained, its success amongst people with disabilities and people from ethnic minority backgrounds, the level of satisfaction of both participants and employers and improvement in skill levels.

Wirral Metropolitan College

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will publish the terms of the retirement package for the recently retired principal of Wirral Metropolitan College. [82309]

Mr. Mudie: The retirement package for the former Principal of Wirral Metropolitan College provides her with the pension benefits she would have received if she worked until the age of 60. This means that her eligible service was enhanced by just over five years.

Departmental Legal Business

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on his Department's policy when (a) conducting legal proceedings and (b) seeking legal advice as to the circumstances in which Queen's Counsel should be instructed; and for each of the last three years (i) on how many occasions his Department instructed Queen's Counsel and (ii) what was the total cost of instructing Queen's Counsel. [81757]

Mr. Mudie: The Department for Education and Employment, through the Treasury Solicitor's Department, predominately uses junior counsel when it is necessary to instruct counsel to provide legal advice or to conduct legal proceedings.

In civil cases, the two First Treasury Counsel are both junior counsel and they will advise and represent the government without a Queen's Counsel in many of its important cases. In addition, the Attorney-General maintains four panels of junior Counsel whom the Department for Education and Employment, as other departments, is expected to use for the majority of its civil litigation. The approval of the Attorney-General or the Solicitor-General is required before a Queen's Counsel can be instructed to appear for any government department in civil litigation.

In determining the level of counsel to use, the Department will consider the individual circumstances of each case. It will take into account, inter alia, the importance and sensitivity of the case, the complexity of the law, the weight and complexity of the evidence, and the degree of experience and expertise required before deciding whether to instruct Queen's Counsel or junior counsel.

The Department for Education and Employment instructed three Queen's Counsel in 1996–97, seven in 1997–98 and two in 1998–99. The total cost of instructing Queen's Counsel for each of the last three years was £9,212.00 in 1996–97, £14,617.00 in 1997–98 and £2,878.75 in 1998–99.

Nelson Thomlinson School

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make an order under sections 496 and 497 of the Education Act 1996 requiring Nelson Thomlinson school of Wigton,, pursuant to section 411 of the Education Act 1996, to admit a pupil whose name has been communicated to the Minister by the hon. Member for Workington. [82630]

Ms Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is minded to make a direction to require the governors of Nelson Thomlinson School to admit the child concerned and his position is unchanged despite the additional representations which have been submitted by the governing body in support of their case for refusing admission. Nevertheless, before my right hon. Friend reaches a final decision on whether to use his powers to make a direction, he has asked the local education authority to arrange a meeting at the earliest opportunity between the parents and governors to try to reconcile the differences which have led to the child being refused admission. My right hon. Friend considers that the interest of the child would be served best if this could be achieved. In that event, he expects the child to be admitted to the school shortly. If, however, reconciliation cannot be achieved, and the child is still not admitted, my right hon. Friend will reach a speedy decision on whether to issue a direction to the governing body. I will be writing to my hon. Friend again to inform him of the outcome.

New Deal

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to improve the performance of the private sector-led units of delivery under the New Deal programme; and if he will make a statement. [82737]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Employment Service is developing a comprehensive strategy for the continuous improvement of the New Deal throughout Great Britain, including those Units of Delivery led by the private sector. That is based on comparisons between Units of Delivery against a set of Core Performance Measures.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 5 May 1999

HOME DEPARTMENT

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 17 March 1999, Official Report, column 665, on special advisers, if he will give the total travel cost of each occasion when (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity since 2 May 1997 and the place visited. [82411]

Mr. Straw: For the period 2 May 1997 to 27 April 1999, Special Advisers in my Department have travelled overseas in an official capacity on two occasions to Brussels and once to Washington. The total cost of travel and any hotel accommodation for the visits to Brussels was £433.00. The cost of the visit to Washington was accounted for in the answer given by the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Lichfield (Mr. Fabricant) on 13 March 1998, Official Report, columns 366–67. Because of the block booking arrangements, the cost per person for travel was £3,500. All travel complied with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

Deaths (Police Custody)

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date he received the report of the European Committee for the Prevention of Torture relating to the handling of deaths in police custody; and when he has to respond. [82650]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My hon. Friend may be referring to the report by the European Committee on the Prevention of Torture on its visit to the United Kingdom and the Isle of Man in September 1997.

We received the Committee's report in April 1998. The Government forwarded a response in October 1998.

Fire Brigades (Millennium Compliance)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the fire brigades to whose millennium computer preparedness the recent study by Action 2000 drew attention. [82819]

Mr. George Howarth: The results of independent assessments conducted by Her Majesty's Fire Service Inspectorate up to 12 April were reported to the Action 2000 National Infrastructure Forum on 21 April. The latest position is that 45 out of 49 brigades in England and Wales have so far been assessed. Of these, 22 are classified as prepared, and 23 have been given an Action Plan. All are expected to be prepared by September. It is not my intention to name individual brigades at this stage.

Coroners

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the syllabus of the programme of training courses organised by his Department for coroners and details of the attendees in each of the past five years. [82699]

Mr. George Howarth: The Home Office courses have contained lectures on the following subjects:

judicial reviews
pre-inquest hearings dealing with juries summing up and verdicts
coroners and criminal law the Attorney-General and the coroner the role of the pathologist post mortems histopathology forensic pathology paediatric pathology toxicology hospital deaths mesothelioma and associated respiratory diseases industrial diseases disaster management accident reconstruction coroners: the Home Office role computerising coroner records
Home Office statistics the role of the coroner's officer the coroner and the media
the Mental Health Act 1983
the Treasure Act 1996 death registration.

Since 1995, some 220 coroners and their deputies have attended Home Office-organised courses. The figures for 1994 are no longer available.

Proxy Voting

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to complete his review of proxy voting. [82848]

Mr. George Howarth: The Working Party on Electoral Procedures which I am chairing has been examining both proxy and postal voting along with other electoral issues. I expect to present the Working Party's final report to the Home Secretary in the late summer.

Sexual Offences (Anonymity)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will assess the (a) benefits and (b) disadvantages of granting anonymity to defendants in actions for (i) rape and (ii) other sexual offences. [82856]

Mr. Boateng: The Government have no plans to review this area of the law, which reflects the position that, in accordance with the principles of open justice, the press should be able to report the identity of all defendants. By virtue of their right to control proceedings in court, judges have an inherent power to impose reporting restrictions in exceptional circumstances where there is good reason and it is in the interests of justice.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is his Department's estimate of the number of animals used in experiments in (a) 1996, (b) 1997 and (c) 1998; [82910]

(2) in how many facilities in the United Kingdom animal experiments are permitted to take place; [83006]

(3) how many project licences were issued in (a) 1996, (b) 1997 and (c) 1998 for animal experiments. [82909]

Mr. George Howarth: Information on the use of animals in scientific procedures is published each year in the Statistics of Scientific Procedures on Living Animals. Table 1a gives details of the number of animals used. In 1996, the total was 2,646,026 and, in 1997, it was 2,573,088.

Figures for animal use during 1998 are being collated and will be published in July.

Scientific procedures must normally be carried out at designated establishments. The Annual Reports of the Animal Procedures Committee 1996 and 1997 list the numbers of such establishments and also give the number of project licences issued. They show that:

300 certificates of designation were in force on 31 December 1996 and 292 on 31 December 1997; and 667 new project licences were granted during 1996 and 919 during 1997.

Figures for 1998 will be published shortly. They will show that there were 286 certificates of designation in force on 31 December 1998 and that 1,104 project licences were granted during 1998.

In specific circumstances (such as field trials), experiments can also take place at places other than designated establishments. Details of the number of such places are not held centrally.

Of the 286 certificates of designation in force on 31 December 1998, 107 were registered as commercial concerns. The number of companies may differ slightly from this: some companies, for example, may hold more than one certificate of designation each covering a different facility.

Illegal Handguns

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many illegal handguns are estimated to be in circulation in the UK, separately identifying the figure for 9mm Browning automatics; and if he will make a statement. [83060]

Mr. Boateng: There is no reliable estimate of the number of illegal firearms in circulation in this country.

The existence of illegal firearms is of great concern to the Government. We will do all we can to ensure that the police service and Her Majesty's Customs are equipped to target this particular crime. Work is also continuing at international level to address the problems of the illicit manufacture and trafficking of firearms, notably through a Protocol to the proposed United Nations Convention Against Transnational Organised Crime.

Passport Applications

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he plans to reduce waiting times for passport applications; and if he will make a statement. [83138]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To meet its customers' needs the Passport Agency is now prioritising applications by customers' declared travel dates. Its secondary standard of service target is to give priority to customers' travel needs aiming to meet their declared travel dates for at least 99.99 per cent. of passports issued. The Agency is meeting this target and will continue to do so.

The Agency's aim is to reduce turnround times in all the six regional passport offices to its target of ten days by September and in the meantime to meet customers' declared travel needs. It will do this by injecting additional resources, through system improvements and clear messages to passport applicants on how they can best assist the Agency to meet their needs.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) new applications and (b) applications for renewal of United Kingdom passports were received in each month since January 1998; how many unprocessed applications there were at the end of each month; and if he will make a statement. [83137]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Information on new and renewal applications and on unprocessed applications is shown in the table.

Month	New	Renewal	Work in Progress
January 1998	179,812	210,465	118,983
February 1998	205,613	221,535	139,879
March 1998	233,839	223,772	168,064
April 1998	192,314	167,118	136,174
May 1998	268,357	202,910	184,505
June 1998	245,467	176,988	204,589
July 1998	233,388	168,073	190,857
August 1998	230,835	179,665	101,300
September 1998	138,630	109,215	86,848
October 1998	125,315	99,087	53,652
November 1998	145,815	117,807	77,423
December 1998	90,208	74,731	61,396
January 1999	166,995	172,346	129,778
February 1999	208,906	188,515	210,292
March 1999	294,787	239,533	222,631

The Passport Agency has encountered a number of operational problems arising from the introduction of new high technology driven passport issuing arrangements into its Liverpool and Newport passport offices. This has caused delays in the processing of non-urgent applications and has increased the backlog of unprocessed work.

To meet its customers' needs the Passport Agency is now prioritising applications by customers' declared travel dates. Its secondary standard of service target is to give priority to customers' travel needs aiming to meet their declared travel dates for at least 99.99 per cent. of passports issued. The Agency is meeting this target and will continue to do so.

The Agency's aim is to reduce turnround times in all the six regional passport offices to its target of 10 days by September and in the meantime to meet customers' declared travel needs. It will do this by injecting additional resources, through system improvements and clear messages to passport applicants on how they can best assist the Agency to meet their needs.

Human Rights

Lorna Fitzsimons: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what approach the Government are taking in relation to statements about the compatibility of new legislation with the Convention rights set out in the Human Rights Act 1998. [83540]

Mr. Straw: A statement under section 19(1)(a) of the Human Rights Act may be made where, in the view of the Minister, the provisions of the Bill are compatible with the Convention rights. In other cases a statement under section 19(1)(b) of the Act should be made: such a statement is not one that the provisions of the Bill are incompatible with the Convention rights but only one to the effect that the Minister is unable to make a statement of compatibility. A section 19(1)(a) statement is a positive statement of compatibility.

If a section 19(1)(a) statement is to be made, a Minister must be clear that, at a minimum, the balance of argument supports the view that the provisions are compatible. Lawyers will advise whether the provisions of the Bill are on balance compatible with the Convention rights. In doing so, they will consider whether it is more likely than not that the provisions of the Bill will stand up to challenge on Convention grounds before the domestic courts and the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg. A Minister should not be advised to make a statement of compatibility where legal advice is that on balance the provisions of the Bill would not survive such a challenge. The fact that there are valid arguments to be advanced against any anticipated challenge is not a sufficient basis on which to advise a Minister that he may make a statement of compatibility where it is thought that these arguments would not ultimately succeed before the courts.

Section 19 of the Act applies where a Minister of the Crown is in charge of a Bill, that is, either a Government Bill or a Consolidation Bill. Section 19 does not apply to Private Members' bills: there is no duty to make a statement about their compatibility with the Convention rights. Where the Bill is directly assisted by the Government, however, the Minister responsible for the policy should, as a matter of good practice, express the Government's views on compatibility with the Convention rights during the Second Reading debate.

Criminal Injuries Compensation

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many claims were submitted to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority (i) in total and (ii) by the victims of rape and incest; and what percentage in each case were (a) processed, (b) awarded and (c) rejected, in each of the last five years. [83266]

Mr. Boateng: The available data record the number of applications received in a year, the number of claims settled in that year and the outcomes. Claims are not necessarily settled in the year in which they are received, but may be settled in subsequent years. In the following table the term 'rape' includes rape within the family.

	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99
Claims received
Total number	71,734	75,667	75,032	77,326	75,956
Rape	3,997	3,891	3,581	4,020	3,260
Claims settled
Total number	64,549	76,225	79,219	79,544	85,493
Rape	905	2,355	2,401	3,018	3,594
Percentage settled attracting monetary award
Total	58	58	59	57	55
Rape	66	67	69	71	68

Remembrance Day

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change (a) the name of and (b) ceremonials associated with Remembrance Day. [83272]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: There are no plans to change the name "Remembrance Day", which is also known as "Remembrance Sunday". Nor are there any plans to change the present arrangements for the official ceremony at the Cenotaph, which are generally recognised as successfully uniting the nation in memory of all those who made the supreme sacrifice and all who mourn them.

The Royal British Legion, which organises the march past the Cenotaph that follows the official ceremony on Remembrance Sunday, has made proposals which will allow greater participation in future years by non ex-Service groups and individuals. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has welcomed the proposals for expansion of the march past put forward by the Royal British Legion, and Home Office officials are discussing the details with them.

DEFENCE

Landmines

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of each type of anti-personnel mine are presently held by (a) the Royal Air Force, (b) the Royal Navy and (c) UK Special Forces. [81995]

Mr. George Robertson: The Royal Air Force's stock of 209,625 HB876 bomblets (as at 1 April 1999), the sub-munition for the JP233 runway denial weapon, is being withdrawn from service to comply with the Ottawa Convention and destroyed by a contractor in Germany. Destruction will be completed by 1 January 2000, well ahead of the schedule stipulated under Ottawa of the four years after entry into force of the Convention. No anti-personnel mines are held by either the Royal Navy or UK Special Forces.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) anti-personnel landmines, (b) weapons containing anti-personnel landmines and (c) weapons containing anti-vehicle mines equipped with anti-handling devices have been developed by NATO forces carrying out operations in Kosovo. [81993]

Mr. George Robertson: Providing details of those weapon systems being developed by other NATO forces currently carrying out operations in Kosovo is a matter for those nations concerned. The Ottawa Convention, and the Landmines Act 1998, prohibit the UK from developing, stockpiling, using or transferring either (a) anti-personnel mines, or (b) weapons containing anti-personnel mines. The RAF's stocks of the JP233 Runway Denial Weapon—which is prohibited under the Ottawa Convention—have been withdrawn from service and will be destroyed by 1 January 2000, well ahead of the schedule stipulated under the Ottawa Convention. In the case of (c), the UK's equipment programme (including those weapons in service; being developed in collaboration with other NATO countries; or awaiting procurement decisions) currently contains the following anti-vehicle systems. They are all required to be compliant with the definitions and provisions of the Ottawa Convention and the Landmines Act 1998:

In-service

Barmine: An Anti-Tank mine. No anti-handling device is fitted to this weapon, but disturbance of the mine may, in some circumstances cause it to detonate.

Multiple Launch Rocket System (MLRS) Phase 2: A long-range rocket, deploying anti-vehicle mines. Developed by Germany and procured in co-operation with France, Germany and Italy. The anti-handling device fitted to this weapon would cause detonation after deliberate and sustained movement of the mine.

Under Development

Aimed controlled effect anti-tank mine (ACEATM): A manually deployed anti-tank weapon. Being developed in collaboration with France and Germany. A non-lethal anti-handling device would switch the weapon off if disturbed.

Future Systems

Area Defence Weapon: A manually deployed anti-vehicle weapon. No contract has yet been awarded. A non-lethal anti-handling device would switch the weapon off if disturbed.

Shielder: A vehicle-launched scatterable mine system employing anti-tank mines. No anti-handling device is fitted to this weapon, but disturbance of the mine may, in some circumstances cause it to detonate.

Gulf War (Vaccines)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which vaccines or components of vaccines given to Gulf War service personnel contained squalene preparations; and how many British Gulf War veterans have tested positive for the presence of squalene in blood samples. [82286]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Details of the Ministry of Defence's programme to immunise UK troops against the potential threat posed by Iraq's biological weapons during the Gulf conflict were published in October 1997, in the MOD paper "Background to the Use of Medical Countermeasures to Protect British Forces during the Gulf War (Operation GRANBY)". None of the vaccines used for this programme contained squalene. In addition, UK Service personnel would have received other immunisations against diseases which potentially posed a public health threat. So far as has been ascertained, none of the latter vaccines contained squalene either.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which vaccines used on Gulf War service personnel were acquired from the USA. [82287]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Details of the Ministry of Defence's programme to immunise UK troops against the potential threat posed by Iraq's biological weapons during the Gulf conflict were published in October 1997, in the MOD paper "Background to the Use of Medical Countermeasures to Protect British Forces during the Gulf War (Operation GRANBY)". This describes in detail how a vaccine against plague was purchased from the US DoD for use by UK forces. None of the other vaccines used for this programme were acquired from the US.

In addition, UK Service personnel would have received other immunisations against disease that potentially posed a public health threat. So far as has been ascertained, none of the latter vaccines were acquired from the US.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in the investigation into vaccines used on Gulf War service personnel. [82288]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Details of the UK's anti-biological warfare agent immunisation programme for the Gulf conflict were declassified in December 1996. An explanation of the vaccines used and the reasoning behind the programme was published in October 1997 in the MOD paper "Background to the Use of Medical Countermeasures to Protect British Forces during the Gulf War (Operation GRANBY)". A copy of this publication has been placed in the Library of the House at that time.

A Fact Finding Team within the Ministry of Defence's Gulf Veterans' Illnesses Unit (GVIU) was established in September 1997 to look into the implementation in-theatre of the 1991 programme of immunisation against biological warfare agents. This review is based on oral testimony and extant documentary evidence, with a view to making public as much information as possible. The team's fieldwork was completed last autumn and a paper based on their work, and on other contemporary material that has been located, is in the course of preparation. This will be published once it is completed, which is expected to be within the next three months.

In May 1997, the Government announced the funding of a research programme to investigate the possible adverse health effects of the combination of vaccines and tablets which were given to troops in the Gulf to protect them against the threat of biological and chemical warfare agents. An Independent Panel has been set up to oversee this research programme. The Panel consists of experts in fields of toxicology, immunology, virology, microbiology and epidemiology and includes two members who have been nominated by Gulf veterans groups. The programme as a whole is now expected to take some three and a half years to complete. However, we expect to publish results from the first phase of work during the first half of 1999.

This research involves an in depth study into the potential adverse health effects of interactions between the vaccines which could have been administered to Service personnel at the time of the Gulf War, both with and without pyridostigmine bromide (PB) which was present in the NAPS tablets given to UK troops in the Gulf War as a pre-treatment against nerve agents.

Investigation of the specific combination of anthrax and pertussis vaccines is a priority element of the programme. The National Institute for Biological Standards and Control (NIBSC) have been asked to repeat the tests they carried out in the late 1990 that led the Department of Health to notify the MOD that it had anxieties about the simultaneous use of anthrax and pertussis vaccines. NIBSC will commence this work later this year, when protocols are finalised. Their programme is expected to run for two years.

Initial dose-ranging work at CBD Porton Down on the physical effects of vaccines and PB in rodents is nearing completion and a meeting of the Independent Panel held in March this year gave CBD permission to proceed with longer term studies to investigate potential cognitive and neurophysical effects of the vaccines/PB combination. NIBSC have also been invited to participate (in particular in the anthrax/pertussis work) and it is intended that a number of other scientific and academic bodies will contribute to the research in due course. It is expected that this study will report towards the end of 2002.

The Independent Panel also approved a study to determine whether CBD Porton Down staff, who have received multiple immunisations including anthrax and plague in the course of their duties, exhibit higher levels of ill-health than their non-vaccinated colleagues. This study is expected to be complete by the end of this year.

Ministerial Meetings (US)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many meetings his special adviser, Bernard Gray, and Deputy Chief of Defence Procurement (Support) held with members and officials of the US Administration during their visit to the USA on 4 and 5 March; with which US department they met at each meeting; and what was the purpose of their visit. [82247]

Mr. George Robertson: Meetings were held on 5 March with Department of Defence officials to discuss defence industrial co-operation. The meetings were positive. We expect these discussions to continue as part of MOD's normal dialogue with US officials on defence equipment business.

Yugoslav Air Force

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on (a) the level of Yugoslav air defence capability and (b) the threat to NATO aircraft from (i) non-portable, (ii) towed and (iii) self-propelled air defence weaponry, following the initial NATO air campaign. [82474]

Mr. George Robertson: The Yugoslav air defence capability has been and will continue to be damaged by the NATO air campaign. All Yugoslav operational air defence weapons are portable to a greater or lesser extent. Their towed anti aircraft guns present a limited threat to NATO's high altitude air attacks. These guns and their self-propelled air defence weapons still pose a credible threat to NATO aircraft, if operating at low level. NATO continues to take appropriate measures to minimise the threat.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Yugoslav Air Force (i) MIG-29s, (ii) MIG-21s, (iii) ORAOs and (iv) Galebs are confirmed destroyed by NATO; how many were estimated non-operational before NATO operations over Serbia began; and if he will make a statement on the estimated impact of NATO action to date on Yugoslav Air Force capability. [82473]

Mr. George Robertson: We estimate that NATO has destroyed 70 out of 450 aircraft of all types. This includes seven MiG-29s, 16 MIG-21s and 35 ORAO/GALEB aircraft. Between 5 per cent. and 10 per cent. of their aircraft might have been non-operational before the NATO campaign began. The Yugoslav Air Force continues to fly a limited number of combat missions but NATO action has had a considerable impact on its capability.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the basis of the calculation of the cash budget of the Chief of Defence Logistics in 1996–97 in his Department's expenditure plans 1999–2000 to 2001–02, Table 1A. [82515]

Mr. George Robertson: The Defence Logistics Organisation brings together the three single Service logistics commands: the Chief of Fleet Support, Quartermaster General and Air Officer Commanding-in-Chief Land Logistics Command. In order to show comparable figures for the new Chief of Defence Logistics Top Level Budget (TLB) for previous years, the budgets of those former TLBs, which under the earlier Estimates structure were shown on Vote 2 (Defence: logistics services), have been added together. In addition, the total figures for 1996–97 and 1997–98 have been adjusted by the amounts of the loans and grants to and repayments from the Hydrographic Office Defence Agency that had previously been contained within the Chief of Fleet Support TLB but which it has now been decided should be shown separately for all years in Supply Estimates (Vote subhead 1N) and, therefore, in Table 1a of The Government's Expenditure Plans 1999–2000 to 2001–02: Ministry of Defence.

Efficiency Savings

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the (a) efficiency savings and (b) purchasing reductions which have been (i) identified and (ii) achieved in his Department's cash plan (A) 1998–99 estimated outturn and (B) the 1999–2000 expenditure plans in the Class VI Estimates, Vote 1, for each of votes 1A to 1P, excluding Vote 1N. [82557]

Mr. George Robertson: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Depleted Uranium Weapons

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has held with his NATO counterparts regarding the use of depleted uranium weapons by NATO forces in current operations in Yugoslavia. [82861]

Mr. George Robertson: I have had no discussions on the use of depleted uranium with my NATO counterparts. The United Kingdom has not used DU ammunition in the Balkans. It is a matter for the individual nations as to what ammunition they employ.

National Insurance Charge

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the revenue effect of reducing the national insurance charge by 0.5 per cent. for all those employed in or by the armed forces. [82752]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Based on figures for Financial Year 1999–2000, it is estimated that the revenue effect of reducing by 0.5 per cent. the National Insurance Charges for Armed Forces personnel, will be:

(a) Employees' National Insurance Charges—£16.9 million

(b) Employers' National Insurance Charges—£17.0 million.

Any other personnel employed in support of the Armed Forces—excepting MOD civil servants—are directly employed by contractors. Responsibility for the payment of National Insurance Charges therefore lies with the contractors concerned and not the Armed Forces.

Cranwell

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many students are currently training at Cranwell to become officers; and how many are of Afro-Caribbean origin. [83076]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 4 May 1999]: On 29 April 1999, there were 319 Royal Air Force officer cadets undergoing initial officer training at RAF College Cranwell. Within that total, there were fewer than five people who had declared their ethnic origin as Black Caribbean, Black African or Black Other. Detailed figures are not given in order to protect the confidentiality of the individuals concerned.

Sandhurst

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many students are currently training at Sandhurst to become officers; and how many of these are of Afro-Caribbean origin. [83072]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 4 May 1999]: As at 1 April 1999, there were 626 British Officer Cadets under training at the Royal Military Academy, Sandhurst. Of this number, there were fewer than five cadets whose ethnic category was classified as either Black African or Black Other. Detailed figures are not given in order to protect the confidentiality of the individuals concerned.

Dartmouth Naval College

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many students are currently training at Dartmouth Naval College to become officers; and how many of these are of Afro-Caribbean origin. [83073]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 4 May 1999]: There are currently 348 Royal Navy Young Officers under training at Britannia Royal Naval College Dartmouth. Of these, six are of ethnic origin, although none are currently Black-Caribbean or Black other.

In addition, there are presently 49 Young Officers from a number of overseas countries undertaking training this term. Of these, two are of Black Caribbean origin.

Army Barracks (Gaelic Athletic Association)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date and by what legal authority Army barracks were constructed on property of the Gaelic Athletic Association and grounds of Crossmaglen Rangers; what preparations have been made to vacate these barracks; what functions currently conducted at or from these barracks will be discontinued and what functions will be carried out from which other sites; what preparations for the transfer of functions are being made at other sites; what date has been set as the target for completion of these moves; what compensation or other payments have been made to the owners of this land; and what plans have been made to demolish the barracks and return the site to its previous use. [82502]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 4 May 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Minister of State, Northern Ireland Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for East Kilbride (Mr. Ingram) on 4 May 1999, Official Report, columns 328–29.

Commissioned Officers (Ethnic Origin)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many commissioned officers there are in (a) the Army, (b) the Royal Navy and (c) the Royal Air Force; and how many are of Afro-Caribbean origin. [83074]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 4 May 1999]: As at 1 March 1999, the numbers of all commissioned officers, and the number of commissioned officers whose known ethnic category is either 'Black-African' or 'Black-Caribbean' is as shown in the table:

	All ethnic origins	Black-African[1]	Black-Caribbean[1]
Naval Service	7,733	8	6
Army	12,707	12	12
Royal Air Force	10,798	9	17
Total	31,238	29	35

[1] These numbers are based on the self-classification of ethnic origin used by individual members of the Armed Forces. There are a further 24 officers who have classified themselves as 'Black-Other'.

Defence Evaluation and Research Agency

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress of the study into the options for a public private partnership for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. [83391]

Mr. George Robertson: A report on the Public Private Partnership options for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency was submitted by the Ministry of Defence study team to Ministers on 31 March 1999.

The report detailed the progress of the study to date, setting out the team's analysis and the proposed way ahead. In line with their advice, I have agreed that they should consult on the report's findings with key stakeholders, including other Government Departments,

UK industry and academia, overseas allies, DERA staff and trade unions, before providing me with a final recommendation in the summer.

I would hope to be in a position to make an announcement on the PPP option chosen by the time of the summer recess. However, it is important that all stakeholders are properly consulted and their views taken into account prior to a decision being taken on the final shape of the PPP.

A copy of the consultation document has been placed in the Library of the House.

Defence Logistics Organisation

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the location of the permanent headquarters for the Defence Logistics Organisation. [83539]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We have undertaken a comprehensive investment appraisal and business case study to inform a decision on the location of the headquarters of the Defence Logistics Organisation (DLO) following its Foundation Year. I am now able to announce that, subject to full consultation with the Trades Unions, the headquarters will be based from 1 April 2000 at Ensleigh in Bath. The headquarters will comprise only a very small proportion of the DLO's staff, but its new location is the best site to enable it to drive forward the revolution in logistic support, deliver the full scale of early business improvements expected from the newly unified organisation, work closely with the Defence Procurement Agency to develop the Smart Procurement initiative and meet the DLO vision to excel as an integrated and responsive defence logistics team. Once agreement is reached with the Trade Unions, transition planning will begin in earnest with the aim of a progressive move to the new location completed by 1 April 2000.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Business Closures

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what support his Department provides for profitable medium-sized businesses facing closure as a result of multi-national corporations rationalising their operations. [82375]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 29 April 1999]: The closure of any successful business, whether operated by a foreign or indigenous company, is always a matter for regret. The DTI's Invest in Britain Bureau and its partners seek to ensure that, where multi-national firms are considering global rationalisation, the case for the UK is put forward strongly to local management. However, commercial decisions taken in the light of world market conditions rest with the companies themselves.

In circumstances where there are redundancies, the Employment Service stands ready to give the maximum possible assistance to those affected, including counselling, careers guidance and advice on re-training opportunities. In offering support the Employment Service takes account of the skills and experience of the employees being made redundant and local labour market conditions. The Employment Service has also targeted help in cases where there are large scale redundancies by setting up Rapid Response Units. These have been established to offer a wide range of co-ordinated support, and to assist people who have unfortunately been made redundant to find jobs quickly.

Discrimination (Sexual Orientation)

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to introduce protection from discrimination in the workplace for lesbians and gay men. [83020]

Ms Hodge: We are currently considering our response to the Equal Opportunities Commission's recommendations, following their review of the current sex discrimination legislation. One of the EOC's proposals was that there should be legal protection for gay men and lesbians. We are considering carefully the Commission's recommendations, including whether or not legislation is the most appropriate route.

Roman Catholic Secondary Schools (London)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many pupils there are in Roman Catholic secondary schools in London; and how many are of Afro-Caribbean origin. [83075]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 4 May 1999]: In January 1998 there were 59,030 pupils in Roman Catholic maintained secondary schools in London, of which 4,438 were of Black Caribbean background and 4,835 of Black African background.

A and AS Courses

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he expects the QCA to give final approval for the specifications submitted to it by awarding bodies for new A and AS level courses; and when he expects specimen papers, specifications and marking schemes to be circulated to schools. [83289]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 4 May 1999]: The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority intends to produce by September 1999 synopses of all proposed AS and A level specifications to be introduced for teaching from September 2000. After final approval, the new specifications, together with sample assessment materials and marking schemes, will be published and distributed to schools and colleges by the awarding bodies in December 1999. Although the final specifications will not be available until later in the year, I understand that the awarding bodies plan to make detailed information on their draft specifications available to schools and colleges as soon as possible after they have been submitted to QCA later this Spring.

Employment Service

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what performance targets will be set for the Employment Service in 1999–2000. [83463]

Mr. Blunkett: The Aim of the Employment Service is to contribute to high levels of employment and growth, and to individuals leading rewarding working lives, by helping all people without a job find work and employers fill their vacancies. This aim is supported by six key Objectives.

I am today announcing the targets I have set the Employment Service for 1999–2000 for each of its Objectives.

Objective A: To help people into work by providing the appropriate advice, guidance, training and support either directly or in partnership with others.

Target:

1. To place 1.25 million unemployed people into work.

Objective B: To concentrate efforts on helping people improve their employability and move from welfare to work particularly if they have already spent long periods without a job.

Targets:

2. To place 190,000 long-term (6 months plus) JSA claimants into work.
3. To place 38,000 JSA claimants out of work for 2 years or more, including New Deal for over 25s participants, into work:
4. To place 100,000 New Deal for 18–24 participants into work;
5. To place 15,000 New Deal for Lone Parents participants into work;

Objective C: To involve people with disabilities in the world of work by helping them to find and retain jobs and encouraging employers to open more opportunities to them.

Target:

6. To place 85,000 unemployed people with disabilities, including New Deal for Disabled People participants, into work.

Objective D: To set out clearly the rights and responsibilities of people who claim Jobseeker's Allowance and ensure that throughout the period of their claim these rights and responsibilities are fulfilled.

Target:

7. To ensure the correct application of the JSA process in at least 96 per cent. of cases checked in quarter four of 1999–2000.

Objective E: To provide a courteous and professional customer service to all jobseekers.

Target:

8. To achieve an 87 per cent. customer service delivery rate.

Objective F: To deliver these services cost effectively.

Targets for the Employment Service in Scotland and Wales, derived from the national targets, will be announced shortly.

I am also announcing today a review of the aims, Objectives and targets of the ES for the year 2000 and beyond, to ensure they continue to be an accurate reflection of the key role ES has to play in the implementation and operation of our employment policies.

Correspondence

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he intends to reply to the letter sent to him by Karen Lloyd and Sarah Varnan of Windermere Road, Kendal on 23 February. [83183]

Mr. Mudie: I am afraid there is no record of the original letter to the Secretary of State having been received in the Department. However, the correspondents copied their letter to the Prime Minister on 19 April. A copy arrived in the Department from the Prime Minister's office on 30 April. We will reply within the timetable set by the Department's Correspondence Standard, ie 15 working days from receipt.

Youth Service

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the future of the Youth Service. [83296]

Mr. Mudie: We are currently considering a range of proposals supporting the requirements of young people, including the role of the youth service. The nature and timing of our planned consultation on the future of the youth service will need to be determined once the youth service's part in the wider agenda has been firmly established. An announcement will be made in due course.

Acting Heads and Deputy Heads

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list by local education authority how many acting heads and acting deputy heads there were in January 1999 and in each of the last three years in maintained schools in England and Wales, listing separately (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools. [80676]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 23 April 1999]: The information requested is not held centrally.

An Office for Manpower Economics sample survey of vacancies and recruitment in schools in the maintained sector in England and Wales at September 1998 estimated that the proportion of acting heads was about 3 per cent. and the proportion of acting deputy heads was about 6 per cent.

Teachers may take on a job in an acting capacity when another post is vacant or the incumbent is absent because of sick, compassionate, study or training leave.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Appellants (Payments)

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many independent tribunal decisions to allow payments to appellants there were in the last year; and how many of these were paid to the claimant (a) within one month, (b) between one and two months and (c) after more than two months after the decision. [83067]

Angela Eagle: The latest available statistics indicate that for the period 1 December 1997 to 30 November 1998, a total of 261,255 appeals were heard and decided. Of these, 87,986 [33.7 per cent.] were in the appellant's favour. Information is not kept about what proportion of these resulted in payments to appellants or how soon after the Independent Tribunals' decisions such payments were made.

Giro Cheques

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he has taken to ensure that giro cheques cashed in shops offering to cash cheques on the spot are being legitimately encashed by claimants. [82632]

Mr. Timms: The administration of benefits is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, Peter Mathison. I have asked him to reply to my right hon. Friend.

Letter from Alexis Cleveland to Mr. Frank Field dated 4 May 1999:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked Peter Mathison to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what moves he has taken to ensure that giros cashed in shops offering to cash cheques on the spot are being legitimately encashed by claimants. As Mr. Mathison is away from the office on leave, I am replying.

Current banking law allows cheque shops to exchange giros for cash and clear them through their own bank account.

The Benefits Agency is aware of the risks this poses to its girocheques and is taking steps within the legislation to minimise the problems. For instance, the Benefits Agency has worked closely with the British Cheque Cashers Association (BCCA) and is establishing a formal memorandum of understanding with them to improve cooperation between our organisations. The BCCA is a trade association for cheques shops with over six hundred members which promotes a code of practice setting out various security measures to be observed. At local level there are examples of good liaison between individual cheque shops and BA fraud investigation teams.

In addition the Benefits Agency is currently reviewing the end-to-end payment process to identify the areas of risk in order to plan further security improvements.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Genetically Modified Crops

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will increase the time allocated by Health and Safety Executive inspectors to the inspection of genetically modified trial crop sites. [74867]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 5 March 1999]: The time allocated for Health and Safety Executive inspection of genetically modified trial crop sites has been increased in 1999–2000 by about 15 per cent. compared with the previous year.

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to use research data from other countries on the ecological impact of genetically engineered of crops in order to avoid the need to plant such crops in this country for research purposes. [79488]

Mr. Meacher: All available research data are used, including data from other countries, when making assessments. However, the UK ecosystem is unique and therefore information from other countries is not always relevant. Some research trials are statutory, for example trials in respect of the UK National List of Seeds, and these must be grown and assessed in the UK.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to improve the mechanisms for informing local communities of genetically modified crops being grown in their area. [82259]

Mr. Meacher: Information on the location of trials of genetically modified (GM) crops is currently available on the public register held in my Department. Outside of London, details of local releases are available at the regional offices of the Environment Agency and in Scotland at both the offices of the Scottish Office and the Health and Safety Executive, Edinburgh. The information is also available on my Department's website. Copies of register entries for particular releases are available by post on request. In addition, anyone applying for a release consent must publish a notice in a newspaper circulating in the areas likely to be affected by the proposed release. We continue to examine ways of improving the availability of information to local communities of GM crop trials but have no plans at present to change existing mechanisms.

Genetically Modified Engineering

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list each (a) biotechnology and (b) other company which has asked the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment to keep confidential papers or information which it has provided to the committee on genetically modified engineering. [77942]

Mr. Meacher: The legislation requires the Secretary of State to keep certain information confidential if requested to do so by the company concerned. Such information is limited to the protection of intellectual property rights for which a patent application is being made. The information is placed on the public register once the patent has been granted. Otherwise all the information in the application for consent to release or market a GMO is available on request. All the information submitted with an application is available to the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment.

The following companies have asked the Secretary of State to treat elements of their applications as commercially confidential under the terms outlined above:

Zeneca Plant Science Limited
Plant Breeding International Advanced Technologies (Cambridge) Limited
Nickerson BIOCEM Limited
Shell Research Limited
Rhone-Poulenc Agriculture Limited
Maribo UK Limited
Ciba-Geigy Limited
Sharpes International Seeds Limited
The Scottish Agricultural College Genetic Systems NV
Genetics Limited
Agrevo UK Limited
Novartis Seeds Limited
Monsanto Plc
Scottish Crop Research Institute
Pioneer Genetique SARL
John K. King and Sons Limited
CPB Twyford Limited
The University of Leeds.

A1/M1 Link Road

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many vehicles used the A1/M1 Yorkshire link road in its first full month of operation; what was the total sum paid to Yorkshire Link under the design, build, finance and operate contract; and if he will make a statement. [81898]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 23 April 1999]: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Lawrie Haynes, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Phil Willis, dated 5 May 1999:

M1-A1 link road—volumes of traffic

As you know, the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question. You asked "how many vehicles used the M1-A1 Yorkshire Link road in its first full month of operation; what was the total sum paid to Yorkshire Link Ltd. under the design, build, finance and operate contract".

Traffic volumes vary along the length of the new link road. In its first full month, the average vehicle usage was 1.5 million vehicles. Approximately 20% of these were heavy goods vehicles.

The estimated cost to public funds is measured by the Expected Net Present Value of the shadow toll payments by the Highways Agency over the 30-year life of the contract. The exact payment will depend on traffic flows. The expected range is between £186m-£281m over the 30-year period. It is not possible to provide more detailed information, since this is commercially sensitive and protected by confidentiality clauses in the contract which pre-date the Open Government initiative on disclosure of information.

Additional information on this contract can be found in the National Audit Office Report "The Private Finance Initiative. The first four Design, Build, Finance and Operate Roads Contracts", which was published on 28 January 1998.

I trust the above information meets your requirements.

Millennium Compliancies

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the local authorities identified by the Year 2000 Taskforce as giving cause for concern in terms of their millennium computer compliance preparations. [82821]

Mr. Meale: As Action 2000 stated at their National Infrastructure Forum on 21 April 1999, at this stage of the evaluation process they are not naming any organisations. At the next Forum meeting, on 13 July, the Government Offices for the Regions, as the Millennium Bug responsible bodies for local authorities, fully expect to be in a position to report progress on all local authorities.

West Midlands Regional Development Agency

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he has taken to ensure that Herefordshire is adequately represented on the West Midlands Regional Development Agency; and if he will make a statement. [82823]

Mr. Meale: Our primary concern in appointing the board members of Regional Development Agencies was to choose people with a wide range of experience who would make an effective contribution to the work of the boards. Members should not consider themselves to be the delegates of any group, body or geographical area but should take into account the interests of the region as a whole.

SSSIs

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the designated areas of special scientific interest that have been subject to inappropriate development since May 1997. [82676]

Mr. Meale: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Bath (Mr. Foster) on 28 April 1999, Official Report, column 144.

Unauthorised Camping

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to assist councils faced with the cost of cleaning up land from which travellers have been evicted. [82719]

Mr. Raynsford: We have published, jointly with the Home Office, good practice guidance for local authorities and the police on managing unauthorised camping. The good practice recognises that the cost of clearing up after unauthorised encampments can be high, and suggests that costs might be reduced by the provision of refuse collection and disposal services during the encampment.

We want to encourage local authorities to think creatively about how best to manage unauthorised camping. Part of their thinking may involve the provision of temporary, serviced sites as advised in Department of the Environment Circular 18/94 "Gypsy Sites Policy and Unauthorised Camping", and latterly in the good practice guidance.

Radar

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if civil airlines flying into United Kingdom airports are required to have radar enabling their pilots to detect other planes or flying objects directly below them. [82849]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Many passenger transport aeroplanes flying in UK airspace already have an airborne collision avoidance system installed and operating. This system is known as Traffic Alert and Collision Avoidance System (TCAS) II. It can provide advisory information including recommended avoidance manoeuvres to the pilot if another aircraft equipped with an operating transponder beacon is likely to pass too close. The intruder aircraft may be coming from any direction and may be above, below or at the same level as the aeroplane equipped with TCAS.

With effect from 1 January 2000, all aeroplanes with more than 30 passenger seats or with a maximum take off mass that exceeds 15,000 kilogrammes will need to be equipped with an improved version of TCAS II that offers enhanced operational performance. It is intended that by 1 January 2005 this requirement should be extended to all aeroplanes that have more than 19 passenger seats or a maximum take off mass of more than 5,700 kilogrammes.

BEST Pensions

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what offer has been made by the Government to the BEST pension trustees; and what was the response; [82678]

(2) for what reasons the BEST pensions issue remains unresolved; [82677]

(3) how many meetings his officials have had with officials in other Government departments, regarding the BEST pension fund, since 15 September 1998. [82682]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Discussions about achieving a just out-of-court settlement of this issue are proceeding. We continue to attach high importance to bringing the discussion to a satisfactory conclusion without any unnecessary delay.

Officials from other Departments have been kept fully informed of matters affecting their Departmental interests.

Radioactive Iridium (Stansted)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the circumstances whereby a package of radioactive iridium was discovered at Stansted Airport. [83123]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I understand that this package, which was misdirected from the United States, arrived at Stansted Airport on Saturday 24 April 1999, as part of a normal shipment of radioactive material, and was placed in Federal Express's radioactive material store. When it was recognised that this package did not belong in the United Kingdom, the consignor was contacted and its proper destination ascertained. The package was returned to the United States on Monday 26 April 1999. At no time did it leave the control of Federal Express during its brief stay in the United Kingdom. The material was correctly contained in a package approved by the US Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the US Department of Transportation in compliance with the requirements of the International Civil Aviation Organization's Technical Instructions for the Safe Transport of Dangerous Goods by Air (Class 7) which governs the international transport of dangerous goods by air. I also understand that the package bore the appropriate markings and the correct labels, enabling it to be properly and safely handled. I would emphasise that the package at no time posed any threat to the health of workers, the public or to the environment.

The Civil Aviation Authority is investigating the circumstances of how the package came to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action was taken to safeguard (a) human health and (b) the environment following the discovery of a radioactive package of iridium at Stansted Airport. [83132]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 4 May 1999]: On arrival at Stansted Airport, the package was placed in a dedicated and licensed radioactive store of Federal Express where it remained until it was returned to the United States. I understand that the package bore the appropriate markings and the correct labels, enabling it to be properly and safely handled. There was at no time any hazard to human health or to the environment.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the package of iridium found at Stansted Airport was transported there on a passenger-carrying aircraft. [83135]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 4 May 1999]: This package arrived on a Federal Express cargo plane and was similarly returned to the United States on a Federal Express cargo plane.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what hazard warnings there were on the outside of the package of radioactive iridium discovered at Stansted Airport. [83134]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 4 May 1999]: The package which was mistakenly delivered to Stansted Airport bore all the necessary hazard warnings in accordance with the requirements of the International Civil Aviation Organization's Technical Instructions for the Safe Transport of Dangerous Goods by Air (Class 7) and with the relevant UK regulations for air transport of dangerous goods (The Air Navigation (Dangerous Goods) Regulations 1994 SI No. 3187 and Amendments 1996 SI No. 3100 and 1998 SI No. 2536).

The warnings consisted of an indelible trefoil symbol, resistant to the effects of fire and water, plainly marked on the outside of the package, together with two diamond shaped Category III-YELLOW labels on opposite sides of the package. The labels also bear the trefoil symbol, the word "RADIOACTIVE", and give details of the contents, the radioactivity and the Transport Index.

Radioactive Material (Transport)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has of the number of packages of radioactive material carried within the United Kingdom by common carriers for the last year for which figures are available. [83131]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 4 May 1999]: Data are not collected separately on whether radioactive material is carried by common carriers or by a company's own transport, as they are required to meet the provisions of the same regulations. It was estimated in 1997 that of the order of 10,000 flights carrying packages of radioactive material currently occur each year, the vast majority of which contain limited quantities for medical or industrial use in excepted or Type A packages.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what controls exist over the movement within the United Kingdom of radioactive packages by common carriers. [83133]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 4 May 1999]: The transport of radioactive material within the UK, by whatever type of carrier, is controlled by a number regulatory requirements. The main regulations are as follows:

Road

The Radioactive Material (Road Transport) (Great Britain) Regulations 1996 (SI 1996 No. 1350). The Radioactive Substances (Carriage by Road) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1983 (SR 1983 No. 344). The Radioactive Substances (Carriage by Road) (Amendment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1986 (SR 1986 No 61).

Sea

The Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997 (SI 1997 No. 2367); Merchant Shipping Notice No. M 1620, "The Carriage of Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants in Packaged Form on Ships".

Air

The Air Navigation (No. 2) Order 1995 SI No. 1970. The Air Navigation (Dangerous Goods) Regulations 1994 SI No. 3187 and Amendments 1996 SI No. 3100 and 1998 SI No. 2536.

Ports

The Dangerous Substances in Harbour Areas Regulations 1987 (SI 1987 No. 37).

Rail

The Packaging, Labelling and Carriage of Radioactive Material by Rail Regulations (RAMRail) 1996 (SI 1996 No. 2090): Approved Requirements for the packaging, labelling and carriage of radioactive material by rail 1996 Edition. The Carriage of Dangerous Goods (Classification, Packaging and Labelling) and Use of Transportable Pressure Receptacles Regulations (CDGCPL) 1996 (SI 1996 No. 2092). The Packaging, Labelling and Carriage of Radioactive Material by Rail Regulations (Northern Ireland) (RAMRailNI) 1998 (SR 1998 No. 132).

Park Homes Working Party

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many meetings have been held by his Department's Park Homes working party. [83285]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 4 May 1999]: The Working Party has met five times to date and is making useful progress.

Council Tax

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the advantages and disadvantages of the width of council tax bands G and H; and if he will take steps to reduce the width of these bands before any general revaluation. [83237]

Ms Armstrong: We cannot make any changes to the valuation bands unless we carry out a revaluation of all dwellings. Last year we fully considered whether the current council tax bands should be changed and whether a revaluation was required. We set out our conclusions in the White Paper, "Modern Local Government—In Touch with the People". We explained that the council tax was generally working well and that we do not plan to make any fundamental changes to the council tax, or carry out a revaluation, during the course of this Parliament.

Builders and Roofers

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he has taken to protect the public from dishonest and incompetent builders and roofers. [83146]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer the hon. Member to my oral answer of 13 April 1999, Official Report, columns 1–3, which I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Wentworth (Mr. Healey).

Planning Applications (Freight)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on how many occasions since March 1994, he or his predecessors have intervened during consideration of (a) a development plan and (b) an individual planning application, because the proposals would conflict with the potential to carry freight by water or rail. [82884]

Mr. Raynsford: Since March 1994 the Secretary of State has issued 34 directions to local planning authorities for them to change policies or proposals in their development plans; none of these concerned conflict with the potential to carry freight by water/rail. Information is not held centrally on the reasons for call-in of planning applications by the Secretary of State in that period. Such information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost,

Fenchurch Street Station

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the circumstances which led to the suspension of services and the closure of Fenchurch Street Station on Wednesday, 20 April; and if he will make a statement on the measures taken to avoid future closures. [83305]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I understand from Railtrack that services to Fenchurch Street Station on 20 April were suspended as a result of power failure. The decision to close the station was taken by the train operator, LTS Rail Ltd. Railtrack say that they are committed to reducing the delays to train services caused by infrastructure failure.

Hedgerows

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what proposals he has for strengthening the Hedgerow Regulations; [83043]

(2) what measures he proposes for increasing the percentage of hedgerows protected in the North West Region. [83042]

Mr. Meale: Recommendations to the Government for strengthening the Hedgerows Regulations 1997, put forward by the group which reviewed them, were published in July 1998. The group recommended that research should be commissioned into the impact of their proposals, before final decisions were taken. We are studying the results of that research.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Question Time

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Council what changes she plans to make to the allocation of oral question time for the (a) Secretary of State for Scotland and (b) Secretary of State for Wales; and if she will make a statement. [82828]

Mrs. Beckett: I have asked the Procedure Committee for its views on whether the amount of time allocated for such oral questions should be reduced once the new legislatures are functioning. I understand that the Committee is due to report soon and I will take its views into account before reaching a decision.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Cleveland Police

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) if she will publish the references provided for the former Deputy Chief Constable of the Cleveland Police in support of his application for the post of Deputy Commissioner of Royal Turks and Caicos Islands; [82685]

(2) if she will publish the names of individuals who provided the reference for the former Deputy Chief Constable of Cleveland Police for the post of Deputy Commissioner of Royal Turks and Caicos Islands. [82686]

Clare Short: It would not be proper for the Department for International Development to disclose the names of those who supply references for individuals applying for posts with the department.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Genetically Modified Crops

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what evidence he has obtained that contact with some genetically modified crops could lead to antibiotic resistance in humans; and if he will make a statement. [82628]

Mr. Rooker: There is no evidence that contact with genetically modified (GM) crops will lead to antibiotic resistance in humans. The Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes rigorously assesses each application for a GM food before it is allowed onto the market. As part of this assessment, it looks very carefully at the use of antibiotic markers and recommends against approval in those circumstances where it considers that there is a finite risk that their use might give rise to an increase in resistance against clinically important antibiotics.

Draft Food Standards Agency Bill

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what environmental appraisal was made of the draft Food Standards Agency Bill; and what changes were made to the draft Bill as a result. [82854]

Mr. Rooker: We did not consider that the provisions of the draft Bill establishing this new body with a range of enabling powers would themselves have significant implications for the environment. We do however envisage that the individual actions and decisions taken by the Agency in the exercise of its powers will, where relevant, be subject to environmental appraisal.

School Milk

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps his Department is taking to encourage the uptake of the EU subsidy for school milk. [82772]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 4 May 1999]: Last year, my noble Friend Lord Donoughue asked the Intervention Board to promote the EU scheme in England and Wales, and similar exercises were carried out in Scotland and Northern Ireland. The Board is also working to identify ways of simplifying the arrangements.

BSE Inquiry

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many Salmon letters have been sent out by the BSE inquiry in preparation for Phase II of the inquiry; to whom they were sent; how many have been withdrawn; and what is the total cost of providing legal assistance to recipients of letters pertaining to Phase II of the BSE inquiry. [83262]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 4 May 1999]: The distribution of Salmon letters is a confidential process which is entirely a matter for the Committee of Inquiry and individual recipients; I am therefore unable to provide the information requested.

Flood and Coastal Defence

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made in developing targets for flood and coastal defence operating authorities and in developing the Environment Agency's general flood defence supervisory duty. [83462]

Mr. Morley: I am pleased to announce the publication, today, of interim targets for flood and coastal defence operating authorities and elaboration of the Environment Agency's supervisory duty. I am placing a copy in the Library of the House.

The targets are designed to assist in developing a seamless and integrated service of flood forecasting, warning and response as well as a more certain delivery of Government policy towards flood and coastal defence. They follow recommendations, which the Government accepted, in last year's Agriculture Select Committee's report on flood and coastal defence and in the Independent Report on the Easter 1998 floods.

These interim targets will, among other things, set in hand arrangements for flood and coastal defence assets to be identified, recorded on a central database and their integrity assessed. There are also targets in relation to other important issues such as completion and implementation of Water Level Management Plans and Shoreline Management Plans, as well as wider environmental objectives.

These targets, and elaboration of the Environment Agency's supervisory duty, have been developed in full co-operation with the Agency, the Association of Drainage Authorities and the Local Government Association and in consultation with a wide range of relevant organisations. I have been impressed by the strong support we have had both for the overall approach we have adopted and for the particular measures we are introducing.

A more comprehensive set of targets, and further elaboration of the Environment Agency's supervisory duty, will be developed over the next year for adoption from March 2000. We will continue to work in a consultative way and I shall continue to keep Parliament informed of developments.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Wednesday 5 May. [82891]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I will have further such meetings later today.

Departmental Staff (Ethnic Origin)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister if he will provide a breakdown, in numerical and percentage terms, of the ethnic origin at 1 March of (a) his private office, (b) Government special advisers, (c) the No. 10 Policy Unit and (d) No. 10 Downing Street staff in total. [78505]

The Prime Minister [pursuant to his reply, 14 April 1999, c. 238–39]: There is an error in the figures in the table setting out the ethnic origin of all Downing Street staff. The figures should have read:

Total	Ethnic minority	Ethnic minority (per cent.)
146	7	4.8

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Rugby League World Cup

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what (a) financial and (b) other assistance his Department is providing to the Rugby League World Cup. [83077]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 4 May 1999]: Firstly, I congratulate the Rugby Football League (RFL) on their successful bid for this major international sporting event and look forward to a world-beating competition next year.

The RFL have been in close contact with UK Sport both before and after bidding for this event and are currently drawing up a business plan which will enable UK Sport to make a full assessment of their financial requirements. I offered my support as venue sponsor for staging the draw for this prestigious event, which took place on 26 April, and I would welcome the opportunity to become involved in profile raising events, in co-ordination with the RFL's strategy for promoting the World Cup.

Television Licence Fee

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the panel on the television licence fee is due to report. [83292]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 4 May 1999]: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 12 January 1999, Official Report, columns 131–32, the BBC funding review panel will report to him by the end of July this year. There will then be a period of public consultation.

TREASURY

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each of the years 1997–98 to 2001–02 all cross-departmental budgets, the spending accounted for by each and a breakdown of how that spending is allocated between the departmental totals in Table A1 of the 1998 Comprehensive Spending Review. [68391]

Mr. Milburn: The table sets out the information requested. Cross-departmental budgets are defined for this purpose as those budgets expenditure from which is accounted for by more than one department.

In addition, there are several other programmes which are subject to joint financial management and planning arrangements between two or more departments, but which are accounted for on one department's vote. The Single Regeneration Budget falls into this category, as do the Sure Start programme and the single asylum budget established in the Comprehensive Spending Review. The CSR also established joint strategic planning arrangements for the criminal justice system and on drugs, and similar arrangements are being developed for DETR and MAFF's countryside and rural development programmes.

Year/budget	Spending (£ million)	Allocation between totals in Table A1
1997–98
Welfare to Work	143	own line in table
1998–99

The costs of collecting information on the costs incurred to date by each review, task force and advisory body are disproportionate.

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a list of (1) task forces and (2) policy reviews established by his Department since May 1997 which (a) had external members recruited by way of public advertisement, and details of any person so appointed and (b) engaged in public consultation exercises, and the form that these took. [74458]

Ms Hewitt: The Taskforces and reviews established by the Chancellor's departments since May 1997 which had members recruited by public advertisement or undertook public consultation are listed.

1. The Comprehensive Spending review:
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement.
   b. The terms of reference were made available. Extensive consultations were undertaken in the course of 24 main departmental and 6 cross departmental reviews. Individual departments also approached interested bodies.
2. Review of North Sea Fiscal regime
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement.
   b. Industry views were invited and discussions took place between Summer 1997 and March 1998. The Chancellor announced on 7 September 1998 in a press release that the Government had been monitoring changes in oil prices and that at the current low level of oil prices it would not be right at this stage to proceed with reform of the regime.
3. Review of Charity Taxation
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement
   b. A consultation document was published on 9 March 1999.
4. Review of Alcohol and Tobacco Fraud
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement
   b. A Joint Working Party was formed, drawn from the main alcohol and tobacco trade associations and interested Departments Representations were invited from anyone who felt they could contribute to the review. Since the Review was published in July 1998 further consultation groups have been formed with the trade to explore the costs to industry of implementing measures recommended by the Review.
5. Review of the Revenue Effect of a reduced Rate of VAT for Energy Efficient Material and alternative options for targeted relief to help those on low incomes to save energy.
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement.
   b. Discussions have been held with representatives bodies
6. Review of research and development
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement.
   b. A consultation document was published on 17 March 1998, comments were also invited in respect of various Inland Revenue technical notes published 14 January and 10 March 1999.

7. Review of the calculation of vehicle excise duty for lorries
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement.
   b. No public consultation. A number of consultation groups, and an advisory panel including industry representatives and environmentalists.
8. Review of Public/Private Partnership Options for the Royal Mint
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement.
   b. The Economic Secretary invited all major stakeholders to contribute to the review.
9. Review of Graduated Vehicle Excise Duty for cars
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement.
   b. A consultation document was issued.
10. Consultation on a potential Aggregates Tax
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement.
   b. A consultation document was published on 15 June 1998.
11. Review of Double Taxation of companies
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement.
   b. A discussion paper was published on 12 March 1999
12. Review of General Anti Avoidance Rule
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement.
   b. A consultation document was published on 5 October 1998
13. Review of VAT Registration Limits
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement.
   b. A consultation document was published and meeting held with business.
14. VAT Group Treatment
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement.
   b. A consultation document was published and meetings held with business.
15. Review of Employee Share Ownership
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement.
   b. A consultation document was issued on 18 December 1998. Technical notes issued on 10 March 1999.
16. Taskforce on the Industrial Use of Energy
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement.
   b. A consultation document was published in June 1998.
   c. A report was published in November 1998.
17. Review of Banking Services in the UK
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement
   b. A consultation document was published on 25 January 1999
18. Efficiency Review of the Office for National Statistics
   a. A firm of consultants, KPMG, was appointed after a public competition.
   b. No external public consultation has been undertaken.
19. Private Finance Taskforce
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement.
   b. Draft standardisation documents were published for comment in October 1998. A consultation document on accounting PFI transactions was published in January 1999.
20. Task force on Banks' Assistance to Credit Unions
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement.
   b. Regional discussion fora to listen to people's views have been held in Birmingham, Liverpool, Edinburgh and Newcastle.
21. Policy Action team: Business
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement.
   b. Regional discussion fora to listen to people's views have been held in Birmingham, Liverpool, Edinburgh and Newcastle.
22. Policy Action Team: Access to Financial Services
   a. No external members recruited by public advertisement.
   b. Regional discussion fora to listen to people's views have been held in Birmingham, Liverpool, Edinburgh and Newcastle. A range of organisations have also been invited to make their view known.
23. Enterprise Management Incentives scheme
   a. No external members.
   b. Technical note issued 10 March 1999.
24. Review of Company Car Taxation
   a. No external members.
   b. Press notices on 9 March 1999 invited views on the reform
25. Further review of capital gains of companies
   a. No external members
   b. Informal meetings with representative bodies. A Working Group has been set up.
26. Review of Landfill Tax
   a. No external members
   b. A business brief was issued inviting comments.

Most Taskforces and reviews are short term exercises established to give thorough consideration to important and difficult issues. External members are invited to sit on some reviews and Taskforces to contribute specific experience and expertise. In such cases, public advertising would not be appropriate and would incur disproportionate cost.

Since 1 October 1998, appointments to those Taskforces and reviews which qualify for classification as advisory non-departmental public bodies have come within the remit of the Commissioner for public appointments.

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list all those task forces and policy reviews with external members established by his Department since May 1997 which have set up (a) sub-groups, (b) working parties and (c) other subsidiary committees; [79251]

(2) if he will list for all task forces and policy reviews with external members established by his Department since May 1997 (a) their dates of establishment, (b) those which have issued final reports and their dates of publication, (c) those which have been terminated and their dates of termination and (d) for those bodies still in existence, expected reporting and termination dates. [79274]

Ms Hewitt: The information on task forces and policy reviews with external members established by the Chancellor's departments is listed.

[1] Expected date

Additionally, those which have set up (a), subgroups, (b) working parties and (c) other subsidiary committees are as follows:

Comprehensive Spending Review: a, b, c

Review of Alcohol and Tobacco Duties: a, b

Task force on tax and benefits: a, b, c

New Deal Task force: a, b

Policy Action Team: Access to financial services: a.

Inland Revenue Documents

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the latest draft of (a) the Inland Revenue self assessment computations form and (b) the Inland Revenue income tax calculations flowchart for 1999–2000. [81704]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue is currently working on the 1999–2000 drafts for the self assessment tax calculation and tax calculation guide to include all necessary changes including those coming from the Budget. These documents are, at this stage, in the process of change from the 1998–99 versions. Further work will be carried out during the course of this year including consultation with the representative bodies and usability testing with taxpayers. Final drafts should be available towards the end of 1999 once this process has been completed.

Additional Personal Allowance

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the abolition of the additional personal tax allowance in relation to carers; and if he will introduce a new allowance or credit to assist working carers with the costs of caring. [80937]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 16 April 1999]: The additional personal allowance is to be abolished as part of the package of reforms leading to the introduction of the children's tax credit. It is primarily claimed by people who are not married and living with their spouse and have one or more qualifying children resident with them, but in a minority of cases it is claimed by married people who have a totally incapacitated spouse and a qualifying child resident with them. Most people in this situation will benefit from the introduction of the children's tax credit, which will be worth more than twice as much as the additional personal allowance.

Health Insurance

Mr. Efford: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the letter of 16 July 1997 from the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe to the hon. Member for Staffordshire, Moorlands (Charlotte Atkins) regarding permanent health insurance schemes for employees, what steps he has taken to monitor the sound and prudent management of such schemes; and if he has found it necessary to take action under the Insurance Companies Act 1982. [82169]

Ms Hewitt: None. In the first instance, the management of such schemes is a matter for the insurers themselves. However, most insurers have undertaken to abide by the Association of British Insurers Codes of Practice.

The statutory regulation of insurance companies aims principally at ensuring that only properly authorised insurers carry on business in the United Kingdom; that there is sound and prudent management; and that there are systems of managerial and financial control sufficient to ensure that an authorised company is able to meet its liabilities to policyholders and potential policyholders. In the performance of the administrative and supervisory tasks contracted out to them by the Treasury, the Financial Services Authority will take account of the criteria of sound and prudent management set out in Schedule 2A of the 1982 Act when reaching a view on the management of an authorised insurance company.

Income Tax (Married Couples)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the number of married couples in which the eldest spouse turns 65 years after 5 April 2000 in the period (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02; and how many will pay income tax as a consequence of the loss of the married couples allowance. [80877]

Dawn Primarolo: The number of married couples in which the eldest spouse turns 65 after 5 April in both 2000–01 and 2001–02 is not known. It is therefore not possible to estimate the number who will pay income tax as a consequence of the loss of the Married Couples Allowance.

National Insurance

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the revenue effect of reducing national insurance contributions by 0.5 per cent. for those employed in central Government and associated public bodies; [82749]

(2) if he will estimate the revenue effect of reducing the national insurance charge by 0.5 per cent. for all those employed in or by local government. [82751]

Dawn Primarolo: A reliable estimate could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in work are paying contributions of less than 25 times the lower earnings limit every year. [82697]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 4 May 1999]: Based on the DSS Lifetime Labour Market Database, there were 2.2 million people with Class 1 and/or Class 2 contributions paid on earnings less than 25 times the Lower Earnings Limit (£58) in the 1995–96 tax year. The figures are based on those who have actually paid contributions at the full rate. They exclude women paying Reduced Rate Class 1 contributions and do not take any credited contributions into account. However, they do include students and others working for only part of the year.

Fair Trade Products

Ms Ward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to introduce fair trade products at (a) meetings, (b) events and (c) catering facilities within his Department. [82867]

Ms Hewitt: In purchasing goods and services for these and other purposes, all Departments will take full account of the Government's policy of seeking value for money having due regard to propriety and regularity.

Financial Services Authority

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to ensure that the Financial Services Authority applies regulatory requirements equally across different distribution channels within particular market sectors. [83102]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 4 May 1999]: The Government intend that the Financial Services Authority (FSA) should have statutory objectives setting out what the Government expect it to deliver. It is for FSA to determine how to achieve those objectives, bearing in mind the circumstances of the different market sectors it covers.

Alcohol and Tobacco Fraud

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much the Government have spent implementing the recommendations of the Alcohol and Tobacco Fraud Review since its publication in January 1998; and what stage the consultation exercise which Her Majesty's Customs and Excise is currently undertaking with the trade has reached. [83147]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 4 May 1999]: The Alcohol and Tobacco Fraud Review (ATFR) was published in July 1998 as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review. The Government have allocated £35 million to Customs and Excise over three financial years from 1999–2000 to implement the ATFR recommendations, of which £15 million is for 1999–2000. In addition, the Government approved a claim on the Reserve for Customs during 1998–99 for £9 million which has enabled Customs to make an early start on implementing the ATFR.

The consultation exercise with the trade which seeks to establish the cost to industry of implementing those recommendations which involve procedural changes to tighten up on fraud is at an advanced stage. Subject to the outcome of that consultation, a final decision will be taken on how and when such measures are to be implemented during 1999.

HIPC Initiative

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the change in the annual debt repayments of each country taking part in the HIPC Initiative as a result of that initiative. [82504]

Ms Hewitt: The information can be found in the IMF Paper, HIPC Initiative—Perspectives on the current framework and options for change—supplementation on costing (13 April 1999).

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to alter the criteria for countries seeking to benefit under the HIPC Initiative. [82506]

Ms Hewitt: The Chancellor and the International Development Secretary announced their proposals for delivering faster, deeper and wider debt relief on 4 March.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which countries have qualified to benefit under the HIPC Initiative to date. [82505]

Ms Hewitt: There are 41 countries classified as HIPCs. Details on which countries have qualified can be found in the IMF Paper: Debt Initiative for the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPCs).

Amusement Machines

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the revenue from amusement machine licence duty on 10p stake amusements-with-prizes trivia machines in the years (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02; [82312]

(2) what forecast he has made of the revenue from amusement machine licence duty in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01, (c) 2001–02. [82314]

Mrs. Roche: There are no forecasts at the level of disaggregation specified in the question. The March 1999 FSBR forecast total betting and gaming receipts of £1.5 billion in 1999–2000.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Government's policy regarding the taxation of 10p stake amusements-with-prizes trivia machines. [82311]

Mrs. Roche: All 10p stake amusement with prizes trivia machines bear amusement machine licence duty of £645 per annum and where applicable, the takings from such machines are liable to value added tax at the rate of 17.5 per cent.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations he received in 1998–99 regarding amusement machine licence duty. [82313]

Mrs. Roche: Between 1 April 1998 and 31 March 1999 Treasury Ministers received 388 representations regarding amusement machine licence duty.

Euro

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans the Bank of England has to carry out further euro note printing trials. [83464]

Ms Hewitt: Having completed the pre-production trialing of the Euro notes due to be introduced in 2002, the European Central Bank has asked the Bank of England to assist with the next stage of technical preparations. This is to produce sample banknotes for each denomination to be used for reference purposes by those countries participating in production later this year. The bank will be involved in printing a further 1.5 million Euro 500 notes, which is equivalent to less than one day's normal production of Sterling notes. The cost of some £60,000 will be paid out of the proceeds of the note issue.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Departmental Legal Business

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his Department's policy when (a) conducting legal proceedings and (b) seeking legal advice as to the circumstances in which Queen's Counsel should be instructed; and for each of the last three years (i) on how many occasions his Department instructed Queen's Counsel and (ii) what was the total cost of instructing Queen's Counsel. [81758]

Mr. Byers: The DTI's policy is similar to that of other departments. The Crown Prosecution Service, the Treasury Solicitor's Department, the Serious Fraud Office and the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers predominantly use junior counsel when it is necessary to instruct counsel to provide legal advice or to conduct legal proceedings.

In civil cases, the two First Treasury Counsel are both junior counsel and they will advise and represent the Government without a Queen's Counsel in many of their important cases. In addition, the Attorney-General maintains four panels of junior Counsel whom Departments are expected to use for the majority of the Government's civil litigation. The approval of the Attorney-General or the Solicitor-General is required before a Queen's Counsel can be instructed to appear for any Government Department in civil litigation.

A panel of Standing Counsel who are all junior counsel, exists in London and the South Eastern circuit to provide advice and to handle most work at the Central Criminal Court and Crown Court in that area. More generally, the Department maintains circuit based lists of junior counsel to conduct almost all its criminal casework in the Crown Court in England and Wales. Within and outside London, Queen's Counsel are instructed occasionally in very serious or complex casework prosecuted by the Crown.

In determining the level of counsel to use, the Department will consider the individual circumstances of each case. It will take into account, inter alia, the importance and sensitivity of the case, the complexity of the law, the weight and complexity of the evidence, and the degree of experience and expertise required before deciding whether to instruct Queen's Counsel or junior counsel.

The number of occasions on which the Department has instructed Queen's Counsel in the last three years, and the cost of doing so, is not collected centrally and could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost.

Holiday Makers (Carbon Monoxide Poisoning)

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he takes to ensure that holiday companies ensure that holiday makers are safe from carbon monoxide poisoning in accommodation rented through them abroad. [82652]

Dr. Howells: While the Government are, of course, concerned about the safety of British holidaymakers when travelling overseas, the safety standards applying to rented accommodation are subject to national regulation over which Her Majesty's Government have no jurisdiction.

Nevertheless, holiday companies, and others, in the United Kingdom offering or selling package holidays are covered by "The Package Travel, Package Holidays and Package Tours Regulations 1992". The Regulations provide that those who offer package holidays are liable to consumers for the proper performance of contracts, including, amongst other things, supplying accommodation which is safe.

Disqualified Accountants

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the accountants who have been disqualified from public practice as a result of the criticisms of their conduct in his Department's inspectors' reports in the past 10 years. [82674]

Dr. Howells: Disciplinary action is a matter for the accountancy body responsible. The following table details accountants who have been mentioned in inspectors' reports and who have been either excluded or suspended from membership of their accountancy body in the past ten years.

Companies Act Inspection	Name of individual	Disciplinary action
Edencorp plc	Mr. G. J. Cook	Exclusion
Barlow Clowes Gilt Managers Limited	Mr. J. A. B. Pilkington	Exclusion
	Mr. D. C. Mitchell	Exclusion
James Ferguson Holdings plc	Mr. C. F. Newman	Exclusion
	Mr. I. M. Crabtree	Suspension for 1 year
Atlantic Computers plc Atlantic Computer Systems plc	Mr. P. L. Goldie	Exclusion

Accounting Firms (Money Laundering)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the powers available to him for investigating the affairs of accountancy firms judged by the High Court to have knowingly laundered money. [82648]

Dr. Howells: The Department has no powers as envisaged by my hon. Friend; money laundering is primarily a matter for the police and the conduct of accountancy firms for their professional body.

Arms Exports (Yugoslavia)

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library the documents relating to arms exports to Yugoslavia or the former Yugoslavia involving the defence contractors BMARC and Astra. [82703]

Dr. Howells: The statutory and accounting records of Astra Holdings plc and Springfield Road Limited, formerly known as British Manufacture and Research Co. Ltd (BMARC), are under the control of the official receiver following their winding up by the court.

Access to the records is governed by insolvency legislation and the direction of the court and, as such, at this time there is no proposal to remove the records from the official receiver who will continue to consider requests to inspect them.

Competition

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he is taking to improve the enforcement of fair competition in the United Kingdom economy. [82690]

Dr. Howells: The Competition Act 1998 will introduce tough new powers to deal with anti-competitive agreements and abuses of market dominance when its main provisions are brought into force on 1 March 2000. These include strong powers of investigation, a power to take interim measures where necessary pending the completion of an investigation, powers to direct undertakings to bring infringements to an end and powers to impose penalties for breach of the prohibitions. The Director General of Fair Trading has the main responsibility for enforcement of the new Act and extra resources have been provided to the Office of Fair Trading for that purpose.

Fair Trade Products

Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangements his Department is proposing to introduce for the provision of fair trade products (a) at meetings, (b) in its catering facilities and (c) at events sponsored by it. [82744]

Mr. Byers: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary today, Official Report, column 410.

Milk Marque

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 28 April 1999, Official Report, column 203, if he will indicate the timetable for addressing each consideration delaying the publication of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on Milk Marque. [83038]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 4 May 1999]: Publication of the report is not delayed. The guidance referred to in my previous answer explains that there is no statutory deadline for publication of MMC monopoly reports, and sets out the factors which may affect timing.

It is the Department's view that quoting expected publication dates may provoke unwarranted speculation. The content of reports is invariably commercially sensitive and we do not wish to damage companies by encouraging speculation.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 13 April 1999, Official Report, column 95, on the milk market investigation, what practical obstacles are preventing the publication of the MMC report on the supply of milk. [82858]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 30 April 1999]: The Department of Trade and Industry has provided information about the publication arrangements for monopoly reports at paragraphs 8.1–8.3 of its publication "Guidance on DTI procedures for handling Monopoly references and reports", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Companies

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many companies satisfy the Companies Act 1985 definitions of (a) small, (b) medium and (c) large companies. [82932]

Dr. Howells: The Registrar of Companies does not hold information on company turnover, number of employees and balance sheet totals and, without this, it is not possible to determine precisely the numbers of companies which fall into each class.

During 1997–98 annual accounts registered at Companies House for each class of company were:

abbreviated (small) 38.2 per cent.

abbreviated (medium) 0.6 per cent.

full accounts 42.5 per cent.

others (dormant etc.) 18.7 per cent.

Using these percentages based on the 1.2 million companies currently on the register, it could therefore be argued that there are approximately 458,000 small companies, 7,000 medium companies and 510,000 large companies within the Companies Act 1985 definition.

Robert Maxwell

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when inspectors were appointed to investigate the affairs of the business dealings of the late Robert Maxwell; what has been the cost of the investigation to date; when he expects the report to be published; and if he will make a statement on the timescale for the report's publication. [82905]

Dr. Howells: There is no inspection into "the business dealings" of the late Robert Maxwell although inspectors were appointed on 8 June 1992 under Companies Act powers to investigate and report on the affairs and membership of Mirror Group Newspapers plc. They were asked to look, in particular, at the offers for sale of the company's shares in early 1991. The cost of the inspection to date has been £7,467,805. The inspectors have not yet reported to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. A decision on publication will be taken when the report has been received and fully considered.

"Building Confidence in Electronic Commerce"

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many responses he has received to the consultation document, "Building Confidence in Electronic Commerce". [83019]

Mr. Wills: I am pleased to say that we have received 246 responses to "Building Confidence in Electronic Commerce—A Consultation Document". A list of respondents—excluding those who have asked for their response to be kept confidential—has been placed in the Library of the House. The responses are currently being carefully studied and a summary will be published in due course. The Electronic Commerce Bill will be introduced into Parliament later in this session.

Company Investigations

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list (a) the investigations currently being carried out by his Department under the Companies Acts, Financial Services Act 1986 and the Insurance Companies Acts, (b) the cost of each investigation, (c) the manner in which the costs are being apportioned and (d) the likely date of publication. [82929]

Dr. Howells: My Department undertakes a number of confidential investigations under the Companies Act 1989, Insurance Companies Act 1982 and Financial Services Act 1986 for which there is no provision for the reports to be published. A list of current inspections which have been announced and their cost is set out in the table. The inspectors have yet to submit their reports and no decisions on publication can be taken until completion.

ACAS

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to receive the Annual report for the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service. [83393]

Mr. Byers: The ACAS Report for 1998 is being laid before both Houses of Parliament today. Copies are available from the Vote Office.

British Nuclear Fuels

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if British Nuclear Fuels Ltd is required to seek the (i) advice and (ii) permission of his Department before making investments in companies. [82507]

Mr. Battle: BNFL is a Public Limited Company wholly owned by the Government and subject to the Companies Acts. BNFL is run on a commercial basis, with responsibility for day to day management and operations resting with the Board of the company. BNFL's plans for major investments are discussed with my Department as they arise. These together with BNFL's overall investment strategy are formally reviewed each year in the context of the company's Corporate Plan when it is submitted to Ministers for approval.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if British Nuclear Fuels Ltd sought the advice of his Department before investing in Pangea Resources Ltd; [82511]

(2) if Ministers gave agreement for British Nuclear Fuels Ltd to invest in Pangea Resources Ltd. [82512]

Mr. Battle: No. I also refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 23 March 1999, Official Report, column 140.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions his Department had with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office concerning British Nuclear Fuels Ltd's plan to invest in Pangea Resources Ltd prior to such investment being made. [82513]

Mr. Battle: My Department had no such discussions with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on this matter.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he was first informed of British Nuclear Fuels Ltd's investment in Pangea Resources Ltd; and if he will make a statement. [82510]

Mr. Battle: I was informed of BNFL's involvement in the Pangea project by my officials in September 1997.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the companies in which British Nuclear Fuels Limited has invested. [82509]

Mr. Battle: Details of BNFL's fixed asset and current asset investments, including its subsidiary and associated undertakings, are given in the notes to BNFL's 1998 Annual Report and Accounts, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Plutonium

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment his Department has made of the valuations assigned by the Japanese utilities to separated plutonium and mixed oxide fuel. [82468]

Mr. Battle: None. This is a matter for the commercial judgment of the Japanese utilities concerned as owners of the plutonium.

Lung Diseases (Miners)

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the impact of the miners' compensation package for lung-related diseases in Wales. [82113]

Mr. Battle: Agreement on the handling arrangements for claims from former British Coal miners suffering from lung related diseases, in both Wales and England was announced in the High Court in Cardiff on 26 March. A contract for the delivery of a national spirometry programme has now been awarded, which will enable miners to receive fair compensation. We aim to have thirty centres, the first of which opened in Newport during April, operating throughout the coalfield communities by the Summer. Results from these testing centres will enable offers of interim payments and some full and final payments to be made later this month whilst we tender for the medical services needed to deliver the medical assessment process. I am hopeful that significant numbers of full and final settlement offers for valid claims will start flowing early in the second half of this year.

In the meantime, the Government have made payments totalling £28 million to former coal miners and widows, £6.83 million being made to claimants living in Wales.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Intelligence (External Agencies)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to change the methods used to assess intelligence from external agencies. [71833]

Mr. Robin Cook: I would refer the hon. Member to the Government's response, which I presented to the House on 13 April (Cmnd 4325), to paragraph 21 of the second report from the Foreign Affairs Committee on Sierra Leone.

Kosovo

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his oral answer of 20 April 1999, Official Report, column 681, on Kosovo, if he will define the term "organised resistance"; and if he will make a statement. [82480]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I refer the hon Member to the statement by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 26 April 1999, Official Report, columns 21–36.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received from his officials in Sri Lanka about mass graves at Chemanni and at the Jaffna football stadium; and if he will make a statement. [83125]

Mr. Fatchett: We are deeply concerned about reports that several hundred bodies of people who "disappeared" in army custody in 1996–97 may be in a mass grave at Chemmani in Jaffna. I raised this subject with the Sri Lankan authorities while I was in Colombo in November last year. Our High Commissioner in Colombo has pressed on numerous occasions for a prompt and thorough investigation. The magisterial inquiry into the mass graves will reconvene in mid-June.

We are aware of reports that a further mass grave was uncovered at the Duraiyappah football stadium in Jaffna in March. A preliminary investigation of the site took place on 7 April. We understand that further excavations will take place on 14 May. We will continue to monitor events closely.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what part the United Kingdom is to play in the international monitoring of the forthcoming elections in Sri Lanka; and if he will make a statement. [83124]

Mr. Fatchett: The Southern Provincial Council elections are scheduled to take place on 10 June. These will not be subject to international monitoring. However, the UK is following the election process closely and will stay in touch with local election monitors.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what requests he has made to the Sri Lankan Government for information on the mass graves found in the Duraiyappah stadium in Jaffna; and if he will make a statement. [83127]

Mr. Fatchett: A preliminary investigation of the site took place on 7 April. We understand that further excavations will take place on 14 May. We will continue to monitor events closely.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will review the British Government's policy on the granting of export licences for arms sales to Sri Lanka. [83150]

Mr. Fatchett: Each licence application is considered scrupulously on a case by case basis against our national criteria and the EU Code of Conduct. We pay particular attention to the Sri Lankan Government's human rights record and its legitimate defence and domestic security interests. HMG do not issue licences if there is a clearly identifiable risk that the equipment might be used for internal repression or international aggression.

Human Rights

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what criteria he uses to assess the human rights records of foreign Governments; and whether they include the number of disappeared people. [83126]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We assess the human rights records of all countries according to their adherence to, and implementation of, the standards laid down in international human rights instruments. As stated in the 1992 Declaration of the UN General Assembly on the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance, any act of enforced disappearance is a grave and flagrant violation of the human rights and fundamental freedoms proclaimed in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and reaffirmed and developed in other international instruments. We support the work of the UN Working Group of Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances which raises individual cases with Governments and reports annually to the UN Commission on Human Rights.

Colombia

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of Colombia concerning the abduction of human rights workers Julio Ernesto Gonzalez and Everado de Jesus Puertas in January. [82889]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Julio Ernesto Gonzalez and Everado de Jesus Puerta were murdered on 30 January by suspected paramilitaries. Although our Embassy in Bogota raises specific cases with the Colombian Government, this case was not raised with them.

The Colombian authorities are, however, aware of our concern about the safety of all human rights activists in Colombia. We raise the subject of human rights on a regular basis with the Colombian Government, most recently when Vice-President Gustavo Bell called on me at the Foreign Office on 27 April.

Birth Certificates

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those purposes for which his Department and its executive agencies require a birth certificate to be furnished by (a) employees, (b) contractors, (c) those applying for employment or contracts and (d) others. [82898]

Mr. Fatchett: The Department requires those applying for employment to provide confirmation of their identity as part of the recruitment process. Most provide a passport. Contractors are required to provide confirmation of identity in order to obtain security clearance.

JMT Charlesworth

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the involvement of JMT Charlesworth Ltd. in the attempted transfer of military equipment from Belgium to Eritrea; and what discussions he has had with his (a) Belgian, (b) Dutch and (c) German counterparts in this matter. [83008]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Richmond Park (Dr. Tonge) on 16 January 1999, Official Report, column 752.

We have had no subsequent Government to Government discussions with European partners over this matter but we continue to monitor this case.

Correspondence

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the delay in answering the hon. Member for Leicester, East's letter dated 8 March, concerning Mr. Solanki, of 49 Yorkshire Road, whose wife has been refused admission under reference R/98/3895. [82935]

Mr. Fatchett: I regret the delay in answering my hon. Friend's letter. This was caused by staff shortages in the Migration and Visa Division Correspondence Unit during the month of March.

Edgar Fernandes

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Minister of State, the right hon. Member for Gateshead, East and Washington, West (Ms Quin) will take up the case of Edgar Fernandes on her forthcoming visit to Malta. [82936]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend is currently in Malta. She has been briefed on this case and will raise it. Our High Commissioner and Vice-Consul in Valletta continue to take every opportunity to remind the Maltese Government of our interest in the extradition of Mr. Mohammed Abdul Monem Abbas Aly.

British Council (Damascus)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 19 January 1999, Official Report, column 436, what was the cost of damage to the British Council offices in Damascus; and if it has been repaired. [83175]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 4 May 1999]: The cost of repairs to the damage to the British Council offices in Damascus was £90,000; the office has been repaired.

Peacekeeping (UN)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 29 April 1999, Official Report, column 266, if he will identify the articles of the UN Charter where provision is made for those circumstances relating to justifiable use of force, in support of purposes laid down by the Security Council, but which are not subject to specific ratification by the Security Council. [83306]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding answer 4 May 1999]: There is no general doctrine of humanitarian necessity in international law. Cases have nevertheless arisen (as in Kosovo) when, in the light of all the circumstances, a limited use of force is justifiable under international law in support of purposes laid down by the Security Council but without the council's express authorisation when that is the only means to avert an immediate and overwhelming humanitarian catastrophe. Such cases would in the nature of things be exceptional and would depend on an objective assessment of the factual circumstances at the time and on the terms of relevant decisions of the Security Council bearing on the situation in question.

Iraq

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the latest position on the provision of food and medicines in Iraq; what reports he has received on the number of children suffering in Iraq because of the lack of adequate medicines and other health supplies; and what plans he has to assist them. [83293]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 4 May 1999]: The export of food and medicines has never been prohibited under sanctions. We are aware of claims that large numbers of children are dying every month. We have some concerns about the original sources of this information and the way the data have been interpreted. According to the most recent UN report on the implementation of "oil for food", the UN humanitarian programme is making a real difference to the humanitarian situation in Iraq. It made clear that in the north, where the UN is responsible for distribution, there were very few if any shortages of essential drugs, and malnutrition was decreasing. In the centre and south, however, the Iraqi Government refuse to engage constructively in the programme. They refuse to make efforts to prioritise properly what is purchased for the programme, to target it towards the most vulnerable, or to improve the poor distribution system.

We are determined to do what we can to improve all aspects of the humanitarian situation. Together with the Netherlands, the UK has tabled a draft Security Council resolution which attempts to translate the work of the three UN Iraq panels into action. On the humanitarian side, our draft resolution brings together a whole range of measures including lifting the ceiling on Iraqi oil exports under "oil for food", streamlining Sanctions Committee approval procedures, allowing local procurement and the payment of local costs, and commissioning expert advice on how to increase Iraq's oil production. These measures should make significant improvements to the humanitarian situation in Iraq.

Venice Commission

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the United Kingdom will join the Council of Europe's European Commission for Democracy through Law, the Venice Commission. [83556]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: HMG have given thorough consideration to the merits of the United Kingdom becoming a member of the Venice Commission and have decided to do so with immediate effect.

The Commission is a consultative body of independent experts whose principal work is in advising the new democracies of Central and Eastern Europe on constitutional reform. It provided legal advice to the international negotiators in the run-up to and during the Kosovar negotiations in France in February and March this year. The Commission has been a major contributor to electoral and constitutional reform in Albania and Croatia, and is assisting the Office of the High Representative in Bosnia and Herzegovina on constitutional reform and the revision of the Parliamentary Electoral Law.

Tibetan Hunger Strikers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will request the First

Secretary based in Geneva to visit the three Tibetans on hunger strike in Place des Nations. [82827]

Mr. Fatchett: We are concerned about the well-being of the hunger strikers who have drawn attention to the issue of human rights in Tibet. We hope that they will end their fast. We have no plans to visit them.

Tibet

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reference he made to the situation in Tibet in his verbal address to the 55 UN Commission on Human Rights. [82859]

Mr. Fatchett: Along with our EU partners, we remain deeply concerned about the human rights situation in Tibet. In Geneva, these concerns were expressed in statements by the EU Presidency, on behalf of all EU Member States, on 23 March, 31 March and 23 April.

Japan

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many employees of BNFL are employed in, or attached to, the British Embassy in Japan; and if he will list such persons and the nature of their relationship to the embassy. [83039]

Mr. Fatchett: The British Embassy in Tokyo has one secondee from BNFL, Mr. Tom McLaughlan, who serves as Counsellor (Atomic Energy).

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department has had with Tokyo Electric Power Company concerning the possibility of allowing Japanese intermediate nuclear waste to be stored at Sellafield indefinitely. [83264]

Mr. Fatchett: There have been no discussions between my Department and the Tokyo Electric Power Company concerning the indefinite storage of Japanese intermediate nuclear waste at Sellafield.

HEALTH

Children's Hospice Services

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the (a) allocation by his Department and (b) expenditure by each health authority for supporting children's hospice services in each of the last four years. [78877]

Mr. Hutton: Health authorities receive general allocations to allow them to commission health services for their resident populations, including services to meet the needs of children suffering from life threatening and terminal conditions provided through children's hospices. Information on the amount health authorities spend from their general allocation on these services is not collected centrally.

Pollution

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies his Department has (a) carried out and (b) commissioned on the effects of pollution on health since January 1998; which of these have been published to date; and when he expects the remainder to be published. [82679]

Ms Jowell: The Department has carried out and commissioned a number of studies on the health effects of pollution since January 1998, some through the Medical Research Council and others jointly with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions. Copies of the details of these studies have been placed in the Library. It is not the Department's policy to publish the findings separately, though researchers are encouraged to publish their findings in peer-reviewed journals and in the scientific press on completion of the studies. The vast majority are disseminated in this way.

The Department together with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions has co-funded an indoor air pollution research programme as well as research into the non-auditory health effects of noise and the health effects of chemicals in the environment. Together with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, the Health and Safety Executive, the Scottish Office, the Welsh Office and the Department of Health and Social Services in Northern Ireland, the Department has agreed to contribute towards a contract with the Imperial College of Science, Technology and Medicine to form the Small Area Health Statistics Unit (SAHSU). SAHSU has carried out research on the effects of air pollution on health since January 1998.

The Department also manages the National Health Service research and development levy which is used to support research and development of relevance to the National Health Service in hospitals, general practice and other health care settings, and to fund the NHS research and development programme. In addition, the Medical Research Council—which receives most of its income via grant-in-aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry—funds medical research as part of the Government's funding of the science and engineering base.

In addition to those projects lists, the Department expects to issue a major call for proposals on the effects of air pollution on health over the summer.

Advertising (Medicines)

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what procedure a substantive issue could be brought before the courts by (a) the Licensing Authority, (b) the advertiser and (c) other parties once a determination had been made and a notice issued to cease advertising under Schedule 13 of the Medicines (Advertising and Monitoring) Amendment Regulations 1999 (SI 267). [82824]

Ms Jowell: Where a determination has been made and a notice issued to an advertiser to refrain from publishing an advertisement, but the advertiser fails to comply with the notice, the Medicines Control Agency, on behalf of Health Ministers, may prosecute him under paragraph 7 of the Schedule for failure to comply with the notice. The MCA may also apply to the courts for an injunction under regulation 6 of the Monitoring Regulations. The advertiser, or any party who can demonstrate to the courts that he has a legitimate interest, may apply under Order 53 of Schedule 1 to the Civil Procedure Rules 1998 for judicial review of decisions made at any stage of the procedure laid down in the Schedule to the Monitoring Regulations. Parties may also seek a declaration from the High Court that an action of theirs is lawful under Order 15 rule 16 of Schedule 1 to the Civil Procedure Rules.

National Blood Service

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made with the reform of the National Blood Service. [83390]

Mr. Hutton: The National Blood Service is a vital part of the National Health Service and, as such, is expected to provide high quality, cost efficient services. Over the past year, following the report we commissioned from Professor Cash on the Liverpool Blood Centre, the NBS has been working to improve the quality of the services it provides to blood donors, clinicians and patients. But, to achieve lasting improvement, it also needs to modernise the management of the service, both nationally and locally and to develop a clear strategic direction within which all parts of the service can operate. We have therefore approved proposals, submitted by the National Blood Authority, to effect these changes and to ensure a first class future for the National Blood Service.

The existing 3 zone structure into which the National Blood Service is currently organised will be replaced by a single integrated structure. This will improve the performance of the service by creating a greater sense of strategic direction, shared ownership of priorities with the wider NHS and clearer accountabilities. In addition, local services will be enhanced by the appointment of a Blood Centre Head who will lead local service delivery to hospitals and patients.

Copies of the National Blood Authority's plans have been placed in the Library.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Information Meetings

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what network will provide the services provided by the information meeting pilots after 31 May. [82917]

Mr. Hoon: After the pilot information meetings have ceased to operate on 31 May, the Government will consider the lessons to be drawn from the pilot projects, including any lessons as to the types of suppliers best suited to providing such meetings in the future. No decisions on this subject have yet been taken.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what proposals he has for future forms of information meetings following the pilot testing; and when the new system will be established. [82916]

Mr. Hoon: The pilot information meetings are the subject of a major research project. It is, therefore, premature to specify any form for information meetings or date for implementation.

Courts (Disabled Persons)

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if the proposed new helpline for court users with disabilities will be accessible for hearing impaired and speech impaired people through the provision of (a) a textphone facility and (b) the acceptance of calls via the RNID Typetalk service. [83068]

Mr. Hoon: The helpline is not accessible through a textphone service. However, Court Service Users do have access to a textphone service situated at a number of locations, although they are not linked to the helpline. The Court Service disability helpline will accept calls through the RNID Typetalk service.

Office for the Supervision of Solicitors

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what representations he has made to the Law Society about investment in the improvements to the Office for the Supervision of Solicitors. [82756]

Mr. Hoon: Spending by the Law Society on the Office for the Supervision of Solicitors is a matter for the Law Society. However, the Lord Chancellor and I have met the President of the Law Society to discuss the performance of the Office in general terms. The Government propose to take powers in the Access to Justice Bill to establish a new office which will be able to intervene effectively to improve complaints handling by the legal professional bodies.

Sandeep Kaur

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to the letter dated 22 March from the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, the hon. Member for North Warwickshire (Mr. O'Brien), when he expects a hearing before the Immigration Appeal Tribunal in the matter of Sandeep Kaur v the Secretary of State for the Home Department. [83093]

Mr. Hoon: Although no fixed date has been given, the Appeal will be heard during June in Birmingham.

Public Record Office

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list (a) the storage space occupied by the enumerators' books for the 1921–1971 decennial censuses for England and (b) the estimated cost of micro-filming each of these censuses at current prices. [83308]

Mr. Hoon: (a) The storage space occupied by the enumerators' books for the 1921–1971 decennial censuses for England and Wales is 662 linear metres. It is not possible to provide a separate figure for England. (b) It would not be possible to estimate the cost of micro-filming each of these censuses at current prices without incurring disproportionate cost.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list those hon. Members who, since September 1998 have communicated with the Lord Chancellor's Department about the 1921, 1951 and 1961 census returns and have been informed by the Public Record Office that access to these census returns is covered by the Census Act 1920, as amended by the Census (Confidentiality) Act 1991. [83309]

Mr. Hoon: Since September 1998, the Lord Chancellor's Department and the Public Record Office have corresponded with the following hon. Members concerning public access to the 1921, 1951 and 1961 census returns and informed them that access to these census returns is covered by the Census Act 1920, as amended by Census (Confidentiality) Act 1991: the right hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire (Sir B. Mawhinney), my right hon. Friend the Member for Chesterfield (Mr. Benn), the right hon. Member for Skipton and Ripon (Mr. Curry), the right hon. and learned Member for Sleaford and North Hykeham (Mr. Hogg), the hon. Member for South Suffolk (Mr. Yeo), and the hon. Member for Solihull (Mr. J. M. Taylor).

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department how many linear metres of storage space at the Public Record Office are now (a) occupied by records and (b) vacant. [83307]

Mr. Hoon: At the Public Record Office, Kew (a) 153,300 linear metres of storage space are occupied by records and (b) 29,100 linear metres are vacant.

WALES

Class Sizes

6. Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about class sizes in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools in Wales. [82090]

Mr. Michael: In January 1998, the average class size in primary schools was 27 pupils for ordinary classes, 26 for nursery classes and 10 for special classes. Overall, 33 per cent. (97,508) of primary school pupils were in classes with 31 pupils or more. The average class size in secondary schools was 21 pupils.

Significant progress has been made in implementing our commitment to reduce all infant class sizes to 30 pupils or less by the end of this Parliament. £11.3 million has been awarded in grant for 1999–2000. It is estimated that this will solve almost 90 per cent. of the problem of large infant classes in Wales.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Public Services

10. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the earliest date on which the Government will reconsider the powers allowed to the Welsh Assembly to raise additional resources for public services. [82094]

Mr. Michael: The Government have no plans to alter the financing arrangements for the National Assembly as set out in the 1998 Government of Wales Act.

My priority is to make the Assembly deliver bread today not jam tomorrow. The first challenge to the Assembly is to prove itself by being imaginative and effective with the powers it has been given.

Farming Incomes

11. Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about farming incomes in Wales. [82096]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The latest estimates of incomes for full-time farmers in Wales were published in February 1999. The figures show the Cash Income for dairy and livestock farms in Wales is forecast to fall by 21 per cent. in 1998–99, to £17,900.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Small Firms

12. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last met representatives of the Federation of Small Businesses to discuss the situation of small firms. [82097]

Mr. Michael: The Under-Secretary, my hon. Friend the Member for Neath (Mr. Hain), met representatives of FSB Wales formally on 15 February for the launch of their Manifesto for the National Assembly. We both meet representatives of small businesses regularly, including the FSB at both the all Wales and regional branch levels. I expect this constructive dialogue to continue under the National Assembly for Wales which will have the prime responsibility for consultation with business.

Minimum Wage

13. Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the impact of the national minimum wage on the average income in Wales. [82099]

Mr. Michael: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Monmouth (Mr. Edwards) today, Official Report, column 932.

New Deal (Young People)

14. Mr. Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many 18 to 25-year-olds in Wales are in full-time work, training, education or on the environment task force as a result of their participation in the New Deal. [82101]

16. Lorna Fitzsimons: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many 18 to 25-year-olds in Wales are in full-time work, training, education or on the environment task force as a result of their participation in the New Deal. [82103]

Mr. Hain: The latest information indicates that, under the New Deal for 18–24 year olds, some 3,800 young people have found work, over 1,300 are in full-time education and training, almost 700 are on the Environment Task Force, and some 400 are improving their employability through work with the Voluntary Sector.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Official Representation (Brussels)

15. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what preparatory work his Department has undertaken to establish official representation for Wales in Brussels once the National Assembly has come into existence; and if he will make a statement. [82102]

Mr. Hain: Welsh Office officials are in discussion with the various parties involved in order to present proposals to the Assembly.

Women (Political Opportunities)

17. Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to increase opportunities for women in political life in Wales. [82104]

Mr. Michael: I am committed to increasing the representation of women at all levels of Government. Our White Paper called on local government to consider how they could best schedule meetings to allow councillors to combine elected office with work and family commitments and undertook to work with the Equal Opportunities Commission to consider how more women councillors can be encouraged.

We have agreed that official meetings of the National Assembly should be timetabled between 9.00am and 5.30pm to make it easier to combine politics with family life.

I also believe political parties must rise to the challenge of securing greater representation of women amongst their candidates for election.

Welsh Language

18. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to promote the Welsh language. [82105]

Mr. Michael: Steps to promote the Welsh language include providing £5.9 million in grant in aid to the Welsh Language Board in 1999–2000, and putting in place the necessary arrangements to establish the National Assembly as an effective bilingual institution.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Concessionary Travel

19. Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the number of pensioners in Wales who will benefit from the introduction of the concessionary half fare for bus travel. [82106]

26. Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the number of pensioners in Wales who will benefit from the introduction of the concessionary half fare for bus travel. [82114]

Mr. Hain: There are some 580,000 people over the retirement age in Wales. We are keen for them all to have access to concessionary fares schemes which provide at least half-price travel for a bus pass costing no more than £5, and we have ensured that all local authorities are now in a position to operate schemes which meet this minimum standard.

Furthermore, we are working with local authorities and bus operators to prepare the way for the introduction of free bus travel for pensioners over the next two to three years.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Health Spending

20. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the level of health spending per head of population in Wales in 1999–2000 relative to that in England. [82107]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Projected spending per head in 1999–2000 is £907 in Wales; in England it is £806.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Haulage Industry

21. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about the future of the haulage industry in Wales. [82108]

Mr. Hain: The future of the haulage industry in Wales is closely linked with that of the Welsh economy. The prospects for both are excellent. I am aware of the concerns about taxation and competition issues which have been expressed by the industry, which the Government will consider in the recently established Haulage Forum.

Following the transfer of functions, the National Assembly will take a close interest in the haulage industry in Wales.

Milk Marque

22. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many letters he has received from farmers concerned about the future of Milk Marque. [82109]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: I have received nine letters. I have passed the letters to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to take the comments into account in his consideration of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission's (MMC, now known as the Competitions Commission (CC)) report into the Dairy Industry.

Following the transfer of functions, the Dairy Industry in Wales will be a matter for the National Assembly but decisions in respect of recommendations from the Competitions Commission (MMC) will remain the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

Agenda 2000

23. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he met representatives of the farming unions in Wales to discuss the impact of Agenda 2000 on Welsh agriculture. [82110]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Both my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I have met with representatives of the farming unions in Wales on numerous occasions during the negotiations on the Common Agricultural Policy reform component of Agenda 2000. Welsh Office officials are currently assessing how the proposed reforms will affect farmers in Wales and we will be discussing this further with the industry in due course.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Chambers of Commerce

24. Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last met representatives of the chambers of commerce of Wales to discuss the costs of (a) tax and (b) regulations to business. [82111]

Mr. Michael: I have met a wide range of business representatives to discuss issues affecting business. My predecessor met representatives of the South Wales Chambers of Commerce Group formally during his time as Secretary of State for Wales and I am due to meet representatives of the Cardiff Chamber of Commerce in the near future.

Outdoor Education

25. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on provision of outdoor education for pupils in Wales. [82112]

Mr. Hain: Physical Education forms an integral part of the National Curriculum in Wales. Outdoor and adventurous activities form part of the programmes of study for Physical Education at Key Stages 2 to 4. There is compelling evidence that habits formed by young children at primary school age persist into later life and that fit and active children will be much better placed to enjoy a fulfilling and healthy adult life. Elements of "games", such as running, throwing and jumping, that are taught as a compulsory part of the primary school curriculum, help address concerns that some areas of Wales have the highest rates of heart disease in Britain. In other areas of the curriculum, schools use outdoor environments to support programmes of study as appropriate. Awdurdod Cymwysterau, Cwricwlwm ac Asesu Cymru/The Qualifications, Curriculum and Assessment Authority for Wales (ACCAC) will be consulting in the summer term on proposals for a new curriculum to be introduced from September 2000.

Following the transfer of functions, responsibility for education matters in Wales will pass to the National Assembly.

Voluntary Organisations

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his funding of voluntary organisations in Wales. [82727]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: On 6 April, my right hon. Friend announced nearly £3 million funding for the voluntary sector organisations listed for the current financial year. This represents a five per cent. increase for the organisations over the previous year and demonstrates our commitment to a vigorous voluntary sector.

Grants awarded:	£000
Local Voluntary Services Scheme (LVS)	1,719
Transitional Funding LVS	35
Wales Council for Voluntary Action (WCVA) Administration of LVS	43
WCVA	441
Volunteering in Wales Fund	557
Community Enterprise Wales	54
Business in the Community Wales	21
Community Services Volunteers (CSV)	35
Student Community Action	21
Welsh Black Voluntary Sector Network	21
CSV and Senior Volunteers Programme	20

ACCAC Budget

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total amount of money returned to his Department's budget from Awdurdod Cwricwlwm Cymwesterau ac Asesu Cymru (ACCAC) in 1998–99. [82698]

Mr. Hain: No money was returned to the Department's budget by ACCAC in 1998–99.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Rail Travel

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the potential for increased travel by rail. [82098]

Mr. Michael: One of the main objectives of the Government's integrated transport policy is to encourage greater use of public transport, including rail. The National Assembly will be contributing to the work which the shadow Strategic Rail Authority has under way to develop a strategic plan for the railways.

Following the transfer of functions, responsibility for the regulation and financial support of rail services will remain with he Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

National Assembly

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received about devolving additional powers to the Welsh Assembly. [82100]

Mr. Michael: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Chipping Barnet (Sir S. Chapman) on 31 March 1999, Official Report, column 725.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Opposition Parties (Financial Assistance)

Mr. McCabe: To ask the President of the Council what arrangements have been agreed for financial assistance to opposition parties. [83392]

Mrs. Beckett: The Committee on Standards in Public Life recommended in October 1998 that financial assistance to opposition parties (known as "Short money") should be reviewed with a view to increasing it substantially, perhaps by as much as three times. Such assistance has been provided to opposition parties since 1975 to enable them more effectively to perform their parliamentary duties. It is claimed in respect of parties' parliamentary business and is largely spent on research assistance for opposition spokesmen, assistance in the opposition parties' Whips' offices and staff for the Leader of the Opposition.

It has now been agreed that basic Short money will be increased by a factor of 2.7. This means that the opposition parties will receive £10,732.69 for every seat won and £21.44 for every 200 votes cast in their favour at the last general election. The travel fund for party spokesmen will be increased in line with inflation. The Neill Committee also recommended a specific allocation for the Leader of the Opposition's Office and this has now been set at £500,000 a year.

The maximum sums each party will receive in the 1999–2000 financial year are set out as follows:

Conservative	3,377,973.27
Liberal Democrat	1,085,009.82
Scottish Nationalist Party	134,643.44
Plaid Cymru	61,859.17
Ulster Unionist	138,749.97
Democratic Unionist	33,871.20
SDLP	54,111.99

Select Committees (Overseas Travel)

Dr. Gibson: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, how much funding has been allocated to each select committee for overseas travel since May 1997. [82937]

Mr. Kirkwood: The Commission approves an annual figure for Select Committee travel; allocation to individual Committees is made, on its behalf, by the Liaison Committee. The figures for the total budget for the last three financial years are as follows:

1997–98	695,000
1998–99	949,975
1999–2000	975,600

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Organophosphates (Aircraft)

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effects on airline flight crews of organophosphate air pollution on board aircraft. [82322]

Ms Glenda Jackson: An organic phosphate compound Tricresylphosphate (TCP) is used as a load carrying additive for lubricants in aircraft jet engines. While TCP is toxic, it is not comparable to the organophosphates used in pesticides. While an aircraft is in flight, fresh air is taken in through air conditioning packs using compressed air supplied by the engines. These are designed to ensure that fumes from the engines do not enter the aircraft. However, in the very rare event of the failure of an engine seal, fumes could enter the air conditioning system and therefore the aircraft cabin. If this happens, the air conditioning unit can be isolated or the engine shut down, minimising any exposure to fumes.

We have no evidence to suggest that fumes from aircraft engines have lead to long term health problems for aircraft crew or passengers. However, we are aware that this issue is being investigated in other countries and will review the situation once those investigations are completed.

London Underground

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish London Transport's report "The Future of London Underground". [82739]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Neither we nor LT intend to publish this document, which was produced to assist our consideration of the options for London Underground in 1997.

All the key points relating to the Government's announcement of their chosen London Underground Public Private Partnership option were covered in the document "London Underground Public Private Partnership—Fact and Analysis", copies of which were deposited in the Library on 20 March 1998.

Fair Trade Products

Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to introduce fair trade products at (a) meetings, (b) events and (c) catering facilities within his Department. [82870]

Mr. Meale: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to her by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary on 5 May 1999, Official Report, column 410.

My Department's policy is to keep the matter under review and to ask caterers to set out their policy and charges for the use of fair trade products. It is then for local managers to decide on the scope to use fair trade products, having regard to value for money. Fair trade products have recently been introduced in vending machines in our London Headquarters buildings.

British Rail Land

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much British Rail land was sold to private companies in (a) 1996, (b) 1997 and (c) 1998. [83005]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Total sales of land by the British Railways Board for each financial year are as follows:

1996–97: 518 sales for £65.6 million

1997–98: 800 sales for £76.3 million

1998–99: 222 sales for £33.0 million.

Information on which sales were to private companies, private individuals (who may be buying for use by a private company) or public bodies is not held in a readily available form and could be provided only at disproportionate cost to the Board.

Accidents (Local Authority Compensation)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what statistics his Department collates on payments by local authorities in compensation to people injured as a result of an accident arising from an inadequately maintained pavement or highway. [83469]

Mr. Meale: This information is not centrally available.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Early Release (Prisoners)

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what legal costs were incurred in respect of the processing of applications from prisoners for early release under the provisions of the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998. [82333]

Mr. Ingram: The total paid up to and including 23 April 1999 by way of legal aid direction by the Commissioners is £36,034.

With regard to other legal costs incurred by the Secretary of State, the information in the form requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to her answer of 29 March 1999, Official Report, column 477, on Special Advisers, if she will give the total travel cost of each occasion when advisers travelled abroad in an official capacity since 2 May 1997 and the place visited. [82415]

Marjorie Mowlam: For the period 2 May 1997 to 31 March 1999, Special Advisers in my Department have travelled overseas in an official capacity on 5 occasions. The costs are shown in the table.

All travel complied with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

Date/Place visited	Cost[1] (£)
12 November 1997
New York/Washington/Boston/San Francisco	5,397.70
14 March 1998
Boston/Washington/New York	5,324.60
19 July 1998
Boston/Washington/New York	2,386.50
6 October 1998
New York	3,261.95
15 March 1999
Washington/New York	3,360.40

[1] The cost refers to flights only

Paramilitary Violence

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if she will list for the week ended Saturday 24 April the number of violent incidents involving paramilitary groups which took place in Northern Ireland, indicating how many involved (a) Loyalist and (b) Republican groups; [82740]

(2) if she will list for the week ended Saturday 24 April the number of (a) punishment beatings and (b) punishment shootings which took place in Northern Ireland, indicating how many in each category were committed by (i) Loyalist and (ii) Republican groups. [82741]

Mr. Ingram: The number of security incidents during the period 18 April to 24 April 1999 are shown in the table.

	Number
Shootings	2
Bombings	1

The number of casualties as a result of paramilitary-style attacks during the period are as follows:

	Loyalist	Republican
Assaults	1	1
Shootings	1	1
Total	2	2

Note:
1. Figures may be subject to minor amendments.
2. The shooting and bombing incidents cannot as yet be firmly attributed to grouping.

Traffic Lights (Newtownards)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to return the sequencing of the traffic lights at the junction of Mill Street and Circular Road, Newtownards, County Down, to their original setting. [82742]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Roads Service under its chief executive, Mr. W. J. McCoubrey. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from W. J. McCoubrey to Mr. John D. Taylor, dated 30 April 1999:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me to respond to your recently tabled Parliamentary Question about the sequencing of the traffic signals at the junction of Mill Street and Circular Road in Newtownards.

By way of background, I should explain that, in order to accommodate the laying of a watermain in July and August last year, a one-way traffic system was introduced on South Street. As a result, traffic was diverted along Circular Road and the traffic signals at the junction in question were altered to deal with this additional flow.

On completion of these works, we carried out a detailed assessment of traffic flow at this junction. We concluded that the original traffic light phasing contained conflicting traffic movements which reduced the operational efficiency of the junction. In addition, there was evidence that drivers were using the Scrabo estate as a "rat run" to avoid the junction, particularly during morning peak times. By removing these conflicting movements, the new phasing has improved road safety, increased the junction's capacity and reduced the benefits of using Scrabo Estate as a "rat run". Whilst the length of the queues on some approaches to the junction may have increased during peak times, adjustments have been carried out to increase the number of vehicles passing through the junction.

In the circumstances, Roads Service has no plans to revert to the old phasing. There may, however, be some isolated off-peak periods that could benefit from further timing alterations. We will continue, therefore, to monitor the junction and amend the timings as and when necessary.

I hope this helps clarify the situation.

CABINET OFFICE

Government Offices of the Regions

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what progress has been made on the review of the future of Government Offices of the Regions of England. [83181]

Mr. Meale: I have been asked to reply.

The Performance and Innovation Unit in the Cabinet Office is carrying out a study of the role of central Government at regional and local level in England. This includes considering the role of Government Offices in the Regions. A consultation document was circulated to interested parties in March, seeking responses by 1 June. The study is due to be completed by the end of the summer.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Hotels

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which organisation will in future be responsible for monitoring hotel bed occupancy rates. [83034]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 4 May 1999]: The English Tourist Board is currently responsible for monitoring hotel bed occupancy rates through data collected as part of the UK Occupancy Survey (UKOS). The ETB runs the UKOS in partnership with the national tourist boards of Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. The English Tourism Council, in partnership with the national tourist boards, will retain responsibility for commissioning the UKOS.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Treaty of Amsterdam

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those matters currently solely within Her Majesty's Government's responsibility for which by virtue of the treaty of Amsterdam responsibility will be jointly held with an institution of the EU on the coming into force of that treaty. [83280]

Ms Quin: The treaty of Amsterdam broadens the competence of the Community institutions mainly in areas where they already share responsibility with the member states. Such areas include the environment, social policy, employment policy, non-discrimination, public health and consumer protection.

It also introduces new Community competence over policies on the free movement of persons in new Title IV of the EC Treaty. However, the UK will not be bound by any measures adopted under this Title unless it chooses to be so.

Kosovo

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures he has taken to ensure that the Serbian population is informed of Nato's action relating to the crisis in Kosovo. [83141]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We are using a variety of means to get the truth into Yugoslavia. The BBC World Service has increased its Serbian programming by almost half. It is now broadcasting 3 more 15 minute news bulletins. We are working with the BBC to find ways of getting our medium wave and FM footprint into Serbia as well so that the BBC's impartial reporting can be heard.

We are also using the Foreign Office's own media facilities to get our message across to the Serbian people. The London Radio Service has more than doubled its bulletins and has set up a Serbian language service now used by 3 stations in Montenegro. British Satellite News also offers a 7 day service and is used by 43 television stations in the Balkans, Ukraine and Russia.

We have used the internet to send a message to the Serbian people over the head of President Milosevic. Our Kosovo website gets 25,000 hits a day. We have translated it into Serbian and over 1,200 hits a day come from Yugoslavia.

Spent Nuclear Fuel

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has held with his German counterpart on the amount of storage space for spent nuclear fuel (a) currently available and (b) under construction in Germany. [82945]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 5 May 1999]: I have, to date, had no such discussions with my German counterpart. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my hon. Friend the Minister for Energy and Industry (82944).

Arms Export Licences

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many arms export licence applications his Department has (a) examined and (b) advised against granting since September 1997. [83092]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: From 1 October 1997 to 31 March 1999, 12,073 Standard Individual Export Licence applications, covering arms and other goods the export of which is controlled for strategic reasons, were circulated to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office by the Department for Trade and Industry for advice, in accordance with the FCO's requirements. In the same period, 924 Open Individual Export Licence applications were also circulated to the FCO, although this figure does not reflect subsequent requests for alterations to either the goods or the consignee schedules of these licences.

The Government's first Annual Report on Strategic Export Controls, which marks a new level of transparency in relation to the Government's export licensing policy, gives details of all licence applications refused in the period 2 May to 31 December 1997, broken down by country and equipment category. Details of licences refused in 1998 will be given in the next Annual Report.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Standards and Effectiveness Unit

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many staff were employed in the Standards and Effectiveness Unit of his Department on 31 March; what the budget was of that unit in 1998–99; and what budget has been set for the unit in 1999–2000. [82015]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 26 April 1999]: The number of staff employed in the Standards and Effectiveness Unit on 31 March was 148. The budget for the Unit in 1998–99 was £4.8 million; the budget for 1999–2000 is £5.9 million. A significant part of the increase in the budget is due to the transfer of four teams covering specialist schools in September 1999. The complement of staff in the SEU is drawn mainly from existing Civil Servants together with a small number of external practitioners, including heads and inspectors, appointed to bring the benefit of their experience to the Department.

School Furniture

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent assessment his Department has made of the state of repair of school furniture. [82908]

Ms Estelle Morris: None. Schools are responsible for the maintenance of their furniture, and for utilising their delegated budgets for this purpose as necessary. The Government have supported schools by increasing recurrent provision for local authority education services by £1.1 billion for 1999–2000.

School Swimming Lessons

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will rank local education authorities in England by the amount of swimming time and instruction offered to schools; and if he will make a statement. [83238]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This information is not collected centrally. However, the Government believe it is extremely important that young people should learn to swim. Swimming is therefore a compulsory element of the PE curriculum in all primary schools.

PE (Primary Schools)

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to improve the quality of physical education in primary schools. [83247]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This Government believe that PE and sport are essential to a rounded education. We have therefore committed £400 million of Lottery money through the New Opportunities Fund to after-school learning, including PE, sports, games and outdoor activities.

The review of the National Curriculum for the year 2000 is looking at all areas of the school curriculum, including physical education in primary schools. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be consulting widely on draft proposals for a revised National Curriculum during the summer, before final decisions are taken.

The Government will also be publishing a sports strategy paper later this year that will include the promotion of physical and sporting opportunities for young people as one of its principal aims. The Government also fund Sport England, whose Active Schools programme ensures quality sports provision in schools through a variety of initiatives, including BT TOP Sport, Sportsmark and Sportsmark Gold awards, Coaching for Teachers and the Sporting Ambassadors scheme. Sport England have committed £3.1m to Active Schools this year, in addition to Lottery funding of £7.75m towards TOP Play and BT Top Sport.

School Funding (Amber Valley)

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will give a breakdown of capital allocations to schools in Amber Valley since May 1997. [83158]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 4 May 1999]: The information requested by my hon. Friend is shown in the following table.

Capital allocations for the Amber Valley since May 1997

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the total capital allocation to schools in Amber Valley since May 1997. [83157]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 4 May 1999]: The resources allocated since May 1997 for capital purposes to schools in the Amber Valley amount to £2,443,043.

Education Expenditure

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list by local education authority the expenditure per pupil at 1998–99 prices from aggregate schools budgets in (a) maintained primary schools and (b) maintained secondary schools in (i) 1996–97, (ii) 1997–98 and (iii) 1998–99, giving the average percentage change from (1) 1996–97 to 1997–98 and (2) from 1997–98 to 1998–99. [81648]

Ms Estelle Morris [pursuant to her reply, 28 April 1999, c. 181]: Unfortunately the table which was provided in the reply contained errors. A revised table has been placed in the Library today.

Environment Task Force

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many New Deal trainees were in post on the Environment Task Force in each region of the United Kingdom at the most recent date for which figures are available. [83149]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The information set out in the following table shows the number of young people who were on the New Deal Environment Task Force option at the end of February 1999. The figures have been drawn from the latest Government Statistical Service report and are shown by each of the Employment Service Regions in Great Britain.

ES region	Participants on ETF option
East Midlands and Eastern	510
London and South East	980
Northern	610
North West	1,080
South West	330
West Midlands	540
Yorkshire and the Humber	960
Office for Wales	730
Office for Scotland	840
Great Britain total	6,590

Note:
Regional figures are rounded and do not, therefore, sum to the total

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to increase Environment Task Force placements under the New Deal. [83148]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Employment Service continues to work closely with its partners and Environment Task Force providers in each of its Regions to build up new placements and maintain current placements for the Environment Task Force option. The Employment Service has no evidence that an increased number of placements is required over and above those already contracted for.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Knowledge-based Enterprise

2. Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his Department's work to increase the number of high-productivity and knowledge-based enterprises. [82358]

Mr. Wills: The Competitiveness White Paper, published in December last year, included a range of measures designed to help business meet the challenge of the knowledge driven economy. Publication of the Implementation Plan, in March of this year, demonstrated the Department's determination to carry through the commitments contained in the White Paper.

Environmental Sustainability

20. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to support policies on environmental sustainability for manufacturing industry. [82380]

Mr. Battle: The Government are determined to help business meet the challenge and seize the opportunities of sustainability. In just the last month, I have announced new funding of around £8 million for a new Sustainable Technologies Initiative, £12 million to kick start a £60 million high tech drive to develop cleaner coal technologies, and the latest phase of the Foresight Vehicle programme which is supporting over £25 million of innovative research to develop the technologies needed for the next generation of more sustainable vehicles.

National Minimum Wage

21. Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of the national minimum wage since its introduction. [82381]

Mr. Ian McCartney: It is early days; the national minimum wage has been in operation for only 5 weeks. However, recent independent research shows not only that most employers (almost 90 per cent.) support the principle of the minimum wage but that 40 per cent. had adjusted their pay structures prior to its introduction. There is no evidence of higher costs feeding into higher prices and there were few signs of any demand for the restoration of pay differentials. There was little evidence of significant job losses; in fact, staff levels among smaller firms have increased by 11 per cent. over the past year—staff turnover had fallen in traditionally low paying industries.

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the effect of the national minimum wage since its introduction. [82361]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The national minimum wage, since its introduction in April, has benefited some two million of the lowest paid workers in the country, and their families. The principle of a minimum wage is supported by the vast majority of companies in this country.

The Inland Revenue are enforcing the national minimum wage, and they supply my Department with data on all matters relating to compliance on a regular basis. Early indications are that awareness of the law is high, and so is compliance. Only in relatively few cases have we had reports of deliberate underpayment. These are being actively pursued.

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the impact of the national minimum wage. [82384]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government asked the Low Pay Commission to monitor and evaluate the introduction and impact of the national minimum wage with particular reference to the effects on pay, employment and competitiveness. The Commission has been asked to report its findings by December.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of people who have benefited from the introduction of the national minimum wage. [82357]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government estimate that nearly 2 million workers have benefited from the introduction of the national minimum wage. Recent research commissioned by Reed Personnel Services shows that almost 9 out of 10 companies surveyed support the minimum wage in principle and that 4 out of 10 had already adjusted their pay scales ahead of the introduction of the minimum wage on 1 April.

Adjusted data from official statistics, available in October, will give some indication of the extent of the shift in workers' earnings resulting from the national minimum wage.

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received on the implementation of the national minimum wage. [82372]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Department has received a number of representations about the implementation of the national minimum wage legislation. In addition, the Inland Revenue, which is enforcing the minimum wage, has received some 500 reports of underpayment of the minimum wage and is approaching employers to resolve the complaints.

Overseas Trade Fairs

22. Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much was spent on overseas trade fairs to promote British exports in each of the last three financial years for which figures are available. [82382]

Mr. Byers: My Department spent £20.2 million in 1996–97, £20.5 million in 1997–98 and £18.6 million in 1998–99, including the Commercial Excellence scheme, on overseas trade fairs to promote British exports.

Small Businesses

24. Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to ensure that small businesses have access to finance for development. [82385]

Mr. Wills: The Government are concerned to ensure that small businesses have access to sources of finance which are appropriate to their needs. The private sector is primarily responsible for designing and delivering finance products to small business and successfully meets their needs in the vast majority of cases. I am aware, however, that some small businesses have faced difficulties in raising the right finance. In particular, there can be problems in securing debt finance where a business has no track record or available security and in raising venture capital in small amounts. We therefore announced, in the Competitiveness White Paper (Cmd 4176), the creation of the Enterprise Fund. As well as continuing to fund the Small Firms Loan Guarantee Scheme, this Fund will also act to stimulate the availability of venture capital for smaller, growing businesses.

In addition, we are working with the key players in the informal investment or "business angel" markets to stimulate the availability of venture capital from individual investors.

Milk Marque

25. Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to announce his decision on Milk Marque following the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report. [82386]

Mr. Byers: I am aware that many members and their constituents in the dairy industry have a keen interest in the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the supply in Great Britain of raw cows' milk. I will publish it as soon as is practicable.

Working Time Directive

26. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the number of people who have become entitled to annual leave as a result of the working time directive. [82387]

Mr. Ian McCartney: At the time of the Regulations coming into force on 1 October 1998 it was anticipated that 2.5m workers would benefit from the entitlement to paid annual leave. A Regulatory Impact Assessment on the costs and benefits resulting from the implementation of the Working Time Regulations was made, a copy of which is held in the Library of the House.

Export Promotion

27. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent measures his Department is taking to support British companies in respect of export promotion; and if he will make a statement. [82389]

Mr. Byers: My right hon Friend the Foreign Secretary announced on 12 March 1999, Official Report, columns 399–400, the Government's response to the Cabinet Secretary's Review of Export Promotion, the core of which is that all trade promotion and development activities of the DTI and FCO should be unified in a new joint operation, British Trade International, with a single Chief Executive. The organisation will give Britain a sharper edge in export markets. Once implemented, the provisions of the Review will allow us to provide a more coherent service which is readily accessible to UK businesses wherever they are located. Copies of the report have been placed in the libraries of the House.

Rolls-Royce

28. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what conditions he attached to the launch aid awarded to Rolls-Royce to help with the development of the Trent engine. [82391]

Mr. Battle: When I announced the public-private partnership with Rolls-Royce on 12 November 1997, Official Report, columns 626–27, providing for up to £200 million of public investment in further development of the Trent aeroengine, my Department had signed a detailed contract with Rolls-Royce plc in relation to this partnership. The main conditions contained were that the company should continue its successful development of the Trent aeroengines involved, and that this should secure considerable benefit for the company, its suppliers and the wider economy.

E-commerce

29. Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the outcome of the latest consultations with industry on E-commerce. [82393]

Mr. Wills: I am pleased to say that we have received over 240 responses to Building Confidence in Electronic Commerce—A Consultation Document. I have arranged for a list of respondents—except those who asked for their response to be kept confidential—to be placed in the House of Commons Library. The responses are currently being carefully analysed. A summary will be published in due course. The Electronic Commerce Bill will be introduced into Parliament later this session.

Employment Relations Bill

30. Mr. Geraint Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to advise business of the opportunities and implications of the Employment Relations Bill. [82394]

Mr. Ian McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, other ministerial colleagues and I speak frequently to a wide range of audiences about the advantages of the partnership approach embodied in the Employment Relations Bill. Information about the progress of the Bill is on the DTI website. We will publish full guidance for all concerned before the Bill's provisions come into force.

Wind Generation

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of new wind turbines which will be installed by 2002. [83319]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 4 May 1999]: The number of new wind turbines likely to be installed in 2002 depends largely on the size of machines which generators choose to employ. For example, a growth in generation of 300 GWh would require about 220 machines if their average size was 0.6 MW or about 130 machines if their average size was 1 MW.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the total subsidy provided by the Government to the wind generation industry to date. [83323]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 5 May 1999]: I expect the average premium price paid to fall as wind energy capacity contracted, under the Order which I made last September for the fifth Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation at an average price of 2.88 p/kWh, is commissioned. The charge to the Fossil Fuel Levy of providing premium prices for electricity from wind turbines was £200 million to February 1999.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will estimate the average costs per kilowatt hours of wind-generated energy. [83324]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 5 May 1999]: In England and Wales the average premium price of electricity generated in February 1999 by wind turbines contracted under the Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation arrangements was 5.2 p/kWh compared to the average price for generation from conventional sources of 3.0 p/kWh over the same period.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what reports he has received of instances of wind turbines having thrown broken blades to the ground. [83318]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 5 May 1999]: I have received no reports of instances of these machines' broken blades falling to the ground.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many new wind turbines will be required to meet the Government's targets on renewable energy. [83327]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 5 May 1999]: The number of new wind turbines required to contribute towards this target depends on the range and mix of renewable technologies employed, such as biomass, offshore wind, wave, landfill gas and energy from waste, and the contribution that each one makes.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the cost to date to public funds of failed applications to establish wind farms. [83321]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 5 May 1999]: There is no cost to public funds of failed applications to develop wind farms; the premium price is paid only when the wind turbines generate electricity.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received opposing the establishment of new wind farms. [83322]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 5 May 1999]: I have recently published "New and Renewable Energy: Prospects for the 21st Century" and have invited views on a wide range of issues concerning the greater deployment of a range of renewable sources of energy, including wind energy, by 28 May. The representations made so far have been positive, constructive and encouraging.

Small and Medium-sized Enterprises

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to increase support for small and medium-sized enterprises in the East Midlands. [83163]

Mr. Wills: There are many initiatives, arising from the December 1998 Competitiveness White Paper, which are intended to increase support for small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs). These initiatives will benefit SMEs in all regions, including the East Midlands.

On 10 March 1999, Official Report, columns 367–79, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State set out a detailed implementation plan for each of the commitments in the Competitiveness White Paper. A copy of the Competitiveness White Paper implementation plan has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

My right hon. Friend's announcement also included details of the Small Business Service. This service will directly address the needs of small businesses by making improvements in the quality and coherence of the delivery of services to small businesses both at local level and, where appropriate, nationally. The department will be publishing a consultation document in the near future on the specific role and functions of the Small Business Service. I will be welcoming views from all interested parties.

On 12 March 1999, Official Report, columns 399–400, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, announced the creation of British Trade International, a unified DTI/FCO operation which will lead the Government's activities on international trade promotion. This new organisation will improve the level of service which is provided to those SMEs currently exporting and those who wish to export. Sir David Wright took up post as Chief Executive of British Trade International on Tuesday 4 May.

E-envoy

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what date the Government's proposed e-Envoy will (a) be appointed and (b) commence work; and what his salary will be. [83313]

Mr. Wills [holding answer 5 May 1999]: No final decisions have yet been taken. The Government plan to make an announcement on the e-Envoy shortly.

Electronic Signatures

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library details of the common position which was recorded at the EU Telecoms Council in Luxembourg on 22 April on the European Directive on electronic signatures. [83312]

Mr. Wills [holding answer 5 May 1999]: The formal common position text of the European Directive on electronic signatures will be placed in the Library of the House as soon as it has been to Jurists/Linguists.

Spent Nuclear Fuel

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the material recovered from reprocessing of German spent nuclear fuel has a commercial value in the United Kingdom. [82893]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 5 May 1999]: The uranium and plutonium contained in spent nuclear fuel can be used in the manufacture of fresh fuel and therefore, once separated through reprocessing, have a commercial value. The separated waste recovered from the reprocessed spent fuel has no commercial value. All the materials recovered from reprocessing German spent fuel in the UK remain the property of the German utility concerned and must be returned to Germany.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the prospects for onward sale outside the UK of the material recovered from the processing of German spent nuclear fuel. [82892]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 5 May 1999]: None. Spent nuclear fuel imported into the UK for reprocessing and the products which are recovered from that fuel (uranium, plutonium and waste) remain, at all times, the property of the overseas customer. It remains the firm policy of the UK Government that these materials be returned to the country of origin.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has held with his German counterpart on the amount of storage space for spent nuclear fuel (a) currently available and (b) under construction in Germany. [82944]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 5 May 1999]: None. Requirements for spent fuel storage facilities in Germany are a matter for the owners of the spent fuel and the relevant German regulatory authorities.

British Nuclear Fuels

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the companies of which the directors of British Nuclear Fuels Limited are directors. [82508]

Mr. Battle: The information is provided in BNFL's annual return to the Registrar of Companies. I have, however, asked BNFL's Company Secretary to write to my hon. Friend direct, and will place a copy of that letter in the Library of the House.

Exports (Indonesia)

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current ECGD exposure on exports to Indonesia. [82390]

Mr. Byers: ECGD's exposure on Indonesia is £1,541 million, of which £48 million is in respect of unrecovered claims.

Manufacturing

Mrs. Organ: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the competitiveness of the manufacturing sector. [82374]

Mr. Byers: The decisive action we have taken to promote economic stability, coupled with the measures announced in our Competitiveness White Paper, will help improve the long-term competitiveness of the manufacturing sector.

Mobile Communications Networks

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on progress towards issuing licences under the Wireless Telegraphy Act for operators of third-generation mobile communications networks. [83794]

Mr. Wills: Following extensive consultation and careful consideration the Government have decided to offer five third-generation licences by means of auction. The licences will comprise three of (2x10)+5MHz, one of 2x15MHz and one of (2x15)+5MHz. The largest will be reserved for a new entrant. It believes that this will most effectively allow the benefits of third-generation to the UK economy and consumers to be realised. In particular, it is convinced that these benefits are most likely to be maximised by encouraging market entry and competition.

The Director General of Telecommunications will shortly issue for statutory consultation draft amendments to existing public mobile operators' Telecommunications Act licences which are intended to provide any new entrants with the right to roam onto at least one second generation mobile network.

The Government continue to expect that, subject to market and other developments and to final decisions nearer the time, the auction will take place in the second half of the financial year 1999–2000.

PRIME MINISTER

Kosovo

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of 28 April 1999, Official Report, column 338, what independent evidence he has assessed to support the statement attributed to Dr. Dobruna and Professor Kelmendi that 45 per cent. of Kosovan villages had been destroyed by the Serbs by February; and what information he received on the backgrounds of Dr. Dobruna and Professor Kelmendi prior to 28 April. [83174]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 4 May 1999]: Reports from many sources, including members of the OSCE Kosovo Verification Mission prior to their withdrawal from Kosovo in March this year, indicated that a large number of villages in Kosovo had been substantially damaged or destroyed. I received no specific information on the backgrounds of Dr. Dobruna and Professor Kelmendi.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of 28 April 1999, Official Report, column 334, what is the result of NATO's study of the best way to implement the embargo; and what is the name of the village near Djakovica to which he referred. [83177]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 4 May 1999]: Options for implementation of an oil embargo are currently being considered and a decision is expected shortly.

The name of the village near Djakovica is Mej.

Select Committee Reports

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Arundel and South Downs (Mr. Flight), of 31 March 1999, Official Report, column 1080, on which public interest grounds under paragraph 1 section (IV) of the ministerial code the Chancellor of the Exchequer declined to give the information requested by the hon. Member for Chingford and Woodford Green in his question answered on 19 March 1999, Official Report, column 857. [80580]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 13 April 1999]: The answers which my right hon. Friend the Chancellor gave the hon. Member on 30 March 1999, Official Report, column 667, and 13 April 1999, Official Report, columns 122–23, explained that he had provided a detailed account of the position in his reply of 16 March 1999, Official Report, columns 641–42.

Planning

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Prime Minister (1) with which companies, not at present trading in the UK, he has discussed planning issues during the past year; [83160]

(2) with which retail businesses he has discussed planning issues during the past year; [83162]

(3) when he last met representatives of Wal-Mark; what subjects were discussed; and who was present. [83161]

The Prime Minister: I have regular meetings with business leaders from the United Kingdom and overseas and others, including consumer and environmental groups, on a wide range of subjects, and will continue to do so. As with previous Governments, it is not my practice to provide details of confidential discussions. However, as has already been stated publicly, I met the President of Wal-Mark International about a month ago. The meeting was a short courtesy call at his request.

All planning applications are made to the local planning authority and decisions are made in accordance with the development plan. The Government's Response to the Fourth Report of the Environment, Transport and Regional Affairs Select Committee on Shopping Centres published in July 1997 (Cmnd 3729) reaffirmed the policy set out in Planning Policy Guidance Note 6 (PPG6), which seeks to focus development, especially retail development, within existing town centres.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Chesham and Amersham (Mrs. Gillan) of 28 April 1999, Official Report, column 342, concerning flights between Chile and the Falkland Islands, on what date the representations were made; and what form they took. [83232]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 4 May 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to my hon. Friend the Member for Ilford, North (Ms Perham) on 28 April 1999, Official Report, column 180.

TREASURY

Road Hauliers

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many road hauliers' jobs have been lost since 1 May 1997. [82191]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Nick Gibb, dated 6 May 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on road hauliers' job losses.

Information is available for the net change in the number of jobs, and not for the number of jobs created or lost. The most up-to-date number of Employee jobs in freight transport by road in Great Britain is derived from the Annual Employment Survey (AES). At September 1997, latest available date, there were 227,800 employed in freight transport by road in Great Britain. The corresponding figure for September 1996 was 2[illegible],600.

Civil Registration System

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he is taking to improve the civil registration system. [82924]

Ms Hewitt: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Preseli Pembrokeshire (Ms Lawrence) on 7 December 1998, Official Report, columns 27–28. I have asked the Registrar General for England and Wales to carry out a review of the civil registration system with the aim of producing a public consultation document this summer. The review, which is underway, will consider the existing operational framework and set out options for the future development of the service.

Risk Management Systems

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to encourage financial institutions to improve their risk management systems. [83243]

Ms Hewitt: Improving risk management is a priority both domestically and internationally. The G7 Finance Ministers and Central Bank Governors have encouraged the Basle Committee on Banking Supervision to finalise its work on revising the Basle Capital Accord so that it better reflects risk. More specifically, following the near-failure of the LTCM hedge fund, the Basle Committee published a sound practices paper setting out ways in which financial institutions could improve their risk management processes. Other international bodies are also looking at issues relating to hedge funds and their work will be coordinated by a working group of the newly established Financial Stability Forum. The Financial Services Authority are working closely with the institutions they supervise to ensure that their risk management processes follow good practice.

Royal Mint

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when a decision will be announced on the review of options for the future of the Royal Mint undertaken by his Department. [83186]

Ms Hewitt: The Chancellor and I are currently considering the options that have been examined. A decision will be announced in the near future.

Bereavement Tax Credit

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of widows who will (a) lose bereavement tax credit in the 1999–2000 budget and (b) be eligible for the new benefits which replace the tax credit. [79089]

Angela Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The widows' bereavement allowance will not be abolished for existing claimants, but there will be no new claims to the allowance for deaths occurring after 5 April 2000.

As a result of the reforms of widows' benefits it is estimated that, in the first full year of implementation:

around 40,000 widows and 20,000 widowers will be entitled to the Bereavement Payment; around 10,000 new widows and 20,000 widowers will be entitled to Widowed Parent's Allowance; and around 10,000 widows and 10,000 widowers will be entitled to Bereavement Allowance.

Note:

Figures have been supplied by the Government Actuary's Department. They are rounded to the nearest 10,000 and are subject to a wide range of uncertainty.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the revenue implications in 1999–2000 and 2000–01 of the abolition of bereavement tax credit for widows and its replacement by benefits. [79090]

Angela Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The Widows' Bereavement Allowance will not be abolished for existing claimants, but there will be no new claims to the allowance for deaths occurring after 5 April 2000. The revenue effect of this change is estimated to be a saving of £15 million in 2000–01. The new bereavement benefits, which are unlikely to be implemented before April 2001, are estimated to cost around £140 million in the first year of implementation.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Single Parents (Benefits)

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many single parents were receiving benefits; what proportion of them were known to be receiving maintenance payments; and what was the average maintenance payment, in each of the last 30 years. [83185]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the tables.

Number of lone parents on benefit and the number of those receiving maintenance since November 1995

	Lone parents on benefits (thousand)	Those receiving maintenance (thousand)	Percentage receiving maintenance	Average weekly maintenance (£ per week)
November 1995	1,337	217	16	29.69
November 1996	1,338	232	17	30.62
November 1997	1,334	248	19	31.53
November 1998	1,326	269	20	31.62

Notes:

1. Figures derived using ASD1's 5 per cent. scans of the Income Support (IS), Family Credit (FC) and Child Support Agency (CSA) systems.
2. Lone parents on benefit comprises lone parents receiving IS or FC. For technical reasons it is not possible to add Incapacity Benefit data to the analysis, although it is thought that the additional lone parents this would identify is negligible
3. Lone parents receiving maintenance comprises:

(a) CSA parents with care (PWCs) where the Non-Resident Parent (NRP) is paying child maintenance via the CSA collection service (ie is fully or partially compliant);

(b) CSA PWCs where payment is direct between the NRP and the PWC; CSA PWCs where the NRP is making a contribution to maintenance from their IS and income-based JSA;

(d) Non-CSA IS and FC lone parents recorded as being in receipt of maintenance. This will include lone parents receiving maintenance other than child maintenance.

Information for the period before November 1995 takes no account of CSA records and is not directly comparable and is set out in the table.

Notes:

1. Numbers are rounded to the nearest thousand, percentages to one decimal point.
2. Numbers are given at a point in time. From Supplementary Benefit/Income Support from 1969 to 1974 and 1977 to 1979 the month was November. For 1975, 1976 and 1980 to 1984 the month was December. In 1986 and 1996 the month was February and from 1987–94 the month was May. For Family Income Supplement 1971 figures are for August and all other figures represent May.
3. Proportion receiving maintenance may be subject to a degree of double counting of around 1 per cent. around quoted figures prior to 1990.
4. Family Credit replaced Family Income Supplement in April 1988.
5. Income Support replaced Supplementary Benefit in April 1988.
6. Supplementary Benefit/Income Support single parents from 1988 onwards are defined as single people with dependants not receiving a disability or pensioner premium. The equivalent statistical group has been used prior to 1988.
7. Supplementary Benefit/Income Support figures are based on a sample size of 1 in 40 between 1969 and 1976, 1 in 50 between 1977 and 1987, 1 in 100 between 1988 and 1993 and 5 per cent. thereafter. Family Income Supplement/Family Credit figures are based on a 20 per cent. sample up to 1973, a 10 per cent. sample from 1974 to 1988 and a 5 per cent. sample from 1989.
8. Supplementary Benefit/Income Support cases with maintenance are based on maintenance received by either the claimant or the Department as either a Court Order or a voluntary payment.
9. Figures are not available in 1985 due to industrial action.

Fair Trade Products

Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to introduce fair trade products at (a) meetings, (b) events and (c) catering facilities within his Department. [82865]

Mr. Timms: I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer from my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary on 5 May 1999, Official Report, column 410.

Income Support (Pensioners)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for what reason older pensioners receive higher rates of income support than younger pensioners. [82706]

Mr. Timms: The higher premium rate for older pensioners was proposed in the 1985 Green Paper "Reform of Social Security Programme for Change" for those most likely to have continuing health problems or to be frail and in need of special support in maintaining themselves in the community. The Green Paper proposed two routes to the premium, one age related, the other for younger pensioners receiving benefits related to disability or continuing incapacity.

Incapacity Benefit

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98 the numbers of new claimants to incapacity benefit who have been unemployed for a minimum of two years prior to their claims and are receiving (i) occupational benefit and (ii) industrial disablement benefit for (1) the United Kingdom, (2) regional Benefits Agency areas and (3) North Staffordshire, indicating in each case the average age of the new claimant. [82681]

Mr. Bayley: The information is not available in the form requested because the data collected on new claims do not include the length of time a person was unemployed prior to claiming Incapacity Benefit or whether they are receiving Occupational Pension. Such information as is available is set out below.

Records show that at 31 March 1997, 49 per cent. of Incapacity Benefit recipients had previously been unemployed. It is estimated that around a third of Incapacity Benefit recipients have an Occupational Pension.

Pensioner Income

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 28 April 1999, Official Report, columns 165–66, on pensioner incomes, what would be the difference in income between a single man of 65 with no savings or resources and the income of a single man of 65 who has resources of at least £16,000 but no additional pension from SERPS; and what amount of money would be required to purchase an annuity to fund this difference. [83178]

Mr. Timms: The amounts of Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit that a person receives depends on local factors as well as personal circumstances. As an illustrative example, a hypothetical 65-year-old man with no savings or resources who receives the average Housing Benefit and average Council Tax Benefit received by those on Income Support aged 60 or over would receive £127 a week in Income Support, Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit.

The amount is £60 more than the full basic pension and, at February 1999 annuity rates, a lump sum of £43,000 would be required to fund this difference.

It is, however, extremely unlikely that a person would receive the full basic pension and have £16,000 in savings without having any second-tier pension as any employee who earns over the Lower Earnings Limit for National Insurance contributions automatically builds up rights to a second-tier pension. Furthermore, information from the 1996 General Household Survey suggests that half of those who are self-employed are currently contributing to a personal pension and a further 10 per cent. have contributed in the past.

Notes:

1. Weekly income figures are rounded to the nearest pound and the lump sum figure is rounded to the nearest £1,000.

2. The latest available data are used for average levels of benefit receipt, the level of Income Support and annuity rates:

Income support and basic State pension level—1999–2000 figures;

Average Housing Benefit/Council Tax Benefit received—May 1997 data expressed in February 1999 figures; Annuity rates—February 1999 figure.

Pensions

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of defined benefit occupational pension schemes operate clawback of more than the level of the basic state pension. [83274]

Mr. Timms: The Department does not collect this information.

DEFENCE

Jaguar Aircraft

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the last Jaguar aircraft to be taken out of active service. [82518]

Mr. Spellar: On current plans, the last Jaguar aircraft will be taken out of active service in the later part of the next decade.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for further expenditure on Jaguar aircraft before they are taken out of service. [82519]

Mr. Spellar: We plan to spend only what is necessary to ensure that the Jaguar fleet is able to meet its operational commitments, and achieve safely its remaining service life.

Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency for the financial year 1999–2000. [83763]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Key Targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency for the financial year 1999–2000. The targets build upon progress made by the Agency since it formed on 1 April 1997 and are as follows:

1. Pay, allowances and pensions payments

Whilst making 100 per cent. of payments of pay, allowances and pensions by the due date, the number of errors per 1,000 payments not to exceed 2.5 for pay and allowances and 2.5 for pensions.

2. Accuracy of personnel records and liabilities data

Initiate a plan with customers by June 1999 to improve the completeness and accuracy of the record of service, to assist in the further development of unit based systems.

3. Currency of personnel records and liabilities data

Update all personnel records and liabilities data within 2 days of valid input.

4. Responsiveness

Resolve 91 per cent. of inquiries, written or through official help desks, within 10 working days, across all services, where information and/or authority is within AFPAA's control.

5. Efficiency

To reduce the average unit costs to deliver AFPAA services by 3 per cent. this year.

WALES

Special Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what dates special advisers from his Department travelled abroad on official business since 2 May 1997; which countries were visited on each occasion; and what were the names of the special advisers who travelled abroad on each occasion. [82254]

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 31 March 1999, Official Report, column 726, on special advisers, if he will give (a) the total travel cost of each occasion when a departmental special adviser has travelled abroad in an official capacity since 2 May 1997 and (b) the place visited. [82433]

Mr. Michael: In February 1998 (10 to 12) Mr. Huw Roberts travelled to Brussels, Belgium at a cost, including travel and subsistence costs, of £175 to The Welsh Office.

In March 1998 (20 to 22) Mr. Huw Roberts travelled to Dublin, Republic of Ireland at a cost, including travel and subsistence costs, of £150 to The Welsh Office.

All travel complies with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

National Assembly (Pensions)

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the directions setting out the pension scheme for members of the National Assembly for Wales. [83725]

Mr. Hain: I have today put copies of The National Assembly for Wales (Assembly Members) (Pension Scheme) Direction 1999 in the Libraries of the House.

Talgarth Relief Road

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many letters and representations he has received from the Brecon Beacons National Park concerning the Talgarth Relief Road (Southern Section); and how many were (a) in favour of and (b) opposed to the scheme. [83332]

Mr. Hain: Prior to the Public Inquiry the Welsh Office Highways Directorate received one letter from the Brecon Beacons National Park Authority in support of its published proposals for a Talgarth Bypass. Following publication of the Inspector's Report, which recommended against proceeding with the published scheme, no further representations have been received.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

HEALTH

Ambulance Service (Fuel Costs)

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cost of the increases in fuel duty since 1997 on the fuel bill of ambulance services in England. [81796]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 23 April 1999]: We estimate the costs of the increase in fuel duty since 1996–97 to be about £3.73 million. This amounts to less than 0.075 per cent. of hospital and community health services spending over the two years since 1997.

Hepatitis C

Mr. Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will assess the benefits of providing financial assistance schemes for people who contracted hepatitis C through contaminated blood products as a result of NHS treatment. [82860]

Mr. Hutton: We carried out a thorough assessment in 1998 of whether it would be right to introduce a special payment scheme for people infected with hepatitis C through National Health Service treatment. We concluded that this would not be appropriate and that such patients should continue to obtain support through the benefits system in the same way as other NHS patients who have suffered non negligent harm.

Obstetrics and Gynaecology

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to (a) ensure that NHS trusts create more consultant posts in obstetrics and gynaecology and (b) restrict the creation by NHS trusts of non-consultant career-grade posts in obstetrics and gynaecology; [83270]

(2) what assessment he has made of the lack of consultant numbers in the NHS hospital obstetrics service; and if he will make a statement on the level of consultant cover on labour wards. [83271]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 5 May 1999]: It is for National Health Service trusts, who are accountable for the quality of services they provide, to decide the number and grade of staff they need. Only they can judge exactly what is required to deliver quality services in their location.

In view of the availability of trained specialists in obstetrics and gynaecology, National Health Service Executive Regional Offices are being asked to arrange workshops and seminars, involving their health authorities, NHS trusts and local professional representatives. The aim is to encourage local managers to review the staffing and grade mix in large obstetric units and consider how services might be improved by creating further consultant posts in obstetrics and gynaecology.

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost to the NHS and HEFCE of training specialists in obstetrics and gynaecology from entrance into medical school, through three years of general professional services and through a complete full-time specialist (CCST) training scheme. [83268]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 5 May 1999]: The cost to the National Health Service and the Higher Education Funding Council for England of a five year undergraduate medical course is around £160,000.

The Health Service makes a significant investment in postgraduate medical education. Doctors in postgraduate training follow an apprenticeship model where their training is inextricably bound up with the service they provide. Even within specialties the length and type of training will vary according to the particular career path an individual chooses and their rate of progress. For these reasons, it is not possible to put a meaningful figure to the cost of training individuals to Certificate of Completion of Specialist Training level.

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of obstetricians and gynaecologists who have obtained their Certificate of Completion of Specialist Training and who (a) face redundancy this year due to lack of consultant posts and (b) are still in training posts six months after obtaining their CCST. [83269]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 5 May 1999]: On 1 April 1999, there were 117 obstetricians and gynaecologists who had obtained their Certificate of Completion of Specialist Training (CCST) and who had not found a consultant appointment. Of these, 86 had been in training posts for six months or more, after obtaining their CCST. We expect that some of these will obtain consultant posts this year, but it is not possible to say how many at this stage. We are considering a range of options for tackling this situation.

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will increase the funding for obstetrics and gynaecology to implement the proposals of the NHSE voting groups to improve standards of care given to women and babies. [83276]

Mr. Denham: The working group has proposed that National Health Service trusts should be encouraged to review staffing in obstetric and gynaecology services.

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to extend the contracts of those (a) specialist registrars and (b) senior registrars in obstetrics and gynaecology who have obtained their CCST but who have not found consultant posts. [83275]

Mr. Denham: Under current regulations, all holders of Certificates of Completion of Specialist Training (CCST) may be given an extension to their contracts of up to 6 months in order to secure a job. Because of the difficulties being experienced by CCST holders in obstetrics and gynaecology, it has been agreed that they may have their contracts extended for a further period of up to 12 months, making a total of 18 months in all.

Beta Interferon

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the availability of beta interferon on prescription for people with the progressive type of multiple sclerosis. [82881]

Mr. Denham: The Department will shortly be consulting with interested parties on a draft health service circular on the prescribing of beta-interferon for people with secondary progressive multiple sclerosis.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Civil Society Unit

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the remit of the civil society unit in her Department. [83079]

Mr. Foulkes: The civil society unit, which was formerly called the NGO Unit, will continue to administer the Joint Funding Scheme, and will administer its successor, the new Civil Society Challenge Fund, and new Partnership Programme Agreements. The Civil Society Challenge Fund will have a focused approach to strengthening civil society in developing countries and will be open to a wide range of UK civil society groups. Partnership Programme Agreements will set out shared objectives with organisations engaged in a range of the Department for International Development's strategic concerns and will provide strategic funding links with the Department. More generally, the Unit will seek to widen our relationships with civil society organisations in the UK who share our objectives of the elimination of world poverty.

AIDS

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what were the levels of expenditure on the international AIDS vaccine initiative in (i) 1997–98 and (ii) 1998–99. [83081]

Mr. Foulkes: Britain provided £200,000 to support the work of the International AIDS Vaccine Initiative (IAVI) in 1998–99. We made no contribution in 1997–98.

We are currently developing a longer term and more substantial programme of support with the IAVI, which will begin in 1999–2000.

Kosovo

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of that aid given in connection with the Balkans conflict is currently being given directly to support Albanian families housing Kosovan refugees. [83082]

Mr. Foulkes: The Red Cross movement has the lead role in distributing food and other relief supplies to host families and refugees outside the camps. Details of the proportion of aid going to support host families are not available.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support her Department is giving to the development of a website to help Kosovar refugees. [83091]

Mr. Foulkes: The International Committee of the Red Cross are playing a major role in tracing and reunification. They are already making use of the Internet as one tool in these efforts. The Department for International Development has given £2.5 million to the International Committee of the Red Cross, part of which is being used for family tracing.

Birth Certificates

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list those purposes for which her Department and its executive agencies require a birth certificate to be furnished by (i) employees, (ii) contractors, (iii) those applying for employment or contracts and (iv) other persons. [83083]

Mr. Foulkes: The Department for International Development may ask to see a birth certificate as a proof of identity when recruiting staff directly. On retirement from service, and prior to payment of pension, a member of staff may be requested to produce a copy of their birth certificate as a double check on age.

We require proof of date of birth before determining eligibility for a colonial pension. However, in almost every case the claimant's birth certificate had been seen many years earlier by the relevant employer and/or pension authority. The requirement to produce a birth certificate in support of such a claim is therefore very rare.

While we do not require birth certificates from contractors or consultants, we ask to see birth certificates for the children of staff working overseas to assess eligibility for various allowances including education allowances and holiday visit passages.

The DFID has no executive agencies.

Sudan

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if the seed and tools packages provided by the United Kingdom have arrived in southern Sudan in time for spring planting. [83086]

Mr. Foulkes: Yes.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has for primary education to form part of the humanitarian aid for southern Sudan. [83087]

Mr. Foulkes: We are prepared to consider realistic and viable proposals to provide basic education services in southern Sudan. But sustainable services will be possible only when peace is secured.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what data she has collated on current food supplies in southern Sudan. [83089]

Mr. Foulkes: The situation is much better than last year. People are in better condition and prospects for the 1999 cereal crop look good. However, southern Sudan is a food deficit area. The UN World Food Programme estimates that in 1999 there will be a 10 per cent. deficit between local food availability and total anticipated needs. This is estimated at 90,000 tonnes of food which includes 20,000 tonnes to support the most vulnerable.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to ensure a supply of fishing tackle to the people of southern Sudan before the floods begin at the end of the year. [83090]

Mr. Foulkes: Fish is an important element of the diets of vulnerable people in southern Sudan. We are willing to consider supporting, at the appropriate time of the year, well constructed and viable proposals for the provision of fishing tackle.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration Advisers

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about the proposed level of registration charges for immigration advisers. [82536]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We have received no representations about the proposed level of registration charges for immigration advisers. We have received a number of inquiries about the basis on which charges were estimated for illustrative purposes in the Regulatory Impact Assessment for Part V of the Immigration and Asylum Bill.

Open Government

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average cost of each case in which information was supplied under the Open Government: Code of Practice on Access to Government Information in the last parliamentary session. [83273]

Mr. Straw: Information is not collated either centrally, or in Departments, on the average cost of supplying information under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

In most cases, requests under the Code are for information which it is necessary for the public to have as part of the fair and accountable performance of the functions of Government. Such requests are dealt with in the same way as general correspondence and separate accounting is not systematically undertaken.

In order to provide a range of estimates for the cost of meeting requests for information under the proposed Freedom of Information Bill, a low cost estimated of £62 (the average cost of replying to a Parliamentary Question) and a high cost estimate of £350 (reflecting additional work needed to collate an extensive range of information) was used. These are typical costs of responding to Code requests, but are not average costs.

Where information is provided in order to meet a specific individual request, which is not in the course of a Department's normal day-to-day business, a charge may be made to help defray the costs. Where charges are made, Departments are required to strike a balance between the interests of the applicant and those of the taxpayer. Individual Departments decide how best to apply this principle to their particular circumstances, and charges will not necessarily reflect the actual cost to the Department of supplying the information.

The charging schemes for each Department are set out at Appendix 5 of the 1997 Report on the Code of Practice, a copy of which is available in the Library. In that year charges were levied in 242 cases out of 3,772 requests logged as Code requests (6.4 per cent.).

I hope to be able to publish the 1998 Code Report in the next few weeks.

Transsexuals

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 14 April 1999, Official Report, column 257, which Minister in his Department will oversee the work of the Inter-departmental Working Group on the status of transsexual people. [83045]

Mr. Straw: The right hon. Lord Williams of Mostyn.

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the police forces which have implemented guidelines for officers dealing with transsexual and trans-gendered people; and what recommendation his Department makes to police forces regarding treatment of transsexual and trans-gendered people. [83021]

Mr. Boateng: The Home Office makes no specific recommendations to the police service about the treatment of transsexual and trans-gendered people. However, advice on dealing with transvestites and transsexual people was issued to all forces in the Spring of 1998 by the Association of Chief Police Officers Race and Community Relations sub-committee. I am placing a copy in the Library. Information is not held centrally on details of forces which have implemented these guidelines.

Kosovan Asylum Seekers

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Kosovan asylum seekers are currently in detention in the United Kingdom. [82689]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have instructed that all known Kosovan asylum seekers are released from detention. I am satisfied therefore that there are no asylum seekers whom we accept to be Kosovan currently detained under Immigration Act powers. There are, however, some detainees who are believed to be Albanian nationals.

Competitive Bidding

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the bids by regional non-Governmental organisations that have been (a) received and (b) successful in each of the competitive bidding processes launched and managed by his Department since May 1997. [82462]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 28 April 1999]: The available information is as-follows:

Subject	Bids received		Bids successful
	£ million	Number	£ million	Number
Grants to voluntary organisations	5.075	103	1.828	34
Targeted Policing	31.5	73	[1]5.2	11
Burglary Initiative	not costed	125	1.8	30
Close Circuit Television bids	13.989	283	1.537	32

[1] This is a provisional figure as firm decisions will not be made until early June 1999

Non-governmental organisations may also bid for funds under the Invest to Save and Capital Modernisation programmes. These are administered by Her Majesty's Treasury.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the types of products which are required to be tested on animals; and what assessment he has made of alternative procedures. [83329]

Mr. George Howarth: The Home Office and the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 do not require types of product to be tested. The purpose of the 1986 Act is to regulate any experimental or other scientific procedure applied to a protected animal which may cause pain, suffering, distress or lasting harm. The safety of products, and the types of test required to assess safety, are the responsibility of other Government Departments.

Section 5(5) of the 1986 Act requires that a project licence shall be granted only if:

(a) the purpose of the programme to be specified in the licence cannot be achieved satisfactorily by any other reasonably practicable method not entailing the use of protected animals; and

(b) the regulated procedures to be used are those which use the minimum number of animals, involve animals with the lowest degree of neurophysiological sensitivity, cause the least pain, suffering, distress or lasting harm, and are most likely to produce satisfactory results.

These embody the principles of the 3Rs—replacing animal use, reducing the number of animals used in a particular procedure and refining procedures to minimise adverse effects.

Home Office inspectors (who are all highly qualified and experienced in either medicine or veterinary science) assess licence applications to ensure that such alternatives are used wherever possible.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what studies he has made of the normal mortality rate of cat litters for the purpose of comparison with those used in animal experiments. [83330]

Mr. George Howarth: No specific study has been made. However, I had been advised by the Home Office Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate that a pre-weaning mortality rate of 10 per cent. in an establishment designated under the terms of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 would be comparable to that in commercial catteries which breed kittens for the pet trade. Inspectors hold qualifications in both medical and veterinary science.

I understand that the breeding records of the designated establishment have been examined by the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals' own professional veterinary staff who consider that they do not reveal evidence of mistreatment.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many companies in the United Kingdom have current licences for experiments on animals. [83182]

Mr. George Howarth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 5 May 1999, Official Report, column 375.

Animal Breeding Establishments

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases have been brought against animal breeding establishments for breaches of breeding regulations during each of the last five years. [83331]

Mr. George Howarth: During the last five years, there have been no breaches of the breeding regulations under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 for which prosecution was necessary.

Animal Procedures Committee

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the powers of the Animal Procedures Committee; what is its current membership; how members are selected; and what plans he has to change the (a) membership and (b) membership structure. [83328]

Mr. George Howarth: The role of the Animal Procedures Committee is advisory, not regulatory or executive. It advises the Secretary of State on matters concerned with the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 and his functions under it. Under sections 20 of that Act, it must advise him on any question connected with the Act which he has referred to and may also offer him advice on any other such question if it chooses to do so.

The current membership of the Committee is: Professor Michael Banner (Chairman), Professor Ronald Anderson, Professor Christopher Atterwill, Mr. Mike Baker, Professor Donald Broom, Professor Grahame Bulfield, Dr. David Clark, Professor Stephen Clark, Professor Robin Dunbar, Professor Paul Flecknell, Mr. John Gregory, Mr. Alan Holland, Dr. Maggy Jennings, Professor Colin Johnston, Dr. Gill Langley, Professor John Martin, Professor Alan McNeilly, Professor Iain Purchase, Professor Genevra Richardson, Dr. Jacqueline Southee, Dr. Anthony Suckling, Professor John Turner and Mr. Les Ward.

Members of the Committee are appointed by the Secretary of State, taking into account the advice of a panel consisting of a senior Home Office official, the Chair of the Committee, and an independent member. The panel seeks nominations from a wide range of scientific, industrial, commercial and animal welfare organisations. The aim is to maintain a breadth of relevant expertise on the Committee. Members of the Committee are appointed as individuals. They do not act as representatives or delegates of any other organisation.

Under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, members of the Committee can serve for a maximum of two terms, each of up to four years. At least two-thirds of the members, other than the Chair, must hold registration as a medical practitioner or veterinary surgeon or hold qualifications or experience in an approved biological subject. The Committee must also include at least one member who is a barrister, solicitor or advocate.

We last made new appointments to the Animal Procedures Committee in December 1998 and have no immediate plans to appoint further new members or to change the membership structure.

Cleveland Police

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the discussion at the meeting of the Cleveland Police Authority on 8 February regarding the 999 call from the house of the former Deputy Chief Constable on 20 January and his application for early retirement. [82687]

Mr. Boateng: Chief Police officers who have completed 30 years' service are entitled to retire at any time, provided they give three months' notice. Where an officer wishes to retire immediately, without giving the required notice, then he must ask the permission of the Police Authority.

Mr. Turnbull, having completed over 30 years' service, was entitled to retire. He was appointed on a fixed term appointment, not a contract, and remained entitled to retire on completion of his pensionable service, even if this was before the end of the fixed term appointment.

The meeting of Cleveland Police Authority on 8 February discussed the request from the then Deputy Chief Constable, Mr. Turnbull, that he be allowed to retire without completing the statutory three months' notice required under Police Regulations.

The police authority considered the application in open session but certain associated matters of a confidential nature were brought to their attention by the Clerk of the Police Authority. The Authority continued the debate in private session in accordance with Section 100 of the Local Government Act 1972.

The Authority returned to open session to make their final decision having determined the issues discussed in private did not affect their consideration of the actual application. The application for early retirement was then approved.

Kosovan Refugees

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his plans to assist Kosovan refugees. [83066]

Mr. Straw: As I told the House in my statement on 5 May 1999, Official Report, columns 943–52, we have always made it clear that the United Kingdom stands ready to receive some thousands of Kosovan refugees. The next two flights are expected to arrive in Scotland at the weekend. We are planning to build up to taking about a thousand people a week within the next few weeks. Evacuations will be based on criteria agreed with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) whose aim is to relieve pressure on the camps and to give priority to the most vulnerable and those with family links in the United Kingdom.

We will be sending the first team of Home Office officials to Macedonia in the next few days to work with the agencies on the ground to speed up the registration of refugees for potential evacuation. Priority will be given to medical cases, the vulnerable to family reunions.

Evacuees arriving in the United Kingdom under the Humanitarian Evacuation Programme will be granted permission to enter in line with close family members already settled in the United Kingdom or given exceptional leave to remain for twelve months to provide for their protection as requested by UNHCR. This status provides a passport into the benefits system and the right to work. Other refugees arriving independently will be eligible to apply for asylum in the usual way.

Fire Safety Commission

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress on the establishment of a Fire Safety Commission. [83245]

Mr. George Howarth: The Fire Brigades Union discussion document, Safety in Partnership, which sets out proposals for a strategic forum to consider fire safety matters will be considered by the Central Fire Brigades Advisory Council at its meeting on 18 May. I have already made it clear that the concepts of developing policies around shared goals, making sure those policies are inclusive, involving those outside government and becoming more forward and outward looking are absolutely right. This approach also ties in with the Better Regulation Task Force's recent review of enforcement, which suggested that fire safety initiatives should be coordinated by a national forum representing government regulators and stakeholders.

Crimestoppers

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he intends taking to increase public confidence in, and awareness of, the Crimestoppers system of reporting suspected criminals; and if he will publish a copy of his reply to the Director of the Crimestoppers Trust in response to the Trust's offer to help any Government initiative to raise the profile of Crimestoppers. [82888]

Mr. Straw: The Government fully recognise the great value of Crimestoppers. Ministers attend Crimestoppers Trust events to support its work as other commitments allow. I have recently written to the Director of Crimestoppers Trust to outline my support for exploring further the idea that the Home Office and Crimestoppers Trust might work together to raise the profile of Crimestoppers Trust to encourage the use of Crimestoppers by members of the public. Officials will shortly be meeting the Director of Crimestoppers to take matters forward.

The text of the letter was:

"Dear Mr. Carter

Thank you for your letter of 2 March outlining your idea that Crimestoppers and the Home Office might work together on a campaign to encourage people, particularly from minority ethnic communities, to report crime anonymously using the Crimestoppers telephone number.

Clearly, we want to do all we can to involve minority ethnic communities in the fight against crime. I know that was the reasoning behind the lunch that I attended last October to promote Crimestoppers to the Asian community. I would be interested in looking in more detail at how such a campaign might work. I have asked officials to contact you to discuss the idea further.

Once again I would like to reiterate my support for the work that Crimestoppers does throughout Britain to help in the fight against crime and I look forward to hearing how this idea develops.

The Home Secretary."

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money was allocated by the Government to fund Crimestoppers in each of the last five financial years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [82887]

Mr. Straw: Crimestoppers has not sought core Government funding and none has been allocated to it by the Government.

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been arrested in each of the last five years for which figures are available as a result of information supplied to Crimestoppers. [82886]

Mr. Straw: I understand from Crimestoppers Trust that the number of people arrested and charged for each of the last five years as a result of information supplied to Crimestoppers was as follows:

Year	Arrested and charged
1994	2,943
1995	3,355
1996	4,347
1997	4,726
1998	5,169

These figures can be broken down into the following categories for 1998:

Crime	Total arrested and charged
Murder	30
Attempted murder	12
Rape	14
Robbery	206
Assault	135
Burglary	396
Firearms	53
Drugs	2,400
Arson	22
Theft	430
Vehicle Crime	505
Sexual Assault	14
Fraud	179
Other crimes	570
Total	5,169

The total number of people arrested and charged as a result of information supplied to Crimestoppers for the period 1 January 1999-end March 1999 is 1,211.

SCOTLAND

Fair Trade Products

Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to introduce fair trade products at (a) meetings, (b) events and (c) catering facilities within his Department. [82864]

Mr. Dewar: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to the Treasury on 5 May 1999, Official Report, column 410.

Written Answers to Questions

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Queen's Counsel

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Attorney-General if he will recommend guidelines to other Government Departments as to (a) when it is appropriate to instruct Queen's Counsel and (b) how much it is appropriate to pay Queen's Counsel; and if he will make a statement. [83548]

The Attorney-General: In civil cases involving Government Departments, recourse would first be had to the four panels of junior counsel maintained by the Attorney-General to undertake Government civil litigation. In appropriate cases, First Treasury Counsel (Common Law) or First Treasury Counsel (Chancery), both of whom are junior counsel, would be instructed. In considering whether to instruct a Queen's Counsel in a particular case, consideration would be given to the importance and sensitivity of the case, the complexity of the law, the weight and complexity of the evidence, and the degree of experience and expertise required. My approval is required before a Queen's Counsel can be instructed. No need is seen, therefore, for further guidance.

As regards purely advisory work, each Department is responsible for its own policy on when to instruct Queen's Counsel but takes into account the same or similar factors as those set out above. All Departments have access to the four panels maintained by the Attorney-General and to the services of Treasury Counsel.

Fees paid to Queen's Counsel are negotiated on a case-by-case basis either by the Treasury Solicitor or by the Department concerned and counsel or counsel's clerk. The appropriate fee will depend on the particular circumstances of the case and is a budgetary matter for the Department concerned.

As regards prosecution work carried out by the Department of Trade and Industry, Her Majesty's Customs and Excise, the Inland Revenue and the Departments of Health and Social Security, the Attorney-General maintains a list of advocates considered suitable to undertake such work. Three of those Departments have Standing Counsel, all junior counsel, who will undertake the heaviest and most serious of prosecutions. Usually, only where Standing Counsel is not available or where the case calls for a particular specialist knowledge would consideration be given to the instruction of a Queen's Counsel. The factors taken into consideration in deciding whether Queen's Counsel should be instructed are as set out above. All Departments also have access to the panel of Treasury Counsel based at the Central Criminal Court, all of whom are junior counsel.

I would also refer my hon. Friend to the replies given on 26 April 1999, Official Report, columns 1–2, and on 28 April 1999, Official Report, columns 189–90.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Attorney-General what plans he has to discuss with the Bar Council guidelines for fees for Queen's Counsel instructed on Government or Government agency business. [83549]

The Attorney-General: I have no plans to discuss this issue with the Bar Council.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Queen's Counsel

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on his Department's policy when (a) conducting legal proceedings and (b) seeking legal advice as to the circumstances in which Queen's Counsel should be instructed; and for each of the last three years (i) on how many occasions his Department instructed Queen's Counsel and (ii) what was the total cost of instructing Queen's Counsel. [81755]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 27 April 1999]: The Department predominantly uses junior Counsel when it is necessary to instruct Counsel to conduct legal proceedings or to provide legal advice. In many important matters, the Department will instruct First Treasury Counsel (Common Law) to represent or advise the Department without the assistance of a Queen's Counsel. In the great majority of other legal proceedings, and for advice on other matters, Counsel will be instructed from one of the Panels of junior Counsel maintained by the Attorney-General.

In a small minority of cases, the Department will seek the approval of the Attorney-General for the instruction of Queen's Counsel. In seeking this approval, the Department will take into account, among other things, the importance and sensitivity of the case, the complexity of the law, and the degree of experience and expertise required.

The Department has instructed seven Queen's Counsel since 1 May 1997, one of them in two different matters. On the information so far available to the Department, the cost of doing so was £21,749.25. Information on Queen's Counsel instructed before 1 May 1997 is available to the Department only at disproportionate cost.

WALES

Deep Mines

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the proportion of deep-mined coal from Wales that is supplied to electricity power stations supplying the National Grid. [82242]

Mr. Hain: This information is commercially confidential, but on the basis of the available information, I would estimate that about a quarter of Welsh deep-mine production was sold to major power producers in 1997.

New Deal

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the New Deal in the Alyn and Deeside constituency. [82729]

Mr. Hain: The latest information indicates that, in the Employment Service's North East Wales Unit of Delivery for the New Deal (which includes the Alyn and Deeside parliamentary constituency), nearly 970 people have joined the New Deal for 18–24s. 270 young people have secured employment (195 of these are in unsubsidised jobs), and over 180 more have entered education, training, or work experience.

I am delighted by the positive start made by the New Deal. I am grateful for the enthusiasm and support of the wide range of organisations which are working in partnership to deliver the New Deal. In particular, I welcome the contribution of employers, over 300 of whom have signed up for the New Deal in North East Wales.

Schools Refurbishment (Flintshire)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much cash he has made available to Flintshire local education authority to refurbish schools; and if he will make a statement. [82730]

Mr. Hain: By the end of the 1999–2000 financial year, Flintshire will have been allocated over £1.45 million as its share of the Additional Capital Funding for Schools initiative.

This is in addition to its normal capital allocations. Flintshire's non-housing Basic Credit Approval for 1999–2000 is £4.582 million. It is for the authority to decide on the level of resources devoted to schools.

Following the transfer of functions this issue will become a matter for the National Assembly.

Objective 2 Status

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he plans to announce the objective 2 status map for Wales; and if he will make a statement. [82733]

Mr. Hain: The UK Government are currently undertaking a consultation exercise to discover from local and regional partners their views on possible eligible areas under objective 2. This would include comments on the geographical areas; the NUTS level; and the criteria that might be used to determine eligibility.

The Government will then propose areas to receive objective 2 status. Any decisions by the UK Government are subject to agreement with the European Commission. It is hoped that an objective 2 map for the UK, including Wales, will be settled by the Autumn.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Eastern Health and Social Services Board

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she has approved the Financial Recovery Plan proposed by the Eastern Health and Social Services Board; and if she will make a statement. [82552]

Mr. McFall: A detailed recovery plan has yet to be submitted to the Health and Social Services Executive by the Eastern Health and Social Services Board, since the final outturn position of the Board for 1998–99 has still to be confirmed. The recovery strategy proposed by the Board suggests that it should recover its deficit over the two year period of 1999–2000 and 2000–01. The Executive will consider, approve and monitor the implementation of a Financial Recovery Plan once the deficit has been accurately established. Current estimates are that the deficit will represent approximately 1 per cent. of the Board's annual expenditure.

HSS Boards and Trusts

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment she has made of the performance of health and social services boards and trusts in Northern Ireland of their statutory duties under the (a) Mental Health (Northern Ireland) Order 1986 and the (b) Children (Northern Ireland) Order 1995. [82545]

Mr. McFall: It is the duty of the Mental Health Commission for Northern Ireland to keep under review the exercise of the powers and the discharge of the duties conferred on the health and social services by the Mental Health (Northern Ireland) Order 1986. Information on the exercise of the powers is contained in the Commission's annual published report. I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library.

Last year, the Department of Health and Social Services carried out a survey of Health and Social Services Trusts with regard to the performance of their statutory duties under the Children (Northern Ireland) Order 1995. This indicated that, in general, trusts were providing personal social services for children in need and their families in accordance with Part IV of the Order. However, there were some deficiencies, notably in the level of a suitable range of residential services. This particular issue is being addressed at present by the Department, in conjunction with the Health and Social Services Boards, within the context of "Children Matter", the Department's Review of Residential Services in Northern Ireland, with the aim of improving the position in both the short term and the long term.

The Department will continue to monitor the performance of trusts in the delivery of services for children in need and their families on an annual basis.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the total debt outstanding in relation to health and personal social services in Northern Ireland for each (a) board and (b) trust; and if she will make a statement. [82551]

Mr. McFall: The total debt outstanding in relation to health and personal social services in Northern Ireland for each (a) board and (b) trust as at 31 March 1998 is disclosed in the table. This information was extracted from 1997–98 Accounts of the HSS bodies.

Gaelic Athletic Association

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total amount of public funding for the Gaelic Athletic Association in each of the past five years; and if she will make a statement. [82550]

Mr. McFall: The total amount of public funding for the Gaelic Athletic Association, and its associated clubs, is as follows:

1998–99: £4,006,868.74

1997–98: £1,691,026.85

1996–97: £2,371,913.35

1995–96: £1,754,917.81

1994–95: £39,187.68.

Mental Health

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the South Eastern Education and Library Board will be represented on the Regional Task Force on Mental Health Promotion; and if she will make a statement. [82743]

Mr. McFall: Representation on the Regional Task Force on Mental Health is not on a Board basis. The education sector is represented by the Department of Education. Representatives from each of the Education and Library Boards were invited to consultation days organised during the months of February and April to consider a mental health promotion strategy for Northern Ireland.

SOCIAL SECURITY

War Pensions Scheme

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to review the administration of the appeals process within the War Pensions Scheme as it applies to former (a) officers and (b) other ranks. [82715]

Angela Eagle: We are committed to reducing the time taken to process all types of War Pension appeals. At the December 1998 meeting of the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions we announced the commissioning of an independent review into the whole decision-making and appeals process. The findings of the consultants who conducted the review were reported to the Department last month and will be announced shortly.

Incapacity Benefit

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy to provide national insurance credits that count towards the new national insurance contribution condition for incapacity benefit proposed in the Welfare Reform and Pensions Bill to working members of households in receipt of working families or disabled persons tax credits whose earnings are below the lower earnings limit; and if he will make a statement. [82705]

Mr. Bayley: There are two contribution conditions for Incapacity Benefit. The first condition requires a minimum number of paid contributions and cannot be satisfied by credits. The provisions in the Welfare Reform and Pensions Bill will change this condition so that the minimum number of contributions will need to have been paid in one of the two tax years before the claim for benefit rather than, as now, in any year.

The second contribution condition can be satisfied by credits. People on Disability Working Allowance (and, in future, Disabled Persons Tax Credit) who have earnings below the Lower Earnings Limit are given credits which count towards the second contribution condition. Family Credit (and, in future, Working Families Tax Credit) do not provide credits of this kind. The second contribution condition is unaffected by the provisions in the Bill.

Benefit Arrears

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the constituent whose name has been supplied to him will be paid the benefits awarded to him by a tribunal in August 1998, backdated to 1974. [82880]

Mr. Bayley: An initial payment of arrears was issued on 4 May 1999. Arrears from the beginning of the award will now be calculated and issued without undue delay.

PRIME MINISTER

Bilderberg Group

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Prime Minister which (a) Ministers and (b) officials will attend the Bilderberg Group meeting in Portugal in June; and if he will make a statement. [81790]

The Prime Minister: I am told that the Bilderberg Group usually invites a number of people from government, politics, industry, finance and education from a wide range of countries to its annual Conference. There is no formal representation by the UK Government.

Class Sizes

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer to the right hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown) of 28 April 1999, Official Report, column 336, if he will make a statement on the changes there have been in average school class sizes for children over the age of seven years since 1 May 1997. [83095]

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer to the right hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown) of 28 April 1999, Official Report, column 336, concerning class sizes, what has been the change in the average size of school classes in the past two years. [83233]

The Prime Minister: The Government's manifesto pledge is to reduce the size of infant classes to 30 or below. The evidence of Ofsted and others is that class size matters most in the early years when children are learning the basics. As a result of an investment of £67 million there were some 130,000 fewer infants in classes of over 30 in January this year than in January 1998. And we have announced that from September this year we expect a further reduction of 150,000 meaning that the number of infants in classes over thirty will be 200,000 compared to 485,000 in January 1998. Between January 1998 and January 1999:

The average size of primary classes fell overall from 27.8 pupils to 27.6, the first fall for 10 years;

the average size of Key Stage 2 classes remained steady (28.3 in 1998, 28.4 in 1999) as did the average size of secondary classes (21.9 in 1998, 22.0 in 1999); average size of classes in all maintained primary and secondary schools fell for the first time in 5 years from 24.9 in January 1998 to 24.8 in January 1999.

European Commission

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his meeting with Mr. Romani Prodi on 14 April; what subjects were discussed; what decisions were reached; and if he will place the plans for European Commission reform submitted by Mr. Prodi to that meeting in the Library. [83541]

The Prime Minister: Heads of State and Government met Mr. Prodi on 14 April to discuss Commission reform. As the meeting was informal, no formal papers were submitted to it and there were no formal conclusions. However, Heads did agree to discuss the reform process with Mr. Prodi again at the Cologne European Council in June. I will, of course, make a statement to the House after that Council, and the conclusions and other relevant documents will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Prodi's formal statements on reform have consistently shown that he supports a Commission which is more efficient, transparent and accountable. The UK fully supports these objectives.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister when he plans to announce his nominations for the two United Kingdom EU Commissioners ; and when he intends to discuss potential candidates with the President-nominate. [83475]

The Prime Minister: In accordance with the Amsterdam Treaty, now that Mr. Prodi's nomination as Commission President has been approved by the European Parliament, member states will begin to consult with him on nomination of the other Commissioners. The two nominees from the United Kingdom will be announced as soon as this consultation has been completed.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Amateur Swimming

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what action the Government have taken to promote amateur swimming. [82899]

Mr. Banks: This Government place great importance on amateur swimming, both as an elite sport and as a form of exercise which should be available to all. That is why swimming is a statutory element of the primary National Curriculum, giving all young people the opportunity to learn to enjoy it. Sport England has a facilities strategy in place, covering both excellence and recreational swimming; the sport has received £280,000 exchequer funding for 1999–2000; and has been awarded £184 million Lottery funding to date, which is more than for any other single sport. In addition, between January and September of this year, £2 million of Lottery funds have been allocated to top individual British swimmers under the World Class Performance Programme, and £750,000 towards excellence in disabled swimming, which is laying the foundations for future British success.

Royal Parks Agency

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what targets he has set for the Royal Parks Agency. [83812]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The following targets have been set for the Royal Parks Agency for 1999–2000:

Financial and Efficiency

To increase income by 10 per cent. from the 1998–99 level, from all sources except recharges and VAT refunds.

Stay within the flat running costs allocation of £8.235 million.

Keep Royal Parks Constabulary hourly costs of a police constable on duty down to 1998–99 levels in real terms.

Visitor satisfaction

Achieve an overall quality rating of 86 per cent. from visitors to the parks, compared to a rating of 84 per cent. in 1998–99. The minimum rating for any one park should be no lower than 80 per cent.

Fabric

Achieve an average rating from visitors of at least 85 per cent. on cleanliness in the parks, compared with a rating of 83 per cent. in 1998–99. The minimum rating for a park should be no lower than 75 per cent.

Maintain an average score of at least 85 per cent. for soft landscape presentation, compared with a score of 84 per cent. in 1998–99. The minimum score for a park should be no lower than 80 per cent.

Complete the first phase of refurbishment works of White Lodge in Bushy Park by the end of 1999–2000, with a view to ensuring the building is removed from English Heritage's "Buildings at Risk" register by 2001.

I shall be reviewing progress against these targets and against the Agency's objectives at my six months review of the Agency's Funding Agreement.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Jarinabanu Fakir Mohmed Khalifa

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the explanatory statement relating to Jarinabanu Fakir Mohmed Khalifa, Bombay reference R/98/3813 will be forwarded. [82755]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 30 April 1999]: The Explanatory Statement relating to Jarinabanu Fakir Mohmed Khalifa was sent to the Appeals Registry at the Home Office on 19 January.

Burma

Mr. Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Burmese Government on the persecution of the Chin tribe. [83143]

Mr. Fatchett: We continue to monitor carefully the situation of ethnic minorities in Burma. Our Ambassador visited Chin State in early March. Our Embassy in Rangoon regularly raise the plight of ethnic minorities in Burma directly with the authorities, most recently on 5 May. We also supported the UN Commission on Human Rights resolution on Burma, adopted on 23 April, which deplored the human rights violations of ethnic minorities and called on the regime to stop such violations.

Zimbabwe High Commission

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) employees and (b) diplomats accredited to the Zimbabwe High Commission are entitled to diplomatic immunity. [83552]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Zimbabwe High Commission employs 38 staff. Of these, 15 are diplomats and entitled to diplomatic immunity.

Diplomatic Immunity

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he proposes to take in relation to Mr. X., who has claimed diplomatic immunity in relation to an alleged serious assault on Mr. Y., details of the incident and the identities of Mr. X. and Mr. Y. having been supplied by letter to his Department. [83550]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: An official from this Department wrote to the Acting Head of the relevant diplomatic mission on 4 May, requesting information on a number of issues. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Baroness Symons, will reply to my hon. Friend's letter as soon as possible.

Bosnia and Herzegovina

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people were displaced from their homes in Bosnia and Herzegovina during the conflict there; and how many have since returned. [83491]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: UNHCR estimate that, at the time of the Dayton Peace Agreement (December 1995), there were more than 525,000 refugees in the region, along with 1.2 million internally-displaced persons (IDPs). Since Dayton, nearly 550,000 of the two million refugees and IDPs have returned to their homes in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Croatia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what co-operation is being afforded NATO in its operation against Yugoslavia by Croatia. [83493]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Government of Croatia have allowed NATO full use of their airspace for operations against the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and agreed to NATO's request to cut the Croatia/FRY oil pipeline.

Turkey

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what role is being played by Turkey in NATO's operations in Yugoslavia. [83489]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: NATO operates by consensus. Like all Allies, Turkey takes part fully in the Alliance decision-making process.

Turkey's military contribution to NATO operations in the FRY currently comprises 11 F-16 fighter aircraft in addition to transport aircraft and a frigate. It also has forces stationed in Albania with NATO's humanitarian support operations.

GCHQ

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the future location of GCHQ. [83810]

Mr. Robin Cook: I have agreed with Treasury colleagues that the project overall offers good value for the taxpayer, and I have authorised the Director of GCHQ to continue to negotiate with GSL through to contract signature. I have selected the current GCHQ site at Benhall in Cheltenham as the location for the new GCHQ building, subject to final agreement on a number of outstanding matters. I made the decision having regard to the Government's sustainable transport policies. I am very pleased that the long-standing association between GCHQ and Cheltenham is to be maintained.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) by what method it is his practice to inform Parliament of changes in membership of the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment; [81388]

(2) by what method he announced the change in membership of the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment; [81407]

(3) when he will announce the new members of the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment. [81406]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 19 April 1999]: I announced my intention to review the membership and remit of the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment (ACRE) in my statement to the House of Lords on 21 October 1998. The term of office of the members of ACRE appointed in June 1996 ends on 17 June 1999 and a statement on the changes in membership will be made in due course.

Genetically Modified Crops (Bees)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the maximum distance he assumes bees can travel when setting isolation distances for genetically modified trial crops. [81408]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 20 April 1999]: There is no maximum distance to which it can be guaranteed that bees will travel. But, in general, bee foraging behaviour is well understood and one member of ACRE is an expert on bees and their behaviour. When foraging a crop with high flower density, a bee may fly for some metres, possibly hundreds of metres, to a particular area of the crop. ACRE always take account of pollen dispersal by bees and its likely consequences. Based on the type of GM plant, how it has been modified and the circumstances of the proposed release, it may be judged necessary to minimise the potential for cross-pollination of neighbouring sexually compatible crops or wild relatives by the GM plants. The precautions taken to prevent or reduce cross-pollination may include the removal of flowers or the setting of specific isolation distances between GM and non-GM plants or borders of non-GM plants around the plots of GM plants. Where isolation distances are set, these are not intended to prevent pollen spread but to reduce pollen spread as far as is practically possible.

Emissions Trading Scheme

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will set out the steps and timescale the Government are working to in developing a national emissions trading scheme; and if he will make a statement. [82641]

Mr. Meacher: The Government fully recognise the potential benefits of a national carbon emissions trading scheme, particularly in allowing business to deliver greenhouse gas reductions as cost effectively as possible, and in preparing business for any international emissions trading scheme established under the Kyoto Protocol. We are therefore taking forward the recommendation made by Lord Marshall in his report on "Economic Instruments and the Business Use of Energy", that the Government should consider a pilot trading scheme.

Development of an effective pilot trading scheme must be business-led, but with the active involvement of, and a clear steer from Government. We are therefore working with the CBI and ACBE (the Advisory Committee on Business and the Environment) to develop the pilot scheme. The next step is for the CBI and ACBE to call a meeting of interested Chief Executives and senior government officials, to commit to a timetable and resources for developing the pilot. The intention is for this meeting to take place in late June or early July, subject to availability.

Wyre Piddle (Road Accident)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will commission an investigation into the circumstances of the road traffic accident that occurred in Wyre Piddle on 28 April in order to inform his consideration of an application from Worcestershire County Council for funding for a bypass of the village. [83004]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The investigation of road traffic accidents is a matter for the police. It will be for Worcestershire County Council to put forward any bid for funding of a bypass as part of their Local Transport Plan. The County Council will need to appraise any major scheme using the New Approach to Appraisal, of which safety is a major element. We will consider that appraisal as part of our consideration of the Local Transport Plan.

A38 Bridge (Almondsbury)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 27 April 1999, Official Report, column 90, if the work undertaken in 1998 on the A38 bridge over the M4 at Almondsbury was certified as meeting the requirements of the Highways Agency's specification, including the testing of materials. [82901]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Part of the works carried out on the A38 bridge over the M4 at Almondsbury in 1998 did not meet the required specification and they were rejected by the site supervisory staff appointed by the Highways Agency. The contractors are replacing the sub standard work at their own cost.

Lamp Standards

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what data he has collated on incidents of complete failure in service of lamp standards over the past three years. [83180]

Ms Glenda Jackson: There are no comprehensive central data collected on incidents where lamp standards have failed. Most are on local roads for which local highway authorities are responsible and maintenance details are not available centrally. The Highways Agency, who are responsible for trunk roads and motorways, keep a record of those reported by their Area Agents and, although there is no requirement, some on local authority roads. In the last three years, there have been three incidents recorded on motorway and trunk roads.

Empty Dwellings

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each local authority in England the number and percentage of (a) public and (b) private sector dwellings which are empty. [83236]

Mr. Raynsford: I have placed the information requested in the Library. This table presents the latest available data on the number and proportion of vacant dwellings owned by local authorities, Registered Social Landlords (RSLs), 'Other Public Sector organisations' and the rest of the private sector for local authority districts in England. The figures relate to 1 April 1998 and have been provided by local authorities on their HIP returns, except for those for RSLs which relate to 31 March 1998 and are based on information supplied by the Housing Corporation. Estimated totals that include allowances for missing or incomplete returns are provided for England.

Green Ministers Committee

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many times the Green Ministers Committee has met since May 1997; and if he will place in the Library (a) the agenda and minutes of each of the meetings and (b) a list of significant decisions and action plans made at each meeting. [83156]

Mr. Meacher: The Green Ministers Committee has met five times since May 1997.

On (a), the minutes and agenda are not made public, but the House is advised of what happened at each meeting. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 23 March 1999, Official Report, column 248, with regard to the outcome of the Committee's most recent meeting on 22 March 1999.

On (b), the Committee will be reporting on its actions and plans in its first published report this summer, a copy of which will be placed in the House Library.

Drink-drive Initiatives

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what new measures he proposes to introduce to achieve further reductions in the number of drink-drive casualties. [83171]

Dr. Reid: We have consulted on a package of measures to combat drinking and driving. Decisions on drink-drive measures will be incorporated within the road safety strategy which we will publish this year.

Motorway Lighting

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the effect of providing lighting on the whole motorway system on the number of recorded accidents. [82939]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 4 May 1999]: No such estimate has been made.

Departmental Advice Note, TA 49/86 (Appraisal of New and Replacement Lighting on Trunk Roads and Motorways) provides guidance on the assessment method for the provision of road lighting. Lighting is normally provided on dual four-lane motorways. On dual three-lane motorways and below, an assessment is made following the guidelines. This includes a full assessment of the safety and environmental considerations.

National Federation of Roofing Contractors

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what plans he has to meet the National Federation of Roofing Contractors; [83144]

(2) if he will make an assessment of the National Federation of Roofing Contractors' (a) insurance-backed guarantee scheme and (b) Roofsafe Plus Latent Defect Scheme; and if he will make a statement. [83145]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) on 22 February 1999, Official Report, columns 54–55. I will be meeting representatives of the National Federation of Roofing Contractors later this month.

Bridges

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many bridges his Department believes will need to be strengthened by local authorities as a consequence of the decision to allow 40 tonne lorries on domestic journeys access to the road network. [82883]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 5 May 1999]: Substantial progress has been made in the assessment and strengthening programme. The latest figures available to DETR show that, of 41,602 local authority structures, 35,647 have been assessed, with over 30,000 being of adequate standard, and 3,250 local road bridges have been strengthened.

Severn Rail Tunnel

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will ask the Rail Regulator to launch an investigation into the circumstances which led the Health and Safety Executive to implement speed restrictions in the Severn Rail Tunnel. [83373]

Ms Glenda Jackson: On 29 April—the same day that the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) imposed a 20 mph speed restriction on trains using the Severn Tunnel—the Rail Regulator called for an urgent report from Railtrack explaining why its maintenance procedures had not been sufficient to avoid the enforcement action taken by the HSE, and the plans it had for putting the matter right. Railtrack submitted that report on 4 May, and the Rail Regulator is currently considering it.

Jubilee Line Extension

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 30 April 1999, Official Report, column 292, concerning the opening of the Stratford to North Greenwich phase of the Jubilee Line extension, if he will define late Spring. [83380]

Dr. Reid: The 8th edition of the Concise Oxford Dictionary states that, in the northern hemisphere, Spring is from March to May. So late Spring by most definitions will be towards the end of this period.

TREASURY

Government Investments

Mr. Caplin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Government's investments. [83724]

Ms Hewitt: Today we are announcing a restructuring of the UK's reserve holdings to achieve a better balance in the portfolio by increasing the proportion held in currency. This will involve a programme of auctions of gold from the Exchange Equalisation Account, which holds the UK's official reserves of foreign currency and gold, with the proceeds being invested instead in foreign currency assets and retained in the reserves.

The Treasury intends to sell 125 tonnes of gold, 3 per cent. of the total reserves, during 1999–2000, with the Bank of England conducting five auctions on the Treasury's behalf. Auctions will be held every other month starting in July.

Kosovo

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the budgets from which the extra funding for aid to the Kosovan refugees is being taken. [83562]

Mr. Milburn: The costs of helping refugees in the area have been met to date from the budgets of the Department for International Development and Ministry of Defence, with some contribution from the central reserve.

DEFENCE

Kosovo

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the estimated weekly cost to the British Government of military operations in connection with Kosovo. [81621]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 21 April 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, South (Mr. Simpson) on 15 April 1999, Official Report, columns 323–24. This information will be updated in due course. However, as costs of operations vary from week to week, the provision of a weekly figure would be misleading.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the additional cost of the conflict in Yugoslavia. [81964]

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the cost of the conflict with Yugoslavia to his Department; and if he will make a statement. [81970]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 26 April 1999]: I refer to the answer I gave to the hon. Gentleman and my hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, South (Mr. Simpson) on 15 April 1999, Official Report, columns 323–24. This information will be updated in due course.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the TA is (i) deployed and (ii) warned to deploy for operations in the Balkans. [81664]

Mr. George Robertson [pursuant to his reply, 22 April 1999, c. 633]: I regret that the figure of 420 I gave of the Territorial Army at the time deployed to the Balkans was incorrect. The correct figure should have been 317, representing some 0.63 per cent. of the overall TA. It is likely that further TA troops will be deployed.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the chemical weapons capability maintained by Yugoslavia. [83290]

Mr. George Robertson: The former Yugoslavia did have an offensive chemical warfare programme, which included small stocks of chemical weapons. Serbia inherited some elements of this in 1992, but the exact status of this programme is unknown. It is assessed that the current threat to our forces from chemical warfare is low.

SFOR

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current strength of SFOR in Bosnia-Herzegovina; and what is the total United Kingdom contribution. [83487]

Mr. George Robertson: The current strength of SFOR, deployed in Bosnia and Croatia, is some 32,000, of which the British contribution is some 4,500.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Brussels Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Brussels on 19 and 20 April; and if he will make a statement. [81883]

Mr. Nick Brown: The Agriculture Council scheduled for 19–20 April was cancelled. The next Agriculture Council will be on 17–18 May.

Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish all the advice which he has received from the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes since 1 May 1997. [72234]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 22 February 1999]: All advice received between May and December 1997 is contained in the Committee's Annual Report for 1997, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. Advice received since then will be included in the Committee's 1998 Annual Report which is currently being written. I have now deposited a copy of this advice in the Library of the House.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Combined Heat and Power Generation

Mr. Caplin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will announce his decision on Scottish and Southern Energy plc's notification to build a combined heat and power generation station at the Kimberly-Clark paper mill, Barrow-in-Furness. [83809]

Mr. Battle: I have today granted clearance under Section 14 of the Energy Act 1976 in response to Scottish and Southern Energy plc's notification to build a 13 MW gas-fired combined heat and power station at the Kimberly-Clark paper mill in Barrow-in-Furness. The decision has been taken in accordance with the policy set out in the White Paper entitled "Conclusions of the Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation and Government response to fourth and fifth Reports of the Trade and Industry Committee" (Cm 4071)

Copies of the Press Notice and section 14 clearance are being placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Geraint Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will announce his decision on Kronospan Ltd.'s notification to build a combined heat and power generation station at their fibreboard factory at Chirk, Wrexham. [83811]

Mr. Battle: I have today granted clearance under Section 14 of the Energy Act 1976 to Kronospan Ltd.'s notification to double the size of its existing gas-fired combined heat and power station at Chirk, Wrexham to 12.4 MW. The decision has been taken in accordance with the policy set out in the White Paper entitled "Conclusions of the Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation and Government response to fourth and fifth Reports of the Trade and Industry Committee" (Cm 4071).

Decisions on other applications under consideration will be announced in due course. Copies of the Press Notice and the clearance letter are being placed in the Library of the House.

Lingerie

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the percentage and value of lingerie sold in the United Kingdom which was manufactured in the United Kingdom in each year since 1990. [83235]

Mr. Battle: Details of UK retail sales of lingerie are not available from official statistics. However, UK manufacturers' sales of and trade in women's and girls' underwear are detailed in The Office for National Statistics publication "Product Sales and Trade—PRQ11", copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration Advisers

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average fee paid, at present, by those making use of the services of immigration advisers. [82540]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The immigration advice market is unregulated and so we have little information about the average fee paid by those making use of the services of immigration advisers. Members of Parliament sometimes complain that constituents have paid hundreds or thousands of pounds for advice.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many immigration advisers are currently operating in England and Wales. [82534]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Immigration advice is largely unregulated and so it is difficult to estimate the number of immigration advisers operating in England and Wales. The Immigration Law Practitioners Association has 830 members and there may be a further 200 individuals and companies offering immigration advice for reward. We know that significant numbers of people in the voluntary sector are also providing immigration advice.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of immigration advisers in England and Wales operating (a) illegally and (b) unscrupulously. [82541]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: As immigration advice is currently unregulated it is not possible to estimate how many immigration advisers in England and Wales are at any one time behaving illegally. Unscrupulous behaviour normally becomes apparent only after a complaint is made by a client. Clients are often vulnerable people reluctant to complain. Members of Parliament regularly write to me complaining that their constituents have been incompetently or unscrupulously advised.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many immigration advisers have (a) had proceedings instituted against them for, and (b) been convicted of, illegal activity in each of the last five years. [82535]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: This is an unregulated market where incompetence and unscrupulous behaviour is largely unmonitored. The information that is available in relation to proceedings for offences under immigration law is shown in the table:

	Number of immigration advisers who have had proceedings instituted against them	Number of immigration advisers who have been convicted
1995	[1]—	2
1996	[1]—	1
1997	[1]—	1
1998	[1]—	3
1999 (to date)	1	1

[1] No information available

Schengen Agreement

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he plans to request United Kingdom participation in aspects of the Schengen Agreement under Article 4 of the Protocol upon entry into force of the Amsterdam Treaty. [83483]

Kate Hoey: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary to the right hon. Member for Penrith and The Border (Mr. Maclean), on 12 March 1999, Official Report, columns 380–82. Following that statement, it is intended to submit a written application shortly, under the terms of Article 4 of the Protocol integrating the Schengen acquis into the framework of the European Union. Parliament will be informed of our application.

Proxy Voting

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received in the last 12 months in favour of a review of proxy voting. [83466]

Mr. George Howarth: Six letters about proxy voting procedures have been received in the last 12 months though none of them asked specifically for a review. The Home Office Working Party on Electoral Procedures which I chair is examining absent voting generally, along with other electoral issues, and is looking at proxy voting as part of this process.

Criminal Records Bureau

Mr. White: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated cost of the Criminal Records Bureau providing free criminal records checks for all voluntary organisations whose primary work is with children. [83546]

Mr. Boateng: It is intended that all applicants will be required to pay for certificates from the Criminal Records Bureau. It is difficult to estimate what the cost of free certificates would be to the Bureau, as it is not known how many volunteers would be required to apply for certificates, but the cost is potentially enormous. If checks were provided only to new volunteers seeking the higher levels of checks the cost could exceed £10 million a year. If checks were extended to all existing volunteers the cost could be between £40-£200 million. The cost of the fees for certificates from the Bureau will be kept to the minimum necessary to recoup costs.

Leicestershire LEA (Ethnic Minority Grants)

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much section 11 funding was received by Leicestershire Local Education Authority in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; what plans he has for the future of Section 11 funding in the next financial year for Leicestershire Local Education Authority; and if he will make a statement. [83166]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The table shows the section 11 budget allocation to Leicestershire Local Education Authority in relation to each of the years shown:

Year	£
1996–97	2,480,992
1997–98	402,117
1998–99	412,571

Note:
Since 1 April 1997, as a result of local government reorganisation, the City of Leicester has had responsibility for section 11 grant provision within its own boundaries, leaving Leicestershire Local Education Authority with a reduced level of financial provision to cover the rest of the county.

Responsibility for funding such work was transferred, with effect from 1 April 1999, to the Department for Education and Employment (DfEE) under a new Ethnic Minority Achievement Grant. Leicestershire has been notified by the DfEE that its allocation in respect of 1999–2000 under the new grant programme is £412,571. The DfEE will be consulting local education authorities about arrangements for setting allocations in relation to 2000–01 and subsequent years.

Public Entertainment Licences

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend the regulation known as the two-in-the-bar rule for public entertainment licences; and if he will make a statement. [83295]

Mr. George Howarth: Under section 182 of the Licensing Act 1964, a public entertainment licence is not required for live music by up to two performers in any premises where a justices' licence authorising the sale of alcohol is in force. We have no immediate plans to bring forward amendments to this provision; but we are looking at the public entertainment licensing arrangements generally, to see whether any changes are needed.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average waiting time for the determination of an asylum application in (a) the most recent year for which figures are available and (b) the two most recent years. [83017]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Hammersmith and Fulham (Mr. Coleman) on 26 January 1999, Official Report, column 197, which gives the information requested.

Sexual Offenders

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people charged with a serious sexual offence were released on bail in the year to 31 March (a) 1998 and (b) 1999. [82912]

Mr. Boateng: In 1997, 2,600 people charged with sexual offences were on bail when committed for trial at the Crown Court. Some sexual offences cover a broad spectrum of behaviour but committal to the Crown Court indicates that these were the more serious cases including, for example, the vast majority of rape cases. Information for 1998 will become available in the summer.

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Immigration and Nationality Directorate will return the passports of Miss Inderlyn Irano and Benjamin William Fisher, the partner and son of Mr. A. Fisher, of Wigston, Leicestershire. [83094]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have asked for an investigation of this. The file suggests that the passports have been refused and we are asking the Post Office for a report, which will take two weeks. I will write to the hon. and learned Member.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 330

SESSION 1998–99

26th April—7th May 1999

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index to the daily parts and weekly Hansard is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Indexing Service (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes, and cannot, therefore, be used in conjunction with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There will, however, be headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one will find not only Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc., under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Contributions by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker and deputies'. Significant rulings and statements are indicated by the sub-heading 'Rulings and statements'.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Com = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, res = resolution, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
